WARFARE IS HOTTER ON AMERICAN FRONT

ARTILLERY WORK IS BECOMING A LIVELY TASK FOR SAMMIES

Further Casualties Are Reported From Sector Held by Americans and Additional Men Have Died.

GERMAN SHELL WRECKS AMERICAN GUN

With the American Army in France, Friday, Nov. 16.—(By the Associated Press.)—The artillery fighting in the sector held by American troops has become even more lively and there have been further casualties, shrapnel wounding some men in the trenches. An enemy shell hit an American gun today and caused casualties. Some of the men wounded in the last two days have died.

The American batteries have been firing rapidly in return. The visibility is becoming better and it is considered certain that more damage and casualties have been caused in the German lines than the Germans have inflicted on the Americans. Patrolling continued actively last night.

The American troops witnessed their their first encounter. Three enemy airplaines apepared overhead. Soon all of them except one fled at the approach of five French machines. One of the French outmaneuvered this German and "git on his tail" the German aviator then bolted. The rattle of machine guns finally died away as the two airplanes disappeared to the west.

The French general commanding the sector has mentioned in the dispatches fifteen American officers and soldiers including three who were killed for excellent military qualities andfor bravery displayed in the recent trench raid.

A note accompanying the citations says that between 8,000 and 10,000 shells were used in the attack, which had been in preparation for three months, down to the finest details. The results obtained by the enemy were very small, he having been unable to penetrate more than the first line trenches because of the resistance of the American soldiers with rifle and pistol fire and hand grenades. The enemy had to content himself, the citation continues, with carrying off a few prisoners.

The general in the order mentions the —— company commanded by Lieut. (name deleted by censor) as follows: "On the night of Nov 2-3 this company, which was in the lines for the first time, met an extremely violent bombardment despite which it seized arms and offered such stubborn resistance that the enemy, though numerically superior, was obliged to retire."

The general specially cited in the order of the day, corporal, James Gresham and privates, Merle D. Hay and Thomas F. E. Wright, "who died bravely in hand to hand fighting with the enemy, who had penetrated the first line."

The others cited, "who showed excellent military qualities" are second lieutenants, M. C. Laughlin, R. O. Ratterson and E. A. Erickson; sergeant, John Arrowwood; corporals, David M. Knowles and Homer Givens; privates, Charles Massa, Wm. B. Thomas, George Hurd, Boyce Wade, Robert Winkler and John J. Jarvis.

TIRED OF MESS OF RIVAL RADICALS

London, Nov. 17.—Nowhere throughout a journey from the Caucasus to Petrograd did a correspondent of the Daily Telegraph hear a word of sympathy for Premier Kerensky. The educated passengers he met, he says in a dispatch sent from Petrograd on Monday, were infuriated at Kerensky's laxity in permitting the Bolsheviki agitation and soldiers were indignant that the premier was unable to maintain

HOW VILLA WORKED TO GET REVOLT IN MOTION IS RELATED

Presidio, Texas, Nov. 17.—Details of the 4,500 mile trip which Francisco Villa made recently through a dozen Mexican states to discuss with his chiefs plans for launching a new revolution, were related today by Colonel Miguel Trillo, Villa's secretary who came to the Mexican side of the Rio Grande.

Disguised as a wealthy rancher, with a long black beard, a charros suit and big sombrero, Villa visited Durango, Zacatecas, Jalisco, Morelos, Northern Vera Cruz, Coahuila, Michoacanan and other states, conferring with the various revolutionary chieftains and discussing plans for the popolitical revolution throughout the republic.

"Villa was known as 'Captain' to his officers, who accompanied him as a body guard," Trillo said. "Among the chiefs Villa met on this three months' trip were Maquel Palz in Northern Vera Cruz and the Tampico district; Roberto Sechudo, in Vera Cruz; Sedilla brothers, in San Luis Potosi; Zapata, in Morelos; Reyna, in Sonora, and Eugeno Aguilar, in the south.

"Returning from this trip on October 11 Villa rejoined his column at Canutilla, Durango, and the advance to the border here started. Marching at night and hiding in the daytime, the troops reached Ojinaga after six weeks' marching. A part of the time the Villa command carried skull and cross bones flags of General Murguias' death head brigade to disguise the identity of his men. The capture of Ojinaga was the start of the big campaign."

PROTECTS MEN OF CLASS ONE

NO WAY TO CALL UP SUCH OUT OF TURN

Dependents Must Waive the Claim They Have on Registrant.

Washington, Nov. 17.—Men of draft age with dependent relatives are placed in a more secure position under the new regulations to govern future operations of the active service law made public today by Provost Marshal General Crowder.

While deferred classification under the new plan, which replaces all discharge or exemption certificates, may be revoked when granted for any other cause, there is no way in which men with dependents can be called up for service out of their turn. Added protection for dependents is secured by the requirement in cases where the registrant seeks to waive his deferred classification status that waivers also must be obtained from those dependent upon him before he can be taken into the military service.

Closes Ranks to Many.

The effect of the regulations is to close the ranks of the army, navy or marine corps absolutely to men between 21 and 31 years of age where they have dependents upon them who would suffer if they went to the front. Local boards are constituted judges of all such cases. For the first time also a way is provided in which men physically unfitted for front line duty in the army and yet able to do some part of the work of a soldier may be called for limited military service behind the lines. Partial physical exemptions may be granted by local boards to create this new classification.

Where registrants are away from home districts or in other circumstances application to the local board for a questionaire is all that is required.

Changes in Regulations.

Among the most noteworthy changes in the regulations are the following:

Local boards are granted virtually judiciary powers to summon witnesses and obtain information. Local police will see that any witness responds.

A definite program of correspondence between the boards, state officials and the provost marshal general's office is provided to keep this aspect of the business decentralized and moving smoothly.

The entire postoffice machinery is drafted to aid local boards in tracing registrants and right-of-way for mail connected with draft proceedings is required.

Local boards are authorized to grant partial exemption for partial physical disability, reserving the men in this status for "special and limited military service."

Highly Skilled Special Classes.

Authority is granted to form special classes of men highly skilled in particular trades or professions and summon them under this special heading regardless of their grouping in the general classification plan. The secretary of war may revoke original classification, except that no man granted deferred classification because of dependents may be advanced in any way or called for service out of his regular order; when deferred classication has been granted for industrial or agricultural reasons a specially qualified registrant may be summoned out of his turn.

Under the new regulations, district boards become purely appellate bodies before which can be heard only evidence originating before the local board. For additional facts the case must be returned to the local board.

It is made plain that men already held by local boards for service will continue to be sent forward as needed until such time as the new class 1 in each district is sufficiently organized

GENERAL STRIKE IS IN PROGRESS AMONG THE FINNS

Helsingfors, Finland, Friday, Nov. 16.—A general strike of all workmen, including those on the railways, is in progress and business life is at a standstill, except for the light and water plants and the hospitals.

TWO TURN JOB DOWN

BOTH MEYER AND SCHEUMANN DECLINE

Mayor-elect W. Sherman Cutshall seems to be having some difficulty in finding a comptroller. Whoever is selected will be third choice as the position some days ago was offered to Edward F. Scheuman, 2429 Calhoun street, assistant cashier of the First and Hamilton National bank, and later to Otto C. Meyer, 117 East Suttenfield street, a clerk for the Pennsylvania company. Both turned the job down with thanks.

"The position of comptroller was offered to me some days ago by Mr. Cutshall," Mr. Meyer stated Saturday, "but I declined it. I have no idea who Mr. Cutshall will name."

Mr. Cutshall refused to announce his appointment when asked by a Sentinel reporter Saturday. He said that he may do so within a few days. He was asked regarding the probability of the appointment of Robert B. Hanna, who is being prominently mentioned.

"There is nothing to that report," Mr. Cutshall replied. "Mr. Hanna has not asked for an appointment and has not talked with me regarding his own or anybody else's appointment. Bob has a good job and he's not an applicant."

Must Be Fuelber.

If neither Messrs. Scheumann, Meyer or Hanna are to receive the plum then it must be Anselm Fuelber. Mr. Fuelber was asked if he expected to be named and he replied that he did not.

"If I am to be appointed comptroller I know nothing of it," declared Mr. Fuelber. "I have asked for no appointment and have talked with Mr. Cutshall but once or twice since the election and then he simply expressed his appreciation for the part I had taken in the election."

Who Will Be Chief?

Mr. Cutshall stated Saturday that the appointment of a chief of police will be left entirely with the board of safety. Three men are being prominently mentioned for this job—Daniel W. Kintz, Dayton F. Abbott and Gus Borgman. It is reasonably certain that one of these three men will be given the appointment and it is also reasonably certain that whoever Mr. Cutshall suggests the board of safety will name. There is also a persistent rumor that the present chief, Charles Lenz, may be retained.

New Appointees.

Announcement was made Friday by the newly elected mayor of the appointment of a city attorney and members of the board of public works, board of public safety and board of public health. There is little doubt but that Frank M. Randall will be retained as city engineer, which position he has held under both republican and democratic mayors for a number of years.

City attorney—Creighton H. Williams.

Members of the board of public safety—B. F. Sarver, foreman of the Pennsylvania boiler shop, 234 East Woodland avenue, chairman; J. B.

LIBERTY BONDS HAVE SINGULAR MARKET COURSE

New York, Liberty bonds moved in a perplexing manner on the stock exchange today, the 4's declining in the first hour to the new low record of 98.18, a depreciation of almost 2 per cent, while the 3½'s advanced from yesterday's final quotations of 99 to 99.22.

Various reasons are given by bond dealers in explanation of this movement. The more popular theory is that the 3½'s being tax exempt are most favored by persons of wealth, while the 4's are subject to a super tax. It is believed also that many subscribers to the 4 per cents found themselves unable to take up their allotment because of existing conditions in the stock market and these subscriptions are now being liquidated.

PRESS BACK INVADERS

Italians Holding Their New Line and Chasing Foe to Other Side.

DEFENSE OF PIAVE RIVER IS NOTABLE

Rome, Nov. 17.—The German troops which forced a crossing of the Piave riven at Zenson are being pressed back steadily by the Italians, it is announced officially. In other sectors nearly 1,000 prisoners have been taken.

Two more crossings of the Piave were effected yesterday by the Germans. At Follina the German troops were destroyed or captured.

At Fagare they were driven back to the embankment and their return was hindered by the Italian artillery.

More than six hundred prisoners were taken at Fagare on the Piave at Zenson and three hundred were captured at Follina on the northern front near the upper Piave.

BERLIN OFFICIAL REPORT.

Berlin, Nov. 17.—(Via London.)—Austro-German troops invading the northern province of Italy yesterday stormed Meonte Prsassolan, between the Brenta and Piave rivers, says the official statement issued today by the German general staff. Eight hundred Italians were taken prisoner.

OPERATIONS ON FRENCH FRONT.

Paris, Nov. 17.—"There were active artillery engagements last night north of Courtecon," says today's official communication. "We repulsed an enemy detachment which attempted to approach our lines in this region and inflicted serious losses on it. Raids on German trenches southwest of St. Quentin, in the Champagne, east of Teton and in the Woevre enabled us to bring back prisoners, including one officer and war materials. In upper Alsace the artillery fighting was rather heavy at Schonholz. Elsewhere the night passed in quiet.

Summary of the Day's War News

(By the Associated Press.)

Defeated in battle by the Bolsheviki and deserted by most of his own officers and men, Premier Kerensky is in flight and his whereabouts is unknown in Petrograd. The head of Russia's provisional government was about to surrender to the Maximalists under coercion when he disappeared.

In Moscow, the tide apparently has turned and the Bolshevikis are in control of the ancient Russian capital, with the forces of the provisional government besieged in the Kremlin. One report says heavy artillery is being used against the historic walls. Another declared a truce between government and Bolsheviki troops has been arranged. Between 2,000 and 5,000 persons have been killed in Moscow since the outbreak of the revolt. Gen. Kaledines, leader of the Cossacks, is reported approaching the city with relief for the Kerensky forces. A third armed force, supposed to be composed of released convicts, is said to be fighting both Bolsheviki and government troops.

Prior to his sudden flight Premier Kerensky had seen his force, mostly Cossacks, defeated by the Bolsheviki near Tsarskoe-Selo, now in the hands of the revolutionists. The Bolsheviki troops were commanded by members of the oldaristocracy and former army officers. A traveler returned from the Caucasus reports that while conditions in most provinces are not abnormal, there is no sympathy with Premier Kerensky. He believes that the

The British embassy has made futile efforts to ascertain the conditions under which they are held.

BEATEN LEADER OF RUSSIANS IS OFF IN DISGUISE

POWER OF PREMIER SEEMS COLLAPSED

Petrograd, Friday, Nov. 16.—(Noon.) Deserted by most of his officers and virtually ordered to surrender to the Bolsheviki, Premier Kerensky evaded the guards sent for him and has disappeared. Gen. Dukhonin has resumed temporary command of the Kerensky forces recently defeated at Tsarskoe-Selo.

Gen. Krasnoff, former commander under Kerensky, who was arrested with other members of the premier's staff, has been released on the ground that he was only obeying the orders of his superior. Gen. Krasnoff's report concerning the disappearance of Kerensky confirms that he fled under disguise.

Premier Kerensky, when told that his officers were against him and that his men weer on the point of deserting, agreed to come to Petrograd, but while a guard was being arranged he dropped out of sight.

Talks With Gen. Krasnoff.

"At 3 o'clock on the afternoon of Nov. 1 (old style, Nov. 14 new style) I called the quarters of the commander-in-chief," said Krasnoff. "He appeared nervous and excited. 'General,' said he, 'you have betrayed me. Your Cossacks say they will arrest me and give me up to the sailors.'

"'Yes,' I answered, 'such a discussion is now going on. There appears to be little sympathy for you.'

"'Do the officers feel the same way?" he asked.

"'Yes.'

"'What shall I do? Will I have to commit suicide?'

"'If you are an honest man you will go to Petrograd under a white flag and appear before the revolutionary committee where you will negotiate as head of the government.'

"Kerensky agreed to this and he was promised a guard. He objected to a guard of sailors on the ground that some enemies were among them. He wanted to wait until night, but finally agreed to make the trip by daylight.

Kerensky Flees in Disguise.

"I went and called Colonel Kishkoff, of the Tenth Don Cossacks and ordered him to appoint a guard of eight men. A half an hour later the Cossacks told me that Kerensky could not be found. I raised the alarm, thinking that he could not have left Gatchina."

M. Bibenko, member of the committee on war and marine has reported to the workmen's and soldiers' congress that Kerensky fled garbed as a sailor. Before Kerensky's flight, Bibenko said he talked with Cossacks and found they were willing to come to an agreement with the Maximalists, only the officers being opposed. He said that he had promised the Cossacks that they would be released and possibly be allowe dto retain their mounts and arms and return to the Don region.

Bibenko denied that Michael Romanoff, the former grand duke Michael Alexandrovitch was with Kerensky. He denied also that General Korniloff had escaped from prison.

CONGRESSMEN UNDER FIRE IN THE WAR ZONE

British Front in Belgium, Friday, Nov. 16.—(By the Associated Press.)—Five members of the party of American congressmen and private citizens, who spent yesterday and part of today visiting the Belgian war zone, had a narrow escape from death or injury today when they were caught in a sudden burst of German machine gun fire, while inspecting the front line trenches near Dixmude. The Americans in danger were Congressman C. C. Dill, of Spokane, Wash.; Congressman Charles B. Timberlake, of Colorado; Congressman John Miller, of Seattle, Wash.; Congressman Albert Johnson, of Washington, and former Representative Stout, of Montana. Nobody was hit, but it was one of those peculiar freaks of fortune which soldiers call luck, because the shots came in a shower, so close to them it seemed almost certain some one must be wounded, although they were exposed only for a brief time. The other seven members of the party was in another section of the trench and were not disturbed by the fire. Later, however, when all the Americans were together the Germans dropped a big sheel some yards away, seriously endangering every one. One member in describing the incidant to the correspondent later, said he and his companion heard the shell coming.

"It sounded like the road of an airplane," he said. No one was injured. The visitors spent the night near the front and rose early this morning for a trip to the trenches in the vicinity of Dixmude. The Belgian and German lines run within thirty yards of each other at one point and it was there that the five men came into danger. Only the usual firing was under way when the party, accompanied by Belgian officers, reached this place.

The Americans were having an excellent view of the lines when several of them got into an exposed position and were seen by the eGrmans. Before the visitors realized the situation bullets were whining all about them like a storm of hail and dirt was being thrown into their faces as some of the steel pellets struck the top of the trench.

The Americans departed this afternoon for England. On arriving at the port whece they sailed they said their trip to the Belgian front had been most satisfactory and that the reception accorded could not have been more cordial. They were especially pleased at the invitation of King Albert to take tea with him. The American minister [illegible] lock also was present as the guest [illegible] of the king.

DON'T KICK—HELP.

There would be much less complaint of the coal situation, we believe, if consumers would reflect somewhat upon the prodigious difficulties with which the fuel administration has had to deal. Almost at the outset of the fuel administration's work the industrial situation in the mines of several extensive regions became acute. Strikes were launched and for many days the affected regions produced no coal. Many operators were not disposed to acquiesce in the government regulations and no great haste was made in some instances to get an understanding with the workers in the mines.

It also should be considered that the coal situation has been one of the phases of the greatest breakdown of railway transportation this country has ever known. That condition has been persistent for a year and a half. It was constant all through the fall and winter of a year ago. It has been aggravated during the past half year by the unprecedented demands of the government to meet its needs in the war. Some improvement has been lately the fact and there is no reason to question that the railway management of the country, under the direction of the railway war board, has been doing everything possible to bring something like order and effectiveness out of a situation that was almost chaotic. The draft on the railroads will continue with increasing strain through the winter, but there are now in evidence encouraging reasons to believe that transportation will be so capably directed as to ward off actual distress from the fuel situation.

The federal government has no greater corollary problem of the war to deal with than the question of fuel. It relates not only to domestic and industrial consumption of coal in the United States, but to the work of the navy in the war and to the continued military efficiency of two of our allies—France and Italy. To expect that all phases of this gigantic problem can be given immediate and happy solution at the outset of the government undertaking to control fuel is to expect the impossible. In time there will be control that is thorough and administration that is smoother.

Consumers of coal, no matter whether domestic or industrial, must understand their own importance as factors in the coal situation. There must be such a conservation of fuel as this country has never attempted. Waste and extravagance must cease. Overheated homes and office buildings can no longer be the rule. Careful and scientific stoking must take the place of over-feeding to produce steam for industry. Use of fuel to produce electric current for garish display must come to an end. All these economies and conservations cannot be made the effectual practice at once. In a short time, it is to be thought, they will become the daily common practice. They will have to be or the country will suffer in the war.

America is entering upon a new experience. Carelessness, waste, extravagance in the use of our resources have been our practices for a century and more. We have always had over-abundance of fuel and of food. We now have come upon a time in the midst of the nation's most perilous crisis when we can produce enough of neither to answer our needs except by conserving what we are able to get. There must be patience with this fuel problem. It will be solved at length in a fashion that will answer all imperative necessities provided there be co-operation of the public with the purposes of the government. Remember that war needs stand above and take precedence over all other needs. The nation is now fighting for the security of its future. The people of the country must join all their efforts and strive as one to increase the power of the government. One way in which this can be done is to aid in the solution of the fuel problem.

Don't kick. Help.

MR. CUTSHALL'S APPOINTMENTS.

Only actual trial on the job will demonstrate what sort of public servant any man will make. So there is no saying how Mayor-elect Cutshall's appointees, just announced, may turn out. Some very promising men make rather indifferent executive officers of a government.

It is to be said, however, in all sincerity for the gentlemen the mayor-elect has designated for his boards that they vouchsafe an excellent prospect of a capable and satisfactory administration. Some of them have had experience in public affairs. Some of them are without any such experience. All of them are of high character and will enter office in enjoyment of an excellent degree of public confidence and that is a good asset to begin with.

We note with no little satisfaction that Mr. Cutshall has chosen his official subordinates with some reference to age. Most of the men he has named are, while by no means youths, such as may be described as young. If this means anything it should mean enthusiasm, energy and ambition to perform well.

We design nothing invidious and no disparagements whatsoever as to the others in noting with special approval Mr. Cutshall's appointment of Dr. Eric A. Crull to the board of health. We assume that it is the purpose to have Dr. Crull become the executive officer of the board. No better appointment could have been made from among Mr. Cutshall's friends and supporters or outside that circle, for the matter of that. Dr. Crull served four years on the board and during that term was its executive officer. Any respect in which he did not acquit himself well and thoroughly "make good" we have yet to find out. It is an excellent appointment and made, as we are glad to believe, wholly in the public interest.

Mr. Cutshall is framing up the executive department of the government under which the people of Fort Wayne must live and their city must progress during the next four years. We trust in all sincerity that his aides may turn out under trial to be as good as they look and we are pleased to add that we are harassed by no doubt on that score.

IN RUSSIA.

There is a faint gleam of hope to be seen even in the fact of a limited civil war in Russia. So far the clash is between military and naval factions variously divided, one element fighting for the Bolsheviki and the other for the provisional government. Kerensky appears to have been beaten in a rather decisive fashion near Petrograd and if his overthrow has not been accomplished the early consummation of it is indicated. In the greater part of vast Russia there is said to be no disturbance, a very natural incident of the situation. Russia in the mass seems to be waiting with a characteristic patience for something to come out of the bloody rivalries of the extremists to which they can tie. Sooner or later some sort of strong, if not wise, leadership will come and open the way to the establishment of order and the setting up of the state. It may be a democracy and it may be a despotism come back that such state will be, but there soon must come something. The patience of the people in this acute stress is itself promising. They will help along with something, even it be only with a civil war out of which bloody trial their future must be wrought.

Austrians in Minnesota were murdered, it is said, because they had invested in Liberty bonds and had given aid to the Red Cross. That is a new turn in enemy propaganda and one that will not greatly improve the cause of the kaiser or the progress of the kaiserists in this land. Assassination as a rebuke to loyalty and a punishment of patriotism will not go far nor accomplish much in the United States.

If there are four hundred and fifty million bushels of potatoes in the country from this year's harvest, the bet is a good one with odds on that they are going to be cheaper in midwinter than they are now. The food administration will probably have its eye out that no potatoes are dumped into the river to create a scarcity and a better price.

Thomas A. Edison has invented an engine that will propel a seagoing ship without vibration. That might be applied also to certain seagoing vehicles that navigate the land.

It will not surprise many to learn that reports of the arrest of Hon. Joseph P. Tumulty, of the White House, as a spy are wholly unfounded.

The Trail of the Painted Posts

BY BRUCE BARTON,
Editor of Every Week.

Yesterday I met a man who had just landed from the western front; and he told me the heart-rending story of the walking wounded.

The wounded who have lost an arm, or an eye, or a part of the face, but are still able to struggle back from the front line trenches alone.

Go with me for a moment to France: I want you to see what he saw. I want you to know the truth.

It is the day before the big push. For weeks the army has known the exact hour and moment when the barrage would lift and the men leap out "over the top."

The enemy has known it, too; his preparations are as great and as careful as ours.

On the day before, the engineers plant a line of painted white spots a few yards apart, leading from the rear straight to the borders of No Man's Land.

Simple painted posts: what are they for?

They are to guide the walking wounded. Eyes blurred with blood and suffering that might lose the road can follow the trail of those painted posts; bodies too weak from shell shock or gas to stand alone can find there a momentary support.

The trail of the painted posts is the trail of the walking wounded; the trail of blood and misery and pain.

Just before dawn the men file into the forward trenches. Singing? Not a bit. Talking? Hardly a word. Only the silent, heavy tread of men who have written their last letters home. Men with faces carved out of stone.

They pass out of camp; they pass the base hospitals; they pass the canteen. And just before they reach the front trench—at the very front, under the fire of the big guns themselves—each man pauses for just a second at a dug-out.

From it a hand reaches out; in the hand a piece of chocolate for each man to be eaten in case he falls wounded in No Man's Land. A hearty Good Luck and God Bless You. It is with this, the voice of the Y. M. C. A. secretary, ringing in their ears that the men go "over the top."

An hour passes: two hours. And slowly, painfully, draggingly, they come back. The men who have lost an arm, and the men who have lost an eye, and the men who carry in their shoulders or their abdomens or their legs the enemy's bullets and shell.

And they stop at the Y. M. C. A. dug-out first. It lies nearest the guns. Nearer than the doctor or hospital. There every man gets a cup of hot tea if he wants it; there two orderlies stand with hypodermics in their hands.

"Do you want it?" they demand of each man who passes through.

And either he thrusts out his arm to receive the soothing potion, or he nods his head and passes on.

On along the way of painted posts to the hospitals and to rest.

Sometimes the dug-out is shelled, and a Y. M. C. A. secretary loses his life; two went out together on one day recently.

It is part of the game; they ask for no sympathy; they ask not even for pay; many of them are working for nothing at all.

All they ask is for money to "carry on." To be able to stand just behind the front with chocolate for the men who are "going over the top." To be able to stand there with hot tea and morphine for the men who are staggering back along the way of painted posts.

Thirty-five million dollars—it it a lot of money. But you would not say so if you stood beside the way of painted posts.

You would not say so if you saw the procession of the walking wounded.

It would not be much if one of the walking wounded were your brother or your cousin or your son.

He may be one of them before the war is over; he may be over there even now. Stand with him, asks the Y. M. C. A. Let the hand that the Y. M. C. A. reaches out be your hand. Let the chocolate that it gives be your chocolate, as he goes past the dug-out "over the top."

And be there with your cup of tea and your morphine when he comes back again.

Past the dug-out.
With the walking wounded.

THE GRIM FACTS.

(Capper's Weekly.) —

Herbert Hoover's repeated and even solemn exhortations to the American people to cut down on certain foods, wheat bread in particular, have not had the hearing they deserve.

Thousands, if not millions, of people take these appeals lightly, and do not yet see the seriousness of a situation that those familiar with facts think can scarcely be exaggerated.

Why should Americans stint on wheat bread—just so that some foreign peoples may have flour?

Why, isn't there enough food to go around?

There is no evidence of a famine that those people can perceive. They take the Hoover warnings with a grain of salt.

The facts are suggested, however, in such stories as that of ex-Consul Roth of the wonderful improvements made by the German engineers and mechanics in the U-boat.

Food must be saved particularly wheat and flour, because food is being destroyed as well as eaten. So that there is a shortage and nobody knows how great the shortage is and may be.

It all depends upon the warfare between the U-boat and the various machines that fight it.

At best thousands of tons of wheat and flour must be sunk in the sea, besides that which is consumed, and those hundreds of millions of bushels that are not available for export.

In times like the present, when the genius if all the foremost nations is engaged in a terrific contest, it is well not to take too lightly any earnest counsel that comes from the highest and most expert quarters.

In any case the sacrifice made in curtailing wheat consumption and veal, lamb and similar foods is a small gift to the nation compared with what those who are devoting their lives to its service are giving daily and hourly.

KNITTING OF OLD AND NOW.

(Hartford Times.)

In grandmother's day every girl was taught to knit, but most of the knitting actually was done by the older women, supposed to be possessed of greater leisure. Knitting, with the four fine steel needles and fine yarn then used, was a slow process. Even a stocking was the work of weeks, according to the time per day devoted. It might be added that when tapered and "toed" it was a stocking recognizable as such and not mistaken for either a helmet or a mitt. Those were the days when knitting was a business, not an adventure or a freak of fashion.

Grandmother sat by the fireside, and her needles clicked through the daylight hours. She would hardly have felt justified in taking her knitting to church. Her descendants seem to have gone daft over what she took calmly. So we meet the children, with their shining morning faces, knitting on the way to school.

We note the society woman knitting at the opera or the play, or perhaps in her motor, and even on the street and and in steam cars. The devotee of the movies watches the unfolding pictures while her fingers work automatically on in the darkness. Young and old of the female persuasion are knitting sedulously, almost frantically, while even males with overmuch leasure are suspected of yielding to the fascination of the points and the yarn and the stitches. A mass of garments of one sort or another, some with form and comeliness and use, some without, is going to be the result.

And little harm done, to be sure. Knitting is a pursuit of thrift. The knowledge of how to fashion useful garments with nothing but needles and yarn will not come amiss. The training of the mind and the muscles is good for the nerves, properly conducted. The height of the present wave will doubtless pass, but it will leave many with useful knowledge and profitable habits, while something is bound to come out of this that in some manner can be utilized for wear. Four needles of our younger days have given way to two.

SAVE THE FUEL.

Editor of The Sentinel:

About eighty per cent. of the domestic consumers are wasting from ten to forty per cent. of their coal.

Some consumers don't know this and others know and don't care, while comparatively few are properly conserving the limited supply. Let's "wake up" and take notice.

This same coal that is now the serious concern of the entire country and that the consumers are necessarily paying big prices for, even when they can get it, falls through and around the grates int othe ash-pan and is thrown out. And it costs good money to have it hauled to the dump.

Let every care-taker of steam and hot water boilers, furnaces, base-burners, soft coal heaters and ranges sift the cinders for one month as a personal experiment for those who have never tried it. If this is done, how many hundreds of tons of fuel can be conserved in Fort Wayne and Allen county alon? Do this now, if never before, as a patriotic duty.

Word has been received in this city announcing the accidental death at Stockton, Cal., of Charles G. Barthold, formerly of this city. The deceased came to his death by a shock of electricity received while at work for the electric light company of that place. Barthold was at one time in the employ of the Fort Wayne Electric Light company. His father is Alex Barthold, who lives west of the city on the Illinois road.

The new church known as "Christ's Evangelical Lutheran Church of the General Synod," was fully organized at the Y. M. C. A. rooms last Sunday. There were in all fifty-four who signed the constitution of the new organization as charter members, and were received into the fellowship and communion of the church. Several families of children were also baptized. The following officers were elected: Elders, Jacob H. Keil and Joseph Merillot; deacons, George W. Puff and Charles A. Singry. Rev. J. S. Nelson was also chosen as pastor. The Lord's supper was then administered, Rev L. A. Getwald, D. D., of Wittenberg, of the Theological seminary, Springfield, Ohio, officiating. In the evening an enthusiastic Y. P. S. C. E. was organized with officers as follows: President, William H. Myers; vice president, Miss Stella Nelson; secretary, Miss Maud Merillet; corresponding secretary, Miss Rena B. Nelson; treasurer, Charles Boshler. After a most excellent sermon by Rev. Gotwald, Rev. Nelson was publicly installed pastor of the new church, which starts out upon its mission of saving souls under very favorable auspices. The services were all well attended and deeply impressive and helpful.

W. C. T. U. INSTITUTE TO BE HELD FRIDAY

Arrangements Have Been Made for an All-Day Session at the Court House.

The Allen County W. C. T. U. institute will hold an all-day session in the assembly room of the court house Friday, November 23, to which the public are cordially invited. A fine program has been arranged which should not only appeal to those connected with this organization, but to all persons who are interested in welfare work and the betterment of humanity.

Reports will be made by both county and local superintendents of each department. Several new departments have been added to the organization and many new members have been enrolled, all of which will enter into the splendid reports which will be given on Friday. After the day's business session an evening program will be given which will include a play by the Sahara quartette entitled, "The Death of John Barleycorn." The public are invited to this.

Several days ago a list of the new superintendents for the coming year was published and the following were unintentionally omitted: Mrs. Ella Gillum, 727 Knitters' avenue, superintendent medical department; Mrs. W. J. Whiteman, 807 Huffman street, assistant superintendent Temperance and Mission.

The W. C. T. U., organized primarily to annihilate the liquor traffic, has gradually enlarged its scope until today it is truthfully called a "University of Reform." The busy woman can here get into touch with all forms of social service. To bring this concentrated reform movement to the attention of the public by the largest organization of women in the world and to further educate and enthuse its own members is the purpose of the W. C. T. U. institute.

IN MEMORIAM.

(In loving memory of my husband, Herman Zelt, who passed away two years ago today, November 17th, 1915.)

The month of November again is here,
To us the saddest of the year,
For it took from us away
A dear one two years ago today.

A precious one from us is gone;
A voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.
—His Loving Wife and Daughter.

SOCIETY

The assembly room of the Jefferson school was well filled Friday afternoon by women who were interested in a demonstration and talk by Miss Elizabeth Cowan, of Washington, who is here for the purpose of assisting the women along the line of food conservation. Two things which Miss Cowan said are particularly interesting. One was that a silver lining to the war cloud is the return of women to the habits of thrift and work that were characteristic of their grandmothers. Another, was the fact that the reason for conserving animal fats is because the government needs them in making high explosives. Miss Cowan made and gave recipes for corn pone, oatmeal coffee cake, date muffins, and bean loaf, the latter being a meat substitute. "Don't be afraid of seasoning well," cautioned Miss Cowan for in that respect the substitute needs pepper and salt in order to suggest the tastiness of meats. The recipe for bean loaf is as follows: Two cups cooked and mashed lima beans, one cup breadcrumbs, one tablespoon of chopped onions, one egg, two tablespoonfuls of melted vegetables fat or oil, season well with pepper and salt and add two tablespoonfuls of tomato catsup. Mix and shape into a loaf such as a meat loaf cook thoroughly. Eat with tomato sauce made of two slices of onion and two tablespoonsful of flour, salt, pepper and narrow strips of green pepper.

Winter Coat With Two New Wrinkles

A winter coat of heavy wool velour th fur bandings is anything but a elty these frosty days but the de- of the coat pictured here has ered two new wrinkles in the coat making—the flaring skirt fur cuff that extends from the cle of the hand to the elbow.

The flare, welcome change from the long straight line of the universal silhouette, is achieved by the cut at the waistline, and by generous fullness held smoothly in check by a fitted piece over the hips.

The deep graceful cuffs reach almost from the finger-tip to the elbow on the outer arm.

INTERNAL SITUATION OF GERMANY IS BAD

Economic Conditions Are Serious and Mutinies in Navy and Army.

Berne, Oct. 22.—(Correspondence.) There has just arrived here from Germany a naturalized American, who has lived in Germany throughout the war, worked in German seaport cities, passing for or being considered a German subject, mingling not only with the common people, but having occasional access to the councils of the high.

In his opinion Germany is suffering acutely now and dissatisfaction and worse reign in certain strata of her army and navy. Recent mutinous uprisings have had to be sternly repressed and the mutineers shot. Thoughtful Germany, he thinks, comprising men of the Ballin type, is desperately anxious for peace and secretly anxious to end the war before America has been utterly alienated.

This man left Germany early in October, because he had reason to fear that he was going to be impressed for military service. The German government had refused to recognize the validity of his American naturalization since he failed to comply with the law existing in 1913, and did not seek the consent of the German government to his step. To get out he had to induce the Spanish embassy to bring pressure to bear on the German government. On reaching Switzerland one of his first steps was to seek The Associated Press correspondent, to whom he first proved satisfactorily his American citizenship, then volunteered such information as he possessed about Germany as the duty of a patriotic American citizen. Strangely enough, at the very moment he was telling his story with details about mutinies in the German navy, the German minister of marine, Admiral von Capelle, was announcing the naval mutinies to the reichstag.

Economic Situation Bad.

"The economic situation in Germany," he says, "is far worse than anyone on the outside realizes, is so critical that I for one look for a break, a collapse, next spring or late in the winter. Nor are the good crops that one hears boasts about every once in so often going to change the situation materially.

"Throughout the German people there is what amounts to a hatred of America, and this hatred has been carefully concentrated on President Wilson because it is easier to hate a man than a notion, especially a nation that is the home of pretty nearly everyone's relative.

"But the big men of Germany, the men who have to look ahead and guide the empire after the war, do not hate America. They feel too keenly that they need America, and they would like to stem the tide of hate before it becomes mutual and the United States are alienated, perhaps for all time.

"They know that after the war there is only one country in the world where they can get the money they shall need, America, and they are worrying a-plenty nowadays. They, and all Germany, want increasingly a peace that shall specify, among other things, the right to purchase raw as well as finished materials anywhere in the world on the same terms as any other nation.

May Confiscate Property.

"Every indication points to probable confiscation of property and repudiation of perhaps half the war loan totals after the war. Even the percentage of property to be confiscated is being talked of, and it seems probable that the government will take twenty per cent. of everything.

"On the other hand its seems probable from all I hear that an even half of all outstanding war loans will be nullified. The seventh will suffer exactly as the first, and the first as the seventh. Fifty per cent. will be repaid, and the other fifty per cent. will either be cancelled or will merely continue to pay interest—will be a sort of perpetual investment, the capital for which cannot be realized.

"As surely as anything can be predicted there will be in the central powers a series of laws forbidding emigration. And in anticipation of them countless Germans today are talking about ways and means of getting away after the war. South and North America, and peculiarly enough New Zealand and Australia, are the havens to which they speak of fleeing. The first German ship that lands in America after hostilities will leave fifty per cent. of its crew.

"Central Europe" Idea Impossible.

"It is becoming clearer and clearer to Germans every day that all the talk that has gone the rounds about a "Central Europe" after the model of Professor Naumann and others will be out of the question.

"Contrary to the belief that seems to be almost universal outside of Germany, I really believe that Pan-Germanism is on the decrease rather than the increase among the masses of the people, and this despite the increased noise about it everywhere in Germany, and the intensive way in which it is being encouraged. The reason for this is that more and more the German people are coming to realize what a catastrophe it will be for them after the war is over if they are hated in all the world. Pan-Germanism, they are coming to feel, is likely to intensify the feeling against them, and thereby make their economic struggle in the future more difficult."

He then touched briefly on Austro-German relations and cautioned against any hope that Austria will fall away from her big ally, for, he explained, she is too independent financially and militarily, to be able to shake loose, much as she might like to do so. The German military authorities see to it that German soldiers are intermingled with Austrian troops not only to spur them on in fighting, but also to prevent their quitting.

Mutinies in Navy and Army.

Regarding the naval and military situation he told of mutinies aboard battleships as hinted at by von Capelle. The men had, he said, dismounted guns and thrown them overboard, had assaulted officers and refused to obey orders, in the hope of crippling the German navy and bringing about a peace of desperation in that way. The mutinous forces, however, had not been large or strong enough to accomplish much, and had been put down. Most of them were shot, others in exceptional cases had been put back into service on their promise to be good.

This spirit, he continued, extended to the army also, fanned to a flame occasionally by sectional jealousy and dislike. Thus, he said, he knew that miniature battles had been fought between Bavarian and Prussian troops, and that certain troops on the east front had on one occasion mutinied and declared in favor of marching on Berlin rather than Petrograd. Naturally all news about these and similar clashes had been carefully suppressed and leaked out only when the soldiers returned or wrote home, in the same way that sailors in Hamburg and Kiel spread the first reports of the mutinies aboard the ships.

EVENING GOWNS ARE DESIGNED TO SUIT TASTES OF ALL AND HERE ARE TWO OF THE ACCEPTED MODES

Whether one is a slim young debutante affecting fluffiness and simplicity, or of mature dignity demanding clinging velvet or satin, one's taste may be suited in the evening gowns which are the accepted modes of the season.

The other frock uses satin in apricot shade merely as its firm foundation and obtains its charming airiness by goodness knows how many yards of chiffon.

LUTHERAN HOSPITAL ASSOCIATION TO MEET

Report of Various Officers and Committees Will be Made Monday Afternoon.

The Lutheran Hospital association will meet Monday afternoon at two o'clock in the reading room of the nurses' home. It being the semi-annual meeting of the association, reports of the various officers and committees will be submitted and discussed.

The most important work that will lay open before its members is the discussion as to the future welfare of the institution. No doubt, not only the members of the hospital association take great pride in the institution, in the work of the dostors in that institution and the nurses' work upon the sick and convalescing, but also men of all classes of the city and surrounding territory who have in any way become acquainted with the good work, take the same pride.

The institution with all its workers is as patriotic as any institution in the country, inasmuch as it tries to conform with the wishes of its government. Therefore the hospital board, after getting the consent of the churches who are backing the institution, has upon request of the government, resolved to add an additional building to the nurses' home. The hospital now has a home accommodating about 40 nurses. Still, in order to make it possible for more nurses to prepare themselves to serve their country in alleviating pain of the sick and wounded, the above resolution was made. It is not known whether any other hospital in this city or any other has done more. The new building will cos tapproximately $10,000. Dr. H. A. Duemling, the chief surgeon of the hospital, is a very enthusiastic worker for the new addition of the nurses' home.

NOT ALLOWED TO SELL AT EXCESSIVE PROFIT

Notice to That Effect is Served Upon Wholesale and Retail Grocers.

H. E. Barnard, federal food administrator for Indiana, has served notice to the wholesale and retail grocery trade that all goods must hereafter be sold at a reasonable advance over the actual purchase price. Hoarding on the part of retailer and consumer also will not be permitted.

Mr. Barnard's notice follows:

"Notice to the wholesale and retail grocery trade: The rules and regulations governing the handling of food by firms licensed under the Food Control Act provide that all goods must be sold at a reasonable advance over the actual purchase price of the particular goods sold within regard to the market or replacement value at the time of such sale. In interpreting this rule I shall hold that it applies to all foods commonly sold in groceries. The purpose of the rule is obviously to keep food stuffs out of the hands of speculators and to distribute them at a reasonable profit.

"While retail dealers who do a business of less than a hundred thousand dollars a year are not licensed, wholesalers are prohibited from selling goods to retailers who do not sell their trade on the basis above indicated. Whenever retailers exact more than a fair profit over the purchase price of the goods they handle, wholesalers are instructed to sell them no more goods.

"List of licensed goods is as follows: Wheat, wheat flour, rye or rye flour.

"Barley or barley flour.

"Oats, oatmeal or rolled oats.

"Corn, corn grits, cornmeal, hominy, corn flour, starch from corn, corn oil, corn syrup or glucose.

"Rice, rice flour.

"Dried beans.

"Pea seed or dried peas.

"Peanut oil or peanut meal.

"Oleomargarine, lard, lard substitutes, also oil or cooking fats.

"Milk, butter or cheese.

"Condensed, evaporated or powdered milk.

"Fresh or frozen fish.

"Canned: Peas, dried beans, tomatoes, corn salmon or sardines.

"Dried: Prunes, apples, peaches or raisins.

"Sugar syrups or molasses.

"Hoarding not permitted by retailer and consumer. This means that either retailers or consumers must not buy in excess of their immediate needs and will not be permitted to buy for any future requirements. This makes it the duty of the retailer to see to it that his customers are not furnished more than actual and immediate needs.

"The retailer must observe these rules or the wholesalers will be instructed by the food administration not to furnish them any further supplies."

IN THE THEATERS

AT THE MAJESTIC

"YOUR OLD FRIEND."

Pat White and His "Gaiety Girls" Coming Tomorrow.

"Your old friend," Pat White and "His Gaiety Girls" will appear at the Majestic theatre tomorrow matinee and night and it is the sum of public opinion that the funniest whirlwind Irish comedian has provided this season the most pleasing offering he has ever tendered the public. This is saying much for Pat White always has a good show, for being a first class comedian, himself, he insists on having all his surroundings first class.

The first part which will be offered, is entitled: "Casy at the Derby" and the second part: "The Hurly-Burly Hotel." Both acts are sprightly and contagious in their comedy essentials. They are presented in several scenes and served up in big quantity that light, entertaining effervescence which audiences demand. The chorus is large and is composed of girls who are full of life, youth, grace and personality. Of the many attractive features of the production, none is achieving greater popularity than the offering of beautiful living art models. This is an artistic offering, free of vulgarity, and the girls who pose in it have all been selected for their physical perfection.

HOWE'S TRAVEL FESTIVAL SOON.

Will Feature Uncle Sam's Navy Somewhere in the Atlantic.

After the flood of impossible motion picture thrillers with which film producers persist in plying a patient public, it is a welcome relief to watch the more wholesome pictures always presented by Lyman H. Howe's Travel Festival, which comes to the Majestic two days, Tuesday and Wednesday. They are a rare treat, not only because they palpitate with the actualities of life and shun the overstrained posing and sensationalism of every day dramatics, but also because they represent the highest achievements in motion photography. It was Howe who showed the world that the film was not merely a plaything, but a vital factor as an educational medium, and he is to be congratulated for maintaining and constantly advancing the dignity and destiny of his exhibition on its high plane. The great prestige and success of his attraction goes to prove that the producer and exhibitor, in this, as in any other realm of human endeavor, who keeps on doing well, and knows how to do a little better each time, both wins and maintains the confidence of the public by sheer force of merit, and the success of Howe's exhibition is plainly due to this age-old law.

Among the many features of the new production may be mentioned a visit aboard Uncle Sam's new navy "Somewhere in the Atlantic;" the life, training, discipline, tactical exercises, etc., of midshipmen at the United States Naval academy, Annapolis; climbing Mt. Blanc, the highest Alpine peak; thrilling episodes during broncho-breaking contests in the real wild west; an imaginary "battle in the air" over London between a British aviator and a raiding Zeppelin, and a ride across the Great Divide, via the Great Northern railway. A host of merry-making new animated cartoons will be interspersed throughout the program.

COMING TO THE MAJESTIC NEXT WEEK

"Mutt and Jeff Divorced," a Rollicking Musical Comedy at the Majestic Matinee and Night, Saturday, Nov. 24.

"Mutt and Jeff Divorced," the New Musical Comedy Hit at the Palace First Half of Next Week.

"MUTT AND JEFF DIVORCED."

The Boomers of the Big Laugh to Come Again Saturday.

Mutt and Jeff of cartoon and musical comedy fame to appear in a new vehicle, "Mutt and Jeff Divorced" its title and it's said to be funny enough to turn a funeral into a tango party.

First among the year's successes of a big and substantial musical comedy sort is said to be Bud Fisher's latest farrago of mirth provoking nonsense, "Mutt and Jeff's Divorce," a further extension of the rollicking life of the screaming pair. No patron of musical comedy has missed the last stage exploits of the twisted twins, it goes without saying that their re-appearance at the Majestic on Saturday for matinee and night will be hailed as a joyfest occasion by every local playgoer. Situations that succeed each other swiftly, each described as more amusing than its predessor, songs that tunefully animate and dances that irresistibly syncopate, and other elements of the production critically described as the most hilariously grotesque yet most furiously fastidious of al lthe Broadway presentations of the year.

Aimee Villon, Hale's ward, arrives from England and is thrown into the midst of the intrigue. The secret enemy loots Hale's "burglar-proof" vault, steals securities Hale was holding for Aimee, gets hold of Hale's plans for war inventions and kidnaps Aimee from her boudoir.

Big moments and exciting scenes start the serial with a rush and throw the characters into complications, out of which come strange clues in answer to the ever-mystifying question: "Who is Number One?"

AT THE PALACE

MUSICAL COMEDY.

"Paradise Valley" Comes to the New Palace Sunday Afternoon.

A musical comedetta, with a wealth of scenery, tuneful music and a bevy of pretty girlies in "Paradise Valley" the attraction at the New Palace for the first half of the coming week. The production is a musicalized version of E. E. Kidder's "Peaceful Valley," and is presented as only Boyle Woolfolk can present an attraction.

William B. Morris and Grace Thurston, who head the production are popular in the theatrical world because of their talented work in "Whose Little Girl Are You," a Woolfold production which appeared here last season, and in a number of other productions of unusual merit.

The music in the little musical playlet is the kind that will be whistled on the streets here before the show has been here for the first matinee. Some of the most popular in the big cities are "She's Just a Little Angel," which runs like a theme throughout the attraction, "Nesey Moon," "I'd Like to be Called Dearie," and a number of others.

There is a special song feature, a knitting song. Grace Thurston and a dozen of the chorus girls knit during the song, and the articles they knit are sent to the soldiers. The knitting time is short, only three minutes twice a day, but this means seventy-two minutes of knitting a day alone by the thirteen.

Of course an audience is always interested in the chorus and "Paradise Valley" has some chorus. In addition to the nine principals there are twelve of the prettiest, shapliest and easiest-to-look-at girls a musical "tab" has brought here for several seasons. They can sing too and when it comes to dancing, they're there.

As an added feature for the big bill, Stouder has booked Billy Kimball and Betty Kenneth, a pair of banjo artists. Adding novelty to melody, the two have an act that is a real gem. They are clever instrumentalists and handle a bit of comedy with a fineness that makes it an act of great humerous appeal.

For Last Half.

For the last half of the week the headline act will be "The Fashion Shop," a musical playlet built around a fashion show, a production will appeal to every woman in the city.

RIGHT OFF THE FILM

Mary McLane, she who collaborated with copper ore to make Butte, Mont., famous, has gone into filmdom. Mary is now entertaining the cameraman in the filming of one of her most famous books, "Men Who Have Made Love to Me."

Says Douglas Fairbanks: "There is one rule which every athlete must follow to be successful and that is be clean in mind and body. For a starter, I know of no better advice."

"The Lifter Vell," starring Ethel Barrymore, is pronounced by critics as her best filming.

The collection of precious stones owned by Miss Edna Goodrich might well be envied by an honest-to-goodness princess. And she wears them all in her first Mutual picture, "Reputation," in which she somes back to the screen, after an absence of two years.

Evelyn Nesbit is in again—the films. She is doing "The Greater Love," which sounds like ready money.

Have you ever seen "Teddy," the dog actor, in the Mack Tennett comedies? Well, "Teddy" has adopted an understudy. This is a St. Bernard pup, and his name is "Tramp," and they sure make some fun.

Nazimova's initial starring vehicle, "God's Message," under the Metro banner, is said to have received government aid in staging the war scenes.

Little six-year-old Mary McAlister, of Essany, was one of the first purchasers of liberty bonds during the last drive. Out of her own salary she bought a $100 bond.

"A Jitney Elopement," the latest Charlie Chaplin film, is said to be the biggest scream this popular film artist has ever done.

"The Lost Express," the 15 chapter serial, and the latest film in which Helen Holmes appears as the star, is a Mutual production that is "taking" well.

Julian Eltinge, one of the latest additions to filmdom, will shortly be seen in another new film, "The Clever Mrs. Fairfax," which is said to be even better than his first screen appearance.

How to Send Christmas Boxes To American Soldiers Abroad

CHRISTMAS BOXES
For American Expeditionary Forces in Europe

1. By agreement between the War Department, the Postoffice Department, and Express Companies, the Commanding General, Hoboken, New Jersey, is designated as the forwarding agent for the re-routing and shipment of all express and mail matter, intended as Christmas Presents, for ultimate delivery to the American Expeditionary Forces.

2. The Express companies are heartily co-operating with the war department to facilitate to the greatest possible extent the prompt movement and delivery of Christmas Boxes to our expeditionary forces abroad, which includes the ambulance and aviation service taken over by the army. The special arrangements do not apply to shipments addressed to Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., Knights of Columbus or other organizations outside the army.

3. All shipments by express should be packed in wooden boxes, limited to twenty (20) pounds in weight, measure not more than two cubic feet in volume, be well strapped, and should have a hinged or screw top to facilitate opening and inspecting. No food products, other than those enclosed in cans or glass jars, should be packed in any such shipments.

4. Boxes must be fully, correctly and legibly addressed and conspicuously marked "CHRISTMAS BOX." The consignee's name, company, regiment or other organization, followed by the words "American Expeditionary Forces," should appear in the address, as follows:

From
W. H. Black,
51 John Street.
Buffalo, N. Y.

CHRISTMAS BOX

Private John W. Black,
Company "C,"
256 Regiment,
American Expeditionary Forces

Contents
Books
Clothing
Tobacco

In care
Commanding General,
Hoboken, N. J.

In the upper left corner the name and address of the sender must be placed as shown. The contents of each package will be stated on the outside by the proper wording, which will indicate the general nature of the contents. The address should be written or printed in ink.

5. In addition to the name and address of the sender and consignee, it is permissible to write or print on the box the occupation of the sender and scriptions such as "MERRY CHRISTMAS," "PLEASE DO NOT OPEN UNTIL CHRISTMAS," " HAPPY NEW YEAR," "WITH BEST WISHES," and the like may be placed on the box in such a manner as not to interfere with the address.

6. All boxes must be waybilled to Hoboken, N. J., as prepaid to Hoboken, New Jersey.

7. The government will undertake the transportation of these CHRISTMAS BOXES from New York to the expeditionary forces abroad free of charge. No export license, invoices or other customs papers are required.

8. These boxes will be admitted to foreign countries free of duty.

9. Perishable articles should not be sent.

10. The principal articles prohibited are intoxicants of all kinds, poison, inflammable materials including friction matches, or composition which may kill or injure another or damage other goods. The commanding general, Hoboken, New Jersey, will cause every box to be opened and strict search to see that nothing of an explosive or other dangerous character is loaded aboard ship.

11. Owing to the great demand on transportation space, senders are urgently requested to make their packages as small as possible, preferably not exceeding 10 lbs. in weight, as we are advised that the small boxes will be given preference in shipment in order to accommodate the greatest number of prsons.

12. The shipment of Christmas boxes may begin immediately and no boxes will be forwarded overseas which do not reach Hoboken, New Jersey, on or before December 5th, 1917.

13. The name and complete address of both the consignee and sender should be written on a piece of paper or cardboard and enclosed within the box.

14. Because of the short time before December 5th it is necessary to give this opportunity for sending Christmas boxes the greatest possible publicity. Agents will very generally be able to secure the co-operation of local newspapers. We want all who have relatives and friends in the army abroad to know about this service.

15. All employes are requested to give these Christmas boxes especial attention. Careful handling and preferred service are necessary. We must do out part to insure the prompt and safe arrival at the front of all these reminders of home and the Holidays for our boys who are offering everything they have to our country.

SMALLPOX CAUSES SCHOOL TO CLOSE

Many People North of Garrett Have Been Exposed to the Disease.

(Special to the Sentinel.)

Garrett, Ind., Nov. 17.—The centralized school, located one mile north of this city and known to every one as the "North school" was closed yesterday on account of smallpox that has broken out. It seems that about every one has been exposed to it as on Thursday evening a birthday party was held in that vicinity and one of the parties, who was broken out and not aware of what was the matter, attended the party and the next morning was quite sick, necessitating the care of a physician, who immediately pronounced it smallpox. The county health officer was on the job shortly after and a strict quarantine will be kept on all of those opposed and watched closely to avoid further spread of this dreaded disease. Mrs. Will Putt and her son Douglas Putt, are both among those that have it.

The first number of the Garrett lecture course will be given next Monday evening at the Baptist church. Princess Watahwaso, a typical Indian princess with her three assistants, will give the program.

Miss Florence Van Fleit is spending the week-end at Gary, Ind., as the guest of Miss Lelsie Bruce.

DIVORCE GRANTED TO MRS. EDNA CURRAN

(Special to The Sentinel.)

Auburn, Ind., Nov. 17.—Mrs. Edna Curran was granted a divorce Friday in the DeKalb circuit court from her husband, Floyd Curran, of Garrett. The couple were married in September, 1916, and eloped to Hillsdale, Mich. They have one child. Curran has been a prisoner in the county jail, having failed to make his payments to his wife which the court ordered him to do last spring when the divorce case was first filed. When he was brought into the court room Friday by Sheriff Baltz he was accompanied by his mother and step-father, Mr. and Mrs. Steve Martin, of Fort Wayne, former residents of Garrett. Mrs. Curran related a story of abuse which began two days after their marriage. She sprung a sensation when she made the statement that Curran had told her several times that he would do the same to her that he did to his first wife, adding that he had pinched her repeatedly and that when she died she was black and blue. The first wife will be remembered as Miss Fay Clayton, of Garrett, who died when her baby was born. This child by the first wife is cared for by Mr. and Mrs. Martin. Curran paid the amount due his wife and the court ordered him to pay $4 a week for the support of the child until it is sixteen years old.

Auburn Short Items.

Frank Harnish, of this city, filed a suit for divorce from his wife, Mrs. Effie V. Harnish, Friday. Harnish charges his wife with cruel and inhuman treatment and states that she has a vile and abusive temper and is not fit to care for their child, seven months old. He alleges that she has threatened to kill it several times and would leave the child with her mother while she spent her time running around.

Mr. and Mrs. Victor Thomas are spending the week-end with the latter's parents at Warsaw.

Mrs. Thomas Rudd, of Butler, a former resident of this city, is reported very ill at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Blaine Snepp, on East Ninth street.

Liberty Gardens Will Have Grocery

Mr. William S. Strauss says that he has admired Liberty Gardens for some time and just neglected to inquire more about them. Consequently the piece that he most desired was sold before he made inquiry. This no doubt is the case with many people, and those who wait too long will lose the opportunity that they now have.

Mr. Strauss, however, saw the many advantages in Liberty Gardens and at once selected two very choice lots. He expects to put a grocery store on one and a beautiful home on the other lot next spring. The news will be welcome to many who have bought, as well as to many who intend to buy. The slogan adopted by Mr. Rastetter, who has charge of selling Liberty Gardens, of "one look means two lots," is being carried out very nicely.

Public Warned Against Rats

In this time of high cost of living, everybody should help to kill rats, a pest that destroys over $200,000,000 worth of foodstuffs annually besides distributing disease germs that cause the deaths of untold numbers of human beings. The easiest and most effective way to rid the house, barn, store or other buildings of rats is with Stearns' Paste, which can be bought for 35 cents at any store. GIRL PROBLEM IS UPPERMOST

Government Calls Y. W. C. A. to Great Service in Camps.

YOUTH OF NATION MUST BE PROTECTED

Drive for War Fund to Be Made—Mass Meeting Here Sunday.

TO TEACH THE GIRLS TO PROTECT THE YOUNG MEN.

The Fort Wayne workers for the Y. W. C. A. campaign fund, in stating the plan of the great national organization to protect and guide the girls in the camp towns, wish to make it plain that their problem is not to separate the young women from the society of the young soldiers, but to wipe away the possibility of evils arising from conditions as they now threaten. To keep the goung soldier morally clean is not to rob him of the society of women and girls in the cantonments and camp towns. Rather, it is to be accomplished by making it possible for him to enter and enjoy the society of those who are suitable social companions. It is the business of the Y. W. C. A. to train young women to perform this great service, not only for the moral safety of the young man but for the strength and beauty of her own character.

Before the campaign for war work funds is started next week by the teams of women representing the Young Women's Christian association, every citizen of Fort Wayne should thoroughly understand the perilous situation which confronts the nation centering in the cantonment towns.

The situation is suggested by the fact that in some of the cantonments from 30,000 to 40,000 young men have been brought together from every sort of home into one great mass. Thousands of these young men are off duty a part of each day. They flock into the towns for entertainment and recreation, oftentimes beyond the influence of the organizations within the camp which are designed to keep them away from the evil influences which are crowding about camps just outside the "five mile" limit. This condition has caused the influx of hundreds of young women and girls of good character who are needed in the restaurants, laundries, hotels and the various enterprises which are booming because of the new and altogether unexpected conditions. These conditions have brought to a common center a condition which has thrust upon the United States government one of its gravest problems—that of preserving the high moral standard of the military camps. The scene is as new to the young woman as it is to the young man. To both the situation possesses a novelty which allows the most unanticipated elements to enter into the scheme of things. It is a dangerous situation unless handled not only by the Y. M. C. A. in looking after the interests of the young men but by the Y. W. C. A. in guiding the young woman. It is to secure money to handle this and other big problems of the war that hundreds of Fort Wayne women will enter upon a thorough canvass next week, beginning Monday.

Sunday Mass Meeting.

Opening with a mass meeting at the Y. W. C. A. building at 4:30 Sunday afternoon, to be addressed by Miss Frances M. Crittenden, of Chicago, the campaign will have its enthusiastic beginning on Monday morning, when nine teams of women workers will begin their drive for funds. Miss Crittenden has just completed the rounds of visiting the cantonment towns and will speak with authority on the needs as she found them.

The Fosdick commission, in turning to the Y. W. C. A. to undertake this big task, recognized the value of the organization which has passed through fifty-one years of experience in training young people for their highest places of usefulness in life.

The Captains.

The captains of the nine teams which will begin work Monday morning are: Mrs. D. A. Corey, Mrs. J. R. Meriwether, Mrs. George A. Jacobs, Mrs. O. E Mohler, Mrs E. G. Morgan, Mrs. W. G. Zahrt, Mrs. Edward White, Mrs. Jules Simon and Mrs. W. O. McBride. As the leaders of the Business Girls, Misses Grace Hines and Elsa Hoff have been selected. Each of the teams will have ten members. Mrs. B. H. Hudson, chairman of the campaign committee, with her co-workers, Mrs. George Evans, Mrs. A. J. Vesey, Mrs. F. S. Hunting, Mrs. F. J. Thieme and Miss Anna Roehm, as well as the officers and executive staff of the "Y-W," are intensely interested in the success of the campaign, and there will be "some stir" when the teams begin their rounds.

The girls' work committee of the association will have as its special field of endeavor the instructors of the schools. The extension committee will work in the five factories in which industrial clubs have been organized by the association.

Huntington Will Do Its Bit.

Mrs. Fred H. McCulloch, chairman; Mrs. J. B. Crankshaw and Mrs. J. R. Meriwether comprise a committee to attend to the organizing of the workers in the outside counties of the district. Word received from Huntington is to the effect that a club of one hundred young women has been organized there under the direction of Mrs. Feiler to attend to Huntington's share of the fund. A large delegation of Huntington people is coming to Fort Wayne Sunday to attend the mass meeting in the afternoon.

The counties composing the Fort Wayne district are: Allen, Steuben, DeKalb, Whitley, Wells, Adams and Lagrange. The district's quota is $21,000.

In Fort Wayne a widespread interest in the campaign is apparent in every quarter where the people understand the need. The fear of the Y. W. C. A. workers is that the people, in the midst of changing conditions, have failed to realize the perilous situation which has created the necessity for the present campaign. To those who understand it, there comes the fealization of the nation's peril, which calls for speedy and patriotic attention.

SWISS TAKE DEEP ALARM

Deny That Any Group of Belligerents Has Asked to Cross Soil.

SEE GERMAN TRICK IN SUCH RUMORS

Fear Stories May be Made to Serve as Pretext for a Violation.

Washington, Nov. 17.—Alarmed that the circulation of rumors saying one set of the European belligerents has asked Switzerland's permission to move troops and war materials through her territory, may be seized by the other belligerents as a pretext to forcibly do the same thing, the Swiss political department has hastened to denounce the rumors as false.

Some of the Swiss press, according to cables received here today, regards the rumors as having been circulated by Germany with the design of seizing upon them as a pretext for moving troops into Italy over the Swiss railroads. The Swiss political department's official announcement, which reached here today, follows:

"In Switzerland, as well as in the belligerent neighboring countries, rumors continue to be circulated to the effect that Switzerland has recently been asked to allow the passage of troops and war materials over her territory. The political department declares that these rumors have no foundation whatever."

RED CROSS KNITTERS INCREASE ACTIVITY

Surgical Dressing Classes to Be Taught Next Week at Chapter Workshop.

Since allying with the Navy League knitters the Red Cross workshop has shown an increased activity in this department. A large donation of $40 was received from a number of Fort Wayne women to aid in this work. The money was raised from a series of bridge parties, and the following ladies were instrumental in raising the fund: Mrs. William Fritz, Mrs. W. W. Chaffin, Mrs. C. I. Loch, Mrs. Carl Schroeder, Mrs. Kenneth Larwile, Mrs. R. W. Metzner, Mrs. Carl Lange, Mrs. Leon Ittenbach, Mrs. C. Barry Tolan, Mrs. M. I. Scott, Mrs. A. F. Rosenberger and Mrs. W. D. Kilgore.

Surgical Dressing Classes.

A number of people hafe inquired at the local workshop to find out if they might be taught to become teachers in the making of surgical dressings and as a result classes will be held all next week in charge of experienced teachers who have secured their teaching certificates from Cleveland, the headquarters of the lake division. Anyone wishing to join these classes should come to the workshop Monday morning. The instructors will be Mrs. Arthur K. Remmel, Mrs. Fred Heiney and Miss Mallie Johns.

Speak at Huntertown.

Mrs. A. L. Johns and Mrs. Fred Heiney spoke at Huntertown Saturday afternoon about the work in surgical dressings. This work has rapidly become the most important Red Cross duty as the need for proper dressings is growing daily more and more urgent, especially since the advent of the American troops into the war.

Mrs. C. D. Ream, 636 Huff street, has introduced another new way for doing her bit for the Red Cross. This lady, who cannot come to the workshop ond help, bakes bread and rolls once a week and sells them, turning over the money to the Red Cross. She gave $2 as her first donation and intends to keep it up each week.

Twenty-one workers from the local chapter attended the supper Friday night given by the Sand Point ladies for the benefit of the Red Cross. The affaiar was a big success and a neat sum will be turned over to the local chapter as the proceeds. The supper was a bounteous chicken repast really worth many times the price charged.

South Bend and Huntington chapters of the Red Cross have sent in several large boxes of Christmas parcels which will be sent to the soldiers in the various training camps and cantonments.

TWO CHIMNEY FIRES.

The city fire department answered two calls Saturday. The first was to 714 Union street, and the second to the residence on the corner of Union and Berry. Both fires were of minor type and entailed but a slight loss.

NOW $1,815 OVER QUOTA

Additional Contributions Are Made to Y. M. C. A. War Work Fund.

FARMERS RESPOND MOST GENEROUSLY

Total for the Seven Counties in This District is $88,188.

HONOR ROLL IS ANNOUNCED

Final reports of solicitors for the war work fund of the Y. M. C. A. show that the project was received with great enthusiasm by all classes. A. F. Hall, country solicitor, states that the farmers responded generously, the quota allotted to them being far outshadowed by their pledges.

Although the Men's club of the First Presbyterian church heads the list with pledges amounting to $12,000, the Quest club is a close second with a total of $8,474. An additional $181 was reported by this organization after the totals were announced Friday afternoon.

Although the local campaign was scheduled to be run three days only, owing to the fact that the national campaign will not close until Monday evening, and the size of the local work the campaign will be extended here also until Monday evening. Among the amounts received Saturday was $150 from Mrs. Phoebe Hamilton and her daughters, Misses Katherine and Jessie. An error to be rectified is the amount subscribed by Henry J. Miller, a previous statement credited his subscription as being $100, which should have been $200.

Allen county's total has reached $47,188, $1,815 more than the quota. This includes $610 from sixty-one high school boys and additional subscription of the Bowser employes of $360 and of the Pennsylvania employes of $200. Washington township subscribed $655, which puts it at the head of Allen county townships, outside of Fort Wayne, for which much credit is due Leonard Stolte and E. B. Harris. The total contributions in the county, outside of Fort Wayne, was $5,669 up to noon today. The totals of the seven counties up to noon today were as follows:

Adams, $5,152, quota $5,000; Huntington, $12,616, quota $12,000; Wells, $4,500, quota $6,000; DeKalb, $8,532, quota $6,000; Steuben, $3,000, quota $4,000; Whitley, $7,200, quota $6,000; Allen, $47,188, quota $45,000. Total of the seven counties, $88,188, just $4,188 more than the quota.

THE DEFEAT OF KERENSKY

MAIN JOB TO UPSET THE WEAK PREMIER

Officers Blame Kerensky for Wrecking Discipline of Army.

Petrograd, Wednesday, Nov. 14.—The battle in which Premier Kerensky was defeated began last Saturday and continued until Monday night, according to the commander in chief of the Bolsheviki staff. The premier had 5,000 Cossacks and several hundred military cadets with considerable artillery. The Maximalist force included four guard regiments, several battalions of sailors and numerous detachments of the Red Guard.

Many of the Bolsheviki soldiers were wounded and a few were killed. The Cossacks in Kerensky's force once attempted a charge near Tsarskoe-Selo but suffered heavy losses, after which they retired into the town. The Maximalists now hold Tsarskoe-Selo.

Bluebloods and Pale.

The correspondent of The Associated Press visited the scene of the fighting today and was surprised to find aristocratic officers commanding the Bolsheviki. One of them, who was a colonel, explained that they were disappointed with Kerensky, who first destroyed discipline in the army, and were against him above all.

A colonel of one of the Petrograd guard regiments is now commander of the Bolsheviki staff and directs the operations of his army from a house on a hilltop, two miles beyond Pulkova. Describing the fight he said:

"The battle began Saturday and continued until Monday night. Kerensky had only 5,000 Cossacks, several hundred military cadets, a considerable quantity of light and heavy artillery and one armored train. Our forces included four of the famous Petrograd guard regiments, together with several battalions of sailors and a large number of the Red Guard.

Kerensky's Fatal Charge.

"Our forces were under a continuous shell fire and many were wounded. Only a few were killed. At one time a squadron of Kerensky's Cossacks attempted a charge near Tsarskoe-Selo. They evidently were not familiar with the fact that officers of veteran regiments were with the Maxamilist forces and to their surprise they were met by organized resistance. A heavy volley, which toppled many of their horses, caused them heavy losses. This was the last activity of the Kerensky forces to attack. Afterward, they retreated. We now hold Tsarskoe-Selo."

One soldier who had been captured by the Cossacks and had escaped to his own lines told the correspondent that Kerensky's Cossacks had determined to surrender unless he was able to reinforce them with "60,000 troops." The premier, the soldier said, promised to get them.

Tour of the Battlefield.

The correspondent made a tour of thebattlefield in a Petrograd drosky whose driver calmly directed his fat horse over the military road dodging huge lorries and Red Cross motors homeward bound with wounded. Members of the Red Guard coming from the battlefield walked along the roads singing. Some carried pretzels on their bayonets. These are obtainable in Tsarskoe-Selo but not in Petrograd where only black bread is sold.

At Pulkova where the soldiers, sailors and Red Guard shared their soup and black bread and discussed the victory which had started the inhabitants of the small village, the correspondent was directed to staff headquarters.

Extraordinary Contrast.

There was an extraordinary contrast among the occupants of the bare, lamp lighted room which apparently had once been the arbor of a farm house. Seated about a pine table were some officers, who, though unshaven and battle worn, showned plain evidences of their aristocratic training. With them were a few common soldiers, plain sailors from the Baltic fleet and one workman wearing the badge of the Red Guard. These shared their common fare with the correspondent and explained that they were all fighting together against kerensky.

The fact that the officers directing the Bolsheviki campaign were aristocrats was a surprise in view of the popular supposition that the Bolsheviki included only the proletraiat. A staff colonel explained this as follows:

"You probably are surprised to find officers, many of whom fought bravely and were wounded in the campaigns against the Germans, fighting with the Bolsheviki. The truth is, we were disappointed with Kerensky, who first destroyed discipline in the army, and we are against him above all."

Bemoan Reduced Pay.

This attitude was observed plainly at regimental staff headquarters, where the officers rejoiced over the victory, but beboamed the reported decision of the Maximalist government to reduce all officers to the same pay as privates—7½ rubles a month—and to force them to wear the same uniforms.

The Bolsheviki troops display an amusing attitude in obeying the officers without question, but at the same time [illegible] (material) aid of. Numerous drosky rides made insisting on equal rights elsewhere than on the battlefield.

That there is efficiency in the direction of the Maximalist army could be noted by the long motor trains of stores, ambulances and artillery which were going toward Pulkova tonight as the correspondent's drosky returned to Petrograd.

FIND BOMB HARMLESS

DESIGN APPEARS TO HAVE BEEN A PANIC

Experts Find Bomb Could Have Done Very Little Damage.

Chicago, Nov. 17.—Bomb experts today established that the contrivance set off at the Auditorium theater last night during a performance of grand opera was not of itself expected to do damage, but was evidently intended to start a panic in which many lives would be trampled out.

The so-called bomb, made of a gas pipe with a little loose powder inside, "would not have killed a fly," according to Chief of Police Schuettler.

The instrument was turned over to the chief by federal authorities today and it was examined by three experts on explosives, one of them employed by a big powder company and the others members of the New York bomb squad. The chief's report was based on their testimony. The fact that it was not an explosive, however, has not minimized the seriousness of the outrage.

The great theater, seating 5,000 persons, was practically filled with a music-loving audience, including many persons socially well known to hear "Dinorah."

A panic in such an audience might have paralyzed Chicago, as did the tragic Iroquois theater fire fourteen years ago. The very vastness of the theater probably prevented panic. Except in the immediate neighborhood, where the "bomb" sizzled away in smoke, the spectators were not aware of what had happened.

There was something of a movement toward the exits but it stopped almost in its tracks when Director Campanini started the big orchestra to playing "The Star Spangled Banner." The clear untroubled soprano of Galli Curica rang out the words of the song.

SUFFRAGETTES MAY GET OUT ON HABEAS CORPUS

Richmond, Nov. 17.—Federal Judge Waddill today ordered a writ of habeas corpus issued seeking the release of 28 women's party militants doing sentences at Occoquan workhouse for picketing the white house and a set hearing for Nov. 27 at Alexandria, Va. The application for the writ alleged acts of cruelty and charged as an example that Lucy Burns vice-chairman of the woman's party had been handcuffed to the bars of a cell formerly used for the incarceration of prisoners in delirium treatments.

TORPEDO-PROOF SHIPS WILL BE BUILT IN U. S.

Washington, Nov. 17.—The shipping board has approved the building of twenty 40,000-ton non-sinkable ships by the French government in the United States. By so doing it has waived the rule that no foreign construction should be permitted at this time.

The non-sinkable ship, developed by French experts, is said to have withstood torpedo attack in a test in which four shots were fired into the hull and the only effect was to destroy the cargo immediately surrounding the point of attack.

ZURICH SCENE OF PEACE RIOT.

Zurich, Nov. 17.—The police were obliged to use their sabres to break up a pacifist manifestation here last evening. Several persons were wounded. Numerous arrests were made.

CITY TO SECURE LADY FOOD AGENT

Campaign to Raise $1,200 to Be Started Soon—Miss Cowan Speaks.

At a meeting held Friday afternoon by the Parent-Teachers' clubs and other women organizations, resolutions were adopted to secure a woman home demonstration agent. To rthe purpose of equipping an office and for the purchase of supplies and equipment a canvass will be started soon to raise a sum of $1,200.

Miss Elizabeth Cowan, of Washington, D. C., sent out by the government to establish food demonstration centers in all of the larger cities, was present at the meeting and urged that these steps b etaken. Much enthusiasm was shown at this meeting and the heads of the various organizations will soon name committees to take charge of the canvass.

WILL RESTRICT SHIPMENTS FOR FUEL SITUATION

Washington, D. C., Nov. 17.—Following the official announcement today that the priority shipment board would curtail shipments of non-essentials only on recommendation of the fuel inspector it became apparent that Fuel Inspector Garfield would prepare such recommendations to meet the coal shortage, estimated at fifty million tons.

LADY SMUGGLER FINED.

New York, Nov. 17.—Fines aggregating $8,000 were imposed in the federal court here today on Mrs. Whitney Warren, wife of a wealthy New York architect and treasurer of the Secours national fund for the relief of French women and children, who pleaded guilty of undervaluing expensive gowns she brought into this country from Paris.

AERIAL PLAY WILL MARK SUNDAY'S GAME

Both the Columbus Panhandles and the Friars Rely on Open Style.

One of the largest crowds of the season will be present Sunday to witness the game between the Columbus Panhandlers and the Fort Wayne Friars. The visiting team, as usual, will have one of the best teams in the west and a hard game may be expected. In the last two previous seasons, at their annual game, the Friars have outlucked the Buckeye team and won, both times by a 3 to 0 score. On previous occasions the Panhandles have come with a heavy team and depended on straight football for their gains. This year they will use a light but speedy backfield and depend on aerial play and open field end runs. This is the same game that the Friars have been using and so one of the fastest and most sensational games of the season will be seen.

Five of the famous Nesser brothers, always a drawing card in this city, are making the trip with the Panhandles and will be seen in action. Corcoran and Davis are new men in the back field. Both are light, weighing about 150 pounds, but are fast and extremely dangerous if they ever get loose with the ball. Brigham, at center, is another light man who is recognized as one of the best centers in the game. He has turned down offers to play with various Ohio college teams.

The Panhandles have been playing with the best teams of the west for a number of years and have made a reputation as "the team that is never beaten." This honor is paid them because they never give up and fight all the way against all odds. Their famous drive toward the close of the game last season will never be forgotten, when they carried the ball nearly the full length of the field by straight line plunges, only losing the ball on a fumble just as the game closed.

The same Friar team will take the field that did such effective work last Sunday against Racine. Elward and Glockson will be held in reserve and may be expected to get into the contest when they are most needed. Helvie and Berghoe will start the game at ends, but may be replaced by Huntington and Elward. Pliska and Specht will start the game at the halves with Chambers at full. Smith and Young will get in the second half.

The preliminary game will be between the Tigers and the Overland Specials and should be one of the best preliminaries of the season as both teams are made up of a number of young stars who are expected to mix it from whistle to whistle. The lineup follows:

Columbus.	Friars.
L. E., Stiles.	L. E., Helve (U)
L. T., Kuehner (O)	L. T., Jones (C)

PENNSYLVANIA MEETS MICHIGAN TODAY

Philadelphia, Nov. 17.—Pennsylvania and the University of Michigan met on Franklin field today in what was considered one of the most important inter-sectional football contests of the season. Michigan has not been beaten this year and her goal line has not been crossed since early in the season, while Pennsylvania met defeat at the hands of both Georgia Technical and Pittsburg. The Wolverines outweighed the Pennsylvania eleven, their line averaging 177½ pounds and the back field 164¾, compared to 171 and 158½ for the Quakers. The game started at 2:30 p. m.

Of the twelve games played between th etwo teams, Pennsylvania has won six, Michigan four and two were tied.

LAJOIE A MANAGER.

Cleveland, Nov. 17.—Managing a major league in 1918 is among the possibilities for Napoleon Lajoie, the former Cleveland star, who piloted the Toronto club to a championship in the International league last season. Although he signed only a one-year contract, Lajoie is assured of his berth in Toronto if he wishes to return.

Lajoie, who is spending the winter in Cleveland, asserts he will make no effort to obtain a better berth, but that he will not refuse a major league managership. Lajoie apparently believes in the old political adage that "the office should seek the man."

FOR A BIG BAG OF DUCKS HUNT IN MARSHES AND USE A BLIND, SAYS ACKERMAN

(By Morris Ackerman, Famous Hunter and Trapper.)

Outside of rabbits there probably are more ducks shot than any other American game.

You get that—"American game?" Really we should say that there are more ducks shot in the United States than any other kind of game, with the possible exception of rabbits.

Broadly speaking the wild duck is not a native of this country, as it breeds in the vast territory above the northern line of the United States and winters south of our boundaries.

It is on the fall migration that we get our best duck shooting, as the federal law prohibits the killing of migratory birds in the spring. There are several successful legal ways of hunting ducks, depending on the location and layout of each hunting place.

The best territory, the easiest hunted and with the largest bags is marsh ground. The marches offer wild rice and other vegetation that the ducks want and must have to sustain them on their long trips and as it is a natural feeding ground that is where you find them.

This is especially so of the mallard, black duck, teal and other non-diving ducks.

In this kind of hunting a blind is essential. That made of grass and rushes or weeds, stands about four feet high and is built right in the marsh. The ducks are either called in or decoyed, or both.

In marsh shooting the weather, while a consideration, does not spell half so much as is the case of ponds or lakes, where there is no food to entice ducks.

It takes good rough weather to bring in the ducks to the little ponds and lakes, and in order to have success you must be concealed in a blind, or in the weeds, along the lee shore.

In hunting certain varieties of ducks, such as ruddies, you can sneak up on them in a boat. While there is always a chance of sneaking up on most any kind of ducks, either in marshes or ponds, where you punt near the shore and where they are coves and bays along the shore line.

It may be said that duck hunting is not for the weak—that "the rougher the weather the better the shooting."

WABASH MEETS PURDUE AT LAFAYETTE TODAY

I. U. and DePauw Play at Bloomington — Other Indiana Games.

Purdue and Wabash at Lafayette, and Indiana and DePauw at Bloomington met on the football field this afternoon. Notre Dame played the Michigan Aggies at Notre Dame. Earlham met Butler at Indianapolis, and at Terre Haute Rose Poly played St. Louis university.

While Purdue naturally is much interested in the outcome of the game today with Wabash, it also is watching the result of that between Indiana and DePauw. The same is true of Indiana students in regard to their own game, and the one between Purdue and Wabash. The reason is that Purdue and Indiana have their annual game next Saturday, and each hopes to "get a line on the other" through today's results.

Wabash has developed a much stronger team than its early season games promised. Since its defeat by Indiana in its second game it has strengthened the weak places, and last Saturday held DePauw to one touchdown. DePauw started with a strong team and has not gone backward by any means. Early in the season Purdue was able to defeat DePauw by one point only.

Coach Stiehm during the past week not only trained his men for the DePauw game today, but also for the Purdue game. The same can be said of Coach O'Donnell at Purdue. He has had his mind on the Indiana game while handling his men for today's contest.

At Bloomington there has been much secret practice, some of it being by electric light. DePauw has been trying a number of new plays all week, and some of them promised shifts in today's lineup. Indiana is handicapped today by injuries to no less than six of its better men.

Earlham and Butler went into today's contest with stronger teams than they had at the last previous games. Earlham had both Jessup and Brown, its two halfbacks, again in the lineup.

WILL SAVE REGULARS FOR SATURDAY'S GAME

Bloomington, Ind., Nov. 17.—Coach Jumbo Stiehm, of Indiana, expected to save his regulars in the game with DePauw on Jordan field here this afternoon for the Purdue game here next Saturday. The DePauw squad, accompanied by 200 rooters, arrived this morning determined to carry the fight to the Crimson.

ATHLETIC HEADS TAKEN.

Lawrence, Kan., Nov. 17.—The war has taken three heads of Kansas university's athletic department. Herman Olcott, coach of the university's football eleven, has accepted, for the duration of the war, a position to assist in directing athelties and the physical education of the 12,000 men at the Great Lakes Naval Training station.

George "Potsy" Clark, who was Olcott's assistant last year, is a second lieutenant at Camp Funston. Leon B. McCarty, former coach of the freshman team, is a first sergeant in a company of Kansas engineers.

This was Olcott's third year at Kansas university. He coached football teams and weight men for the field events. This fall he put his football squad through a period of military drill at the end of each day's practice.

MUCH IS AT STAKE IN TODAY'S GAME

Ohio-Illinois Gridiron Battle to Decide Championship Title.

Columbus, O., Nov. 17.—With the championship of the western conference at stake, Illinois and Ohio football teams are ready to battle at Ohio field this afternoon. Neither team has been defeated this season and followers of the gridiron sport predict a bitter game, with the advantage resting slightly with the Ohioans, last year's champions.

Both coaches refused this morning to make predictions, but stated they would have their regular teams on the field and it would be a fight to the finish. Last year's game was a 7 to 3 victory for Ohio. The probable lineup:

DECLINES TO SEND HORSE EAST.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 17.—John W. Schorr, of Memphis, Tenn., has declined to send Cudgel, his three-year-old, east to race against Omar Khayyam at Bowie for a purse of $5,000, because he was unable to arrange for satisfactory transportation. Cudgel, after the close of the Latonia meeting, with the other Schoor horses, was brought here for the winter.

Nothwithstanding the Cudgel was defeated Nov. 10 in his last start of the season, when he finished third to Rancher and Arriet at Latonia, horsemen who saw the race agree that it was a remarkable performance. Cudgel was assigned 135 pounds and after having been practically left, the son of Broomstick was timed the mile in 1:35 4-5 and a mile and an eighth in 1:49 2-5.

Mr. Schorr has said he would like nothing better than the opportunity to race Cudgel against Omar Khayyam, Westy Hogan and other eastern cracks, "just to show the truf world what my colt can do, but he has had a hard season and is entitled to a rest."

FIGHTER AT CAMP TAYLOR.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 17.—Jimmy Dunn, for ten years a professional boxer and for years manager of prize fighters, has taken up his duties at Camp Zachary Taylor as boxing instructor to a considerable portion of the 30,000 selected men from Indiana, Kentucky and Southern Illinois. At present Dunn is attached as a civilian under the committee on training camp activities.

Dunn sponsored Johnny Kilbane, featherweight champion and at one time had thirty-two fighters under his wing.

Dunn's work at the camp is with the infantry school of arms, and in it he teaches especially capable men the art of self-defense, and they in turn will act as instructors for their companies. Army officers say that boxing teaches men to take punishment and increase their self-confidence.

MIKE O'DOWD DRAGS MIDDLEWEIGHT CROWN FROM BROW OF AL M'COY

(By Paul Purman.)

The middleweight crown which has for several years rested uneasily on the brow of Al McCoy, the Brooklyn southpaw, has been clawed from Al's dome and now adorns the curly head of Mike O'Dowd, the Fighting Harp," of St. Paul.

It is going too far to say that Mike O'Dowd is the greatest middleweight fighter today, but by a curious freak of fortune he has the tile and unless all signs fail will hang onto it with a death grip.

The middleweight title has been buffeted unmercifully since the death of Stanley Ketchell. Billy Papke first claimed it and defended it successfully against Willie Lewis in Paris in 1910.

The next year Cyclone Johnny Thompson defeated Pape and claimed the championship, but in 1912 both outgrew the title which remained in abeyance until Frank Klaus claimed it by virtue of a victory over Papke in 1913. His claims were pretty generally recognized.

Early in 1914 Chip unfortunately ran into a punch in the first round of his bout with Al McCoy and the latter assumed the title. McCoy was never a real champion, and usually dodged anyone who was likely to knock him out. He was beaten repeatedly in no-decision bouts, but O'Dowd was the first to make him take the count.

O'Dowd is a native of St. Paul. He recently graduated from the welterweight class and has not been taken very seriously as a middleweight. He is 22 years old, and has been fightnig since 1913.

PURDUE AND WABASH IN ANNUAL CLASH

Lafayette, Ind., Nov. 17.—Purdue met Wabash in Stuart field here this afternoon with the strongest lineup it has presented at any time this season. The field was fast and championship play was expected. Donovan, of the Boilermakers, hoped to be able to keep his plays under cover for the game with Indiana next Saturday. Today's contest is the last home game for Purdue.

TWO NOTRE DAME MEN OUT OF TODAY'S GAME

Notre Dame, Ind., Nov. 17.—With two regulars, Gipp and Miller, out of the Notre Dame lineup Coach Harper was forced to send the lightest team that has represented Notre Dame in five years against the Michigan Aggies, when the two elevens met on Cartier field this afternoon. The team averages only 165 pounds. The Aggie squad arrived last night.

TED HAS HIM BEAT.

We slandered Jess Willard the other day when we said he was in a class by himself because he had contributed three minutes of boxing to U. S. soldiers. Ted Lewis goes him one better. He hasn't contributed anything.

The guys who watch a wrestling match are spectators. They ought to be a jury.

Ban Johnson is hunting in the south. Ban ought to do pretty well. All he would have to do would be to order the deers to stop running so he could get a shot at them.

Among things to lose sleep over is the fact that the basketball season will start soon.

REAL MARTHONERS.

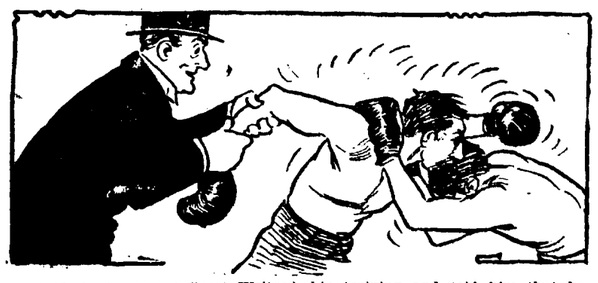

Sidney Hatch, the long distance runner, has joined the army. It's to be hoped they don't send him to the Russian front. We like to have our championships stay in America and its a cinch there are at least 2,000,000 men in the Russian army who can beat Sid.

SURETHING PREDICTION FORCES ATTELL TO KNOCK OUT BAKER

(By Ed Moriarity, Noted Sport Writer.)

Sport fans wonder often how sport writers are courageous enough to risk being "shown up" as a result of strong predicitions which the writers make on coming sport events.

Many times ye scribe is banking on his general knowledge. Often, like the average fan, he discovers, when too late, that personal prejudice figured in his prediction.

But sometimes he possesses information which enables him accurately to foretell what may be expected to happen, if he can depend upon the participants 'levelling,' which is to say, combating on the square.

Here is an example of how the "dope" was discovered in one instance and worked perfectly. Some years ago a promising featherweight boxer, Harry Baker, of San Francisco, lost a twenty round decision to Abe Attell, then champion feather. Some of the papers hailed Baker as a coming champion and likely to defeat Abe the next time out.

One sport writer had noticed that at the end of several rounds Attell would let loose for a few seconds and rush Baker toward the ropes. The men were rematched.

The sport writer went to Attell during his training and told him that he was certain he had stalled with Baker the first time.

"Are you going in for a knockout this time?" he asked Abe. The latter said he was. "Kid" Dalton, a hardy boy, who had lost several decisions to Baker, was training Attell. Your sport writer knew Baker never could knock Dalton out.

Attell and Dalton agreed to fight—not spar—two hard rounds in private for the benefit of the sport writer. In the second round the scribe was forced to pull Attell off Dalton, the latter being in danger of a knockout."

"You can knock Baker out if you want to. If you don't, it'll look bad to me, Abe," proclaimed the key tapper.

The betting was 3 to 1 that Baker would not be knocked out. The scribe went back to his office and insisted in his paper that the fight should end in a knockout if Attell really fought. The trouble ended in the eighth round when Abe sent Baker down for the count.

This was an instance when the writer was not guessing as regarded Abe's ability to score a knockout victory—and he had the champion's word that he would "level."

RELIGION, TEMPERANCE AND HEALTH

BY REV. R. P. ANDERSON.

Some years ago I came across a French novel that threw a lurid light upon the natural history of sin.

Sin, of course, is a word that jars upon cultured ears, like the word hell. We do not like to hear it, or to be reminded in a personal way that we are sinners. The fact is too ugly.

From a pretty little town in the provinces came a bright young man to study law in Paris. He was hungry for a taste of life, eager to learn, not only from books, but from contact with living souls. He was hungry, too, like a healthy young animal, for pleasure, for the gilded joys of the crowded boulevard, the cafe, and, above all, for love.

He met a young girl, a seamstress, alone in Paris, and quite as lonely and as hungry for friendship and love as he himself was. On bright Sundays they would go out together to the woods and spend happy hours in simple pleasure. They loved, or, at least, alas! the girl loved, and her love brought her shame. For the man had no intention of marrying. That would spoil his career. Besides, it would shock his family. His studies over, he disappeared.

Left to her fate the girl struggled on, heroically endeavoring to support herself and her child, a pretty boy. But the struggle proved too hard for her slender strength. She died, and her boy was sent by the authorities to an institution.

In the cold and inhuman atmosphere of this place he grew to young manhood, repressed, beaten, cowed, until his heart was hot against all men. At length, unable to endure the torture longer, he ran away and became part of that floating mass of humanity that rises like scum at night to the surface of Parisian life. He lived in the gutter. What he needed he stole. His meals were often filthy crusts. His pleasures were those of swine.

Then one day, hungry and desperate, he determined to rob a Jewish pawnbroker. He entered the shop, his purpose was detected, and in a fury of uncontrollable rage he slew the man—for bread.

And now comes the terrible irony of the story.

The boy's father had succeeded in life. By this time he was a famous lawyer and held the office of public prosecutor. In this capacity the case of the boy murderer was assigned to him and he set about obtaining the conviction of his own son.

Consider a moment. In those roseate days of youth sin was to this lawyer as a sweet and desirable morsel. He did not stop to think of possible consequences. Youth rarely does that. He lived in the ebullient moment. The fruit of the tree looked good in his eyes and he plucked it, ripe, and devoured it.

Sin offers pleasure to its devotees, and it keeps its word. It is sweet to the taste, honey-sweet, delicious. But it turns to ashes in the mouth.

As time went on the first pangs of sorrow were assuaged—they could hardly be called pangs of conscience, for conscience recognizes guilt, and this man felt only deprivation, annoyance. Then, with more mature thought, he began to realize that he had made a mistake. He often thought of the girl and his baby. Where were they now? They had dropped out of life entirely. He could not even trace them.

That is the second phase of sin. When the sweetness goes out of it, it is recognized as a mistake. Conscience is still drowsy; its eyes are full of sleep. A mistake.

According to the custom of French law the prosecutor questioned the boy murderer in private. As the story of the lad's life was unfolded the man realized the ghastly truth. He was the boy's father. More than that, his heartless abandonment of the mother was undoubtedly the cause of the lad's trouble. He and not the boy was responsible in the last analysis for the murder.

He let the matter run on, fighting a fearful battle in private, his conscience now thoroughly awake. The case was called in court. The facts were indisputable. But the lawyer, in his address to the jury, outlined the life of the boy, telling the story of the abandonment of the mother, of her struggle, of her death; scoring the cruelty of the heartless father, and finally confessing that he was that father, the really guilty man.

And this is the third phase that sin assumes. It is first a sweet morsel. Then it is seen to be a mistake. But it is more than a mistake. It is a curse.

That is the Bible statement about it. A curse! No other word describes it properly. A curse which, like a ploughshare, tears up the sacred things of life!

Most men pass through these three phases in their feeling about sin, even if sin does not rend their lives so dramatically and tragically as it did the life of this lawyer. The thought of sin rests lightly upon the young heart. A feather. No more. But as thought comes, and meditation on the grim realities of life, men see that sin is a blunder. There is no doubt of it. A sad blunder. But they go farther than that. The time comes, especially if they give thought to divine things and study their own hearts with any care, that sin is recognized as more than a blunder. A curse. Oh, a curse!

And that is why the words of Revelation are so precious to some of us: "There shall be no more curse." The torture of broken lives will be removed. The healing hand of Jesus Christ will bind up that which is broken. He alone can remove the curse. That is His mission.

Today we need a clear view of sin, that it may shock us. The saints of old had it and it made them strong men. For as long as we do not see sin for what it is we shall tamper with it.

DOING AS A MEANS OF LIVING.

This do and thou shalt live, said Jesus: for connected with every precept is a promise: and, while the precepts are few, the promises are like the sands of the sea and the stars in heaven for multitude. There are more than thirty thousand promises given us by the covenant-keeping God. By means of a promise Abraham was educated and went forth not knowing whither he went except that God had bidden him. He followed on to know the Lord and so became known as the friend of God. Back of every promise are the resources and the character or God as men learn to "feed upon the faithfulness of God" and so become partakers of the divine nature. "Thou hast magnified thy word above all thy name." So Moses lived as the Lord made known His ways unto Moses, who made God his home, his very abiding place, and declared that a prophet should the Lord make known unto you like unto me.—Bishop Eugene R. Hendrix.

LIFE MADE GREAT BY PURPOSE.

Life can be a very tame, insipid thing, or it may be exhilarating, sparkling like wine; it will depend upon the cause to which life is devoted. Life is made great by the purpose to which life is yoked. You may give a banquet to a thousand, and heaven may not even note it in the log book. You may give a cup of cold water in the name of the King, and all the angels in heaven shall crowd about the gates of the celestial city to witness the deed, and the reward is sure. It is not what you do, nor how long you take in doing it, but rather why you live and strive. Is there a flaming love behind the simple deed? Is there a full consecration that, like a golden thread, runs through the warp and woof of your life? Then(whenever you are taken, it shall be said of you: "It is finished." "Well done, good and faithful servant."—Episcopal Recorder.

"THINGS IMPOSSIBLE WITH MEN"

We have not to travel far before we meet the impossible. We soon reach the end of the short road of "the possible," and then the impossible looms before us! It is possible to restrain a man from crime; it is impossible to restrain him from sin. We can compel a man to pay his income tax; it is impossible to compel him to be generous. We can readjust a man's circumsatnces; we cannot renew a man's heart. We can educate; we cannot regenerate. We can refurnish a man's mind; we cannot give him the mind of Christ. We can give him courtesy; we cannot endow him with grace. We may give him good manners; we cannot make him a good man. We may save him from worldly excesses; we cannot make him immune from the contagion of the world. We may "patch up a bad job," but we have no power of new creation.—J. H. Iowett, D. D.

THE SACRIFICE

(By GLADSTONE HOLM.)

"Bring forth the best ye breed!"
So spake Jehovah to the people that were His.
"Ye shall not offer me of beasts that are impaired,
Nor blind nor broken, maimed nor scabbed, nor having wen
Nor scurvy, shall ye bring to me when ye appear
Before my courts to sacrifice to me."

"Bring forth the best ye breed!"
Thus speaks Jehovah in these days of direst need.
"My kingdom that is built foursquare upon the props
Of justice, honor, truth and mercy, fair to see,
Is being invaded by a horde that know me not,
And Freedom struggles bravely for her throne."

"Bring forth the best ye breed!"
So calls fair Freedom from her home on mountain heights.
"Nor lame nor halt nor blind, nor weak nor craven-heart,
But only those endowed with symmetry and grace—
With matchless strength and courage high and glorious faith
To battle for the safety of my realm."

The best we breed are thine!
Our valiant sons who have been sired by those who fought
In freedom's wars; who never have been serfs nor bent
The knee to foreign sway, nor worn the chafing yoke
Imposed by tyrant hand—we give, O God, to Thee,
That freedom shall not perish from the earth.

Nothing Lost by a Reverence for Holy Name, as Girl Shows

(Evaline Wright Nelson in Christian Advocate.)

In our home special emphasis was placed on reverence for the Holy Name and the Holy Day.

After father's death an inventory of stock showed good stuff for farm trade: overalls, work suits, heavy shoes, etc. I rented an old schoolhouse at the center of a thrifty agricultural section, transported the goods by wagon and engaged an auctioneer acquainted with the people. It was a unique experience for a town woman unused to trade.

The second day the auctioneer said: "I see old Captain B— coming; he'll make things hum. He lives miles away, goes to all the sales, buys for everybody in his neighborhood and treats the folks well." The Captain certainly boomed the bidding and kept the boys laughing. While success seemed surer every hour, the burden on my heart grew heavier, for as he became better acquainted with the stock and felt more at home he punctuated his humor more and more with the Holy Name.

He came early the next morning and business looked good. My prayer that the Holy Spirit would touch his heart and check his blasphemy had not been answered. Under pretext of having a bill changed, for he had abundance of small change, I took him aside, and said, "Captain, you have been so nice to us I regret to say it, but this is my place of business; you profane the name of my best Friend: I am obliged to ask you not to do so." He went back to his bidding for a few minutes, then withdrew to another part of the room, manifesting no interest.

At noon the auctioneer said, "It's all up: you've spoiled everything: old Cap's mad and won't buy any more." I could only reply that, cost what it might, profanity would not be permitted.

That afternoon, when the greatest crowd of the week was there, the old sailor, who had been bidding hard since dinner time, pointed his finger at me in a way he never dreamed was embarrassing, and called out, "You're a chip of the old block. Your daddy told me many a time to quit swearing or leave his store."

We shook hands and the bidding went on.

Anti-Gossip Crusade Starts After Gossip Had Slain Its Victim

(Home and School.)

A terrible tragedy in an English village lately culminated in the coroner's verdict, "Killed by idle gossip." So great was the stir in the public mind all over the country that an anti-gossip crusade was started, so an English weekly tells.

A society has been formed, to embrace rich and poor alike. The members take a vow to avoid either starting or spreading any unkind remarks about anyone else, or listening to a person who tries to spread gossip. To repeat what has been heard, even if true, is counted as bad as to set the ball rolling.

The organizers of the crusade believe that even the worst gossips talk scandal more as a matter of habit than through any malicious desire to injure others. They are convinced that the majority of talkers can be reformed by keeping the thought before their minds that gossip is evil and dangerous.

The first breach of rules is punished by a fine of one shilling, the next pays a forfeit of two shillings, and so on, up to ten shillings. After that the offender is blackballed as an "incurable." Of course, no one wishes to have the reputation of being an incurable gossip.

"Before making a statement to anyone, do not forget to let it pass the three golden gates—It is true? Is it needful? Is it kind? These form the motto of the anti-gossip crusade."

The third chapter of James, of course, is the proper Scripture reading for the members, being as timely today as it was nineteen hundred years ago, when people gossiped in Greek and Hebrew, instead of the modern languages.

Sin Should Be Seen In Its Worst Aspect Says Doctor Jowett

Anything which makes sin less sinful connives at sin. Anything that glosses sin, that varnishes it, that decorates it, is in reality a minister of sin. And in this way even our very forgiveness can be the enemy of virtue and the barrier to a holy life. In our desire to be "nice" we are often hurtful, and in our wish to be sweet and pleasant we are often morally and spiritually destructive. We may smother the report of an open sewer with a flask of eau de cologne. Our forgiveness may be just sweet-scented sentiment, and the uncleanliness of the sin is only daintily concealed. If the holy Lord is to forgive our sin, it must be in some way that will not make light of it. However he may forgive us, the sin which is forgiven must not appear light and frivolous; it must appear exceedingly sinful, black with the blackness of the blackest night. If the holy Lord made sin less awful by the manner of his forgiveness, what an awful world would this become! It is at the cross of Christ that we see what divine forgiveness has cost. At the cross the guilt of sin is forgiven, while its appalling nature is revealed.

Gardeners who had only evenings in which to care for their vegetable patches, were handicapped by the little daylight allowed them. With this difficulty in view, a New Orleans electrical company has put on the market a light, which readily lights a fair-sized garden. This light is mounted on a pole, and its glow intensified by a reflector. The lower end of the pole is pointed, and set firmly in the soft soil. The plug may be attached to a socket within the house.

YOUR HEALTH AND HOW YOU CAN KEEP IT

Carriers of Diphtheria Germs and Care They Should Get.

This condition may follow their recovery from diphtheria and may persist in exceptional cases a long time, owing very largely to the presence of tiny spots of inflammation often in the tonsils, which do not disturb the person's general health.

It may also follow their recovery from such mild cases of diphtheria that the disease was not recognized.

Persons who have never had diphtheria may, themselves, become "carriers" after exposure to cases of the disease or "carriers" of the germs.

Treatment for carriers should be as follows:

1. Fresh air, sunlight, a simple nourishing diet with outdoor exercise and a most careful personal hygiene.

2. Operative treatment on the mucous membrane of the nose and throat is often necessary to remove abnormalties or inflammatory processes such as adenoids or enlarged tonsils.

3. Local treatment is most important. This should include a thorough douching of the nose and throat three or four times daily for several weeks. In the nose bland washes, such as normal salt solution, in the throat bland washes or antiseptics, of which a 30 per cent. solution of alcohol is most efficacious.

Cultures should be taken on two successive days at intervals of one or two weeks to ascertain the effect of treatment.

What Tartar is and How It Slowly Forms on Teeth.

Tartar is a deposit of lime-like material from the saliva mixed with food particles which forms around the neck of the teeth at the edge of the gum.

These deposits are invisible at first, being usually on the inner surfaces of the lower front teeth and on the outer surfaces of the upper teeth.

They cause the gums to become swollen, sore and bleeding. Later the gums recede, exposing delicate portions of the teeth to the possibility of decay.

If this tartar is allowed to continue, pus pockets form and eventually the tooth is lost.

To avoid tartar, the teeth should be cleaned by thoroughly brushing at least twice a day, and a dentist should examine the teeth and remove any tartar deposits regularly twice a year.

Pyorrhea or Riggs disease is a disease of the sockets of the teeth. While it resembles tartar, it is a much more loathsome and persistent disease.

A dirty, vile-smelling mouth is a reproach to anybody, and a partial set of decayed, diseased snags and remnants of teeth are so many monuments to the owner's stupidity, ignorance and indolence.

Bad teeth are an unnecessary evil, a sin of omission.

Things That Should Be Done for the Newly Arrived Baby.

When the baby comes—

There should be a soft, warm blanket to receive it.

The eyes should be carefully cleansed with a saturated solution of boric acid using a separate piece of sterile absorbent cotton for each eye, and into each eye the doctor or nurse should put two or three drops of a 2 per cent. solution of nitrate of silver to prevent sore eyes and, possibly, blindness.

There are thousands of people in this country who had their eyes been treated when they were tiny babies would not now be blind.

After the baby's eyes have been cleansed and treated the body should be oiled with warm sterilized sweet oil or vaseline.

At birth there is on the baby's skin, particularly under the arms, between the fingers and toes, and in the creases of the skin, an accumulation of a white cheese-like substance that can only be removed with oil.

If the baby is robust, after the oil bath a warm water bath may be given. Keep the child warm and covered as much as possible during the bath, which must be gently but quickly given.

The baby should be placed in a quiet, darkened room, properly protected against the cold, but not surrounded with too many hot water bags or bottles.

The baby should have a bed by itself. A large clothes basket makes a satisfactory bed for a little baby. It can be moved easily and kept clean. When the baby sits up, it is a good place in which to play. The basket should be furnished with a hair pillow for a mattress protected by a piece of rubber sheeting or oilcloth and a picee of padding over that.

THE BEAUTY OF GOODNESS.

Did it ever strike you that goodness is not merely a beautiful thing, but the beautiful thing—by far the most beautiful thing in the world—and that badness is not merely an ugly thing, but the ugliest thing in the world? So that nothing is to be compared for value with goodness; that riches, honor, power, pleasure, learning, the whole world and all in it, are not worth having, in comparison with being good; and the utterly best thing for a man is to be good, even though he were never rewarded for it; and the utterly worst thing for a man is to be bad, even though he were never punished for it; and, in a word, goodness is the only thing worth loving, and badness the only thing worth hating.—Charles Kingsley.

Dying as a Dog Dies Was This Man's Idea of the End of Life

BY DR. JAMES I. VANCE.

"I am going nowhere!" It was a workingman who said it. His wage was small. He was a cog in a machine. He was known on the pay roll not by his name, but by a number. His daily battle was for bread. His constant struggle was for time enough to keep a roof over the heads of his wife and children and to frighten the wolf of want from the door.

I was talking to him about the spiritual side of life and urging him to attend church. I was trying to suggest a horizon wider than the smoky shop and grimy tools. I wanted to make him look up from his monotonous task and feel himself a man. In doing so I spoke of immortality and of the fact that man has two worlds, and that this one is preparation for the next—that time is but a school for eternity. He gazed at me with a quizzical sort of expression and said that he believed when he died that was the last of him. He was not going to heaven and he was not going to hell. He was going nowhere. Man died as a dog dies.

I am free to say that I cannot greatly blame a man who is so beaten down by circumstances that he must live a dog's life for not finding room in his soul for an immortal hope. Such a life has no outlook. There is no window of vision in the house where he dwells, no program but the daily grind. The only battle such a man has time to prepare for is the battle for bread. The only hell he fears is right here on earth. The only heaven he seeks is the heaven of a better house to live in, of a table less bare and a decent chance.

Yet what such a man needs most is an outlook. He is losing the joy and beauty of life because he thinks that a wooden bench is all the world he has. He needs a glimpse of vistas that are endless. He needs to feel the spell of the eternal that he is not a dog but an immortal, not a cog in a machine nor a number on the pay roll of the company, but a child of God whose name is in the Book of Life. He needs to feel in his pulses the beat of an immortal existence, to have his will reinforced with a courage that is divine and the "signet of eternity" pressed down on every transitory task.

The Story of a New Testament and the Good It Performed

(Selected.)

A little girl expressed to her parents one day a wish that they would give her two New Testaments. To the question of her parents why it must be two new testaments, the child replied, that one was for herself and the other to send to the heathen.

She was given the two volumes, and in one of them she wrote: "A little girl who loves the Lord Jesus wishes with all her heart that whoever reads this should also love and believe on Him."

This new testament went to India, and found its way to a station in the interior. A Hindu lady obtained it. She could read, but was unable to write, and as she longed to be able to write, her attention was immediately drawn to the inscription on the flyleaf. The large and distinct characters of the child's handwriting attracted her so much that she tried to imitate them again and again. Gradually the sense of the words made an impression on her, and the question arose: "May not these words have been written for me?" She began then earnestly to read the new testament; her eyes were opened, and she learned to know and love the Saviour.

Years passed on. The little girl had meanwhile grown up and thought no more of the new testament she had sent once upon a time to the heathen, but her love for missions had grown up with her, and it was with joy she went to India. There she entered one day the house of a Hindu Christian lady. In the course of conversation the Hindu lady showed her visitor a book, a new testament, and told her how she, a Hindu heathen, had been by its means brought to Christ.

Imagine the joyful astonishment of the lady missionary when she recognized in the book the same new testament on whose flyleaf she had many years ago, as a little girl written those words which had served to show the poor Hindu lady the way to Jesus. Together they knelt down; praised God's wonderful ways and thanked Him who had drawn them both to Himself.—"Cast thy bread upon the waters: for thou shalt find it after many days."

Harmony in Family Life Possible by Teamwork in Home

Independence, thrift, and domestic harmony on the farm very largely depend upon family co-operation where there is a division of labor and where every member of the family takes an interest in farm work and home making. From the young children to the adult field hands, each should have some responsibility and be anxious to render some assistance to the manager of the farm and the guardian of the home. Such co-operation makes work easy and increases the pleasures of home life.

Just as each member of a large business firm has his respective duties and is required to use his endeavors in such a way as to supplement his associates for the good of the business, so should each member of a farm family labor and plan to advance the interest of the family.

Every schoolboy knows what team work means. It takes united effort, close co-operation, trained muscles, and skilled intellects to win in a football or baseball contest. The team is concerned in winning for the honor of the team more than for any individual, and each individual is honored when the team wins.

In the trials and toils of the farm manager and the keeper of his home, if each member of the family works in harmony for the common interest, farm work is pleasant and is quite likely to be profitable. Such families are able to do their part to the government and to society in meet any emergency.

A SERGEANT OF THE "USAACS" TELLS WHY HE VOLUNTEERED HIS SERVICES FOR THE WAR

(Harry M. Chalfant in the Christian Advocate.)

Years ago I saw him. He was then in his hobby-horse age. Astride a broomstick he could charge the enemy with his little tin sword, or he could outdistance any other steed that ventured on the race course. Weary with hours of vigorous play, his eyes began to blink and he trundled off to his little bed, perchance to dream of new adventures when the day should come again.

The last sight I had of him was on a hot July day, near the end of the month, in this momentuous year of 1917. Place, the city of Allentown, Pa., concentration camp of the United States army ambulance corps. The boys were getting their letters addressed in abbreviation—U. S. A. A. C.—and hence the reference to themselves as the "Usaacs."

When I asked for the first sergeant and his name was called, a young man, busy writing at a table, promptly arose and responded to my inquiry: "I am he, sir." I must confess a measure of surprise. I had not been quite able to follow in my imagination the evolution of the little horseman of a few years ago into the stalwart defender of my country who now stood before me.

He was busy, extremely busy, as I discovered. But in a few minutes he would be able to delegate his task to another and be with me for a quiet little visit. And I soon discovered the reason of the unusual activity all about me. The first sergeant of section number — had been ordered to have his men in shape to move to the front at any hour.

By and by we sat alone. We talked of mutual friends and of his mother, widowed from the childhood days of her boy. And in that moment I thought of her proffered contribution to freedom's cause, he being her only child. I asked him, "why are you here?"

A new expression came upon his face and into his eye. The brawny big sophomore was thinking of the game. I fancied I saw him in the football scrimmage, about to smash through the enemy's line. And then he talked more freely than hitherto. The story was coming, the thing I wanted most of all I was about to get—a revelation of the young man's soul, an uncovering of the motive that was driving him swiftly and resistlessly into the vortex of the great world war.

It was May day when the war fever hit him up there in the university town. He could not sleep for thinking about the thing. He lost all interest in his studies and university sports. He read about war, he talked about war. It awakened him in the morning and went to sleep with him at night. He made up his mind to get in somewhere. He journeyed to Philadelphia. He talked with sailors and soldiers, with privates and commanders. He soon reached a decision. He would serve in the ambulance corps. And his enlistment sent nearly half the students of that university scampering away to the training camps or to some civilian field of service.

The sergeant pointed with pride to the high character of the forty men under his command—nearly all university men. Of students for the Christian ministry his section alone had eight or ten and one of his own professors was now subject to his orders.

"This is intensely interesting," I said, "but now tell me, why did you volunteer? What was your motive?" He continued to speak. There was an utter absence of any spirit of boasting, not the slightest taint of revenge and no apparent desire for adventure. Frankly, but with childlike simplicity, the young American soldier bared to me his breast and permitted me to see the very heart throbs that were moving him to action.

Not in exact words, but in substance and in spirit do I report the sayings of my friend, seeking to quote the language of his heart as I read it rather than if his lips as I heard it.

"This war is just. It would be an awful calamity for the world if we should fail. But to win it millions of young men must rally to the flag. Why should not I? I am young and strong and none are dependent on me."

"We recognize," I said, "the extreme danger of the service to which you are going, but, of course, we are all looking at the best side and expecting our friends to come back."

"The danger does not deter me," he said, "although I am fully conscious of it. Possibly I chose this branch of service because I had expected to study medicine if the war had not come on, but when it came I had to go. I could not stay out. You know, after the war, I will have to live with myself and I am not able to see how I could live in peace with myself if I should fail to 'do my bit' to help win it. Guess I had better get over there and stay than to run away from it."

Days and weeks have passed and I have not yet lost from my mind the picture of my young friend's countenance as he talked about having to live with himself after the war is over.

Not all the young men who enter the army do so with the same high purpose that drove the sergeant into the struggle, but I am confident he voiced the motive of myriads of men who have sprung to arms to defend their country against a brutal foe.

I walked through the camp a few moments later with the sergeant by my side. Again he expressed to me his eagerness to get quickly into the service. Again I took his hand and wished him good luck. The cultured, modest, consecrated young man, every inch of him a soldier, was offering his life that I and my family and my country might be safe and that the rights of the race might not be lightly forfeited.

A few days later 600 young men filed in silence up the gang plank of a ship at an American port. My young friend marched at the head of his section and his section led the procession. The cable announces their safe arrival "somewhere in France."

Back to the hotel I hastened at the conclusion of my visit with him, that I might pen a letter to the lad's mother in her distant home, congratulating her on the rare contribution she had been privileged to make to the cause of freedom when she mothered and sent forth this sergeant to the Usaacs.

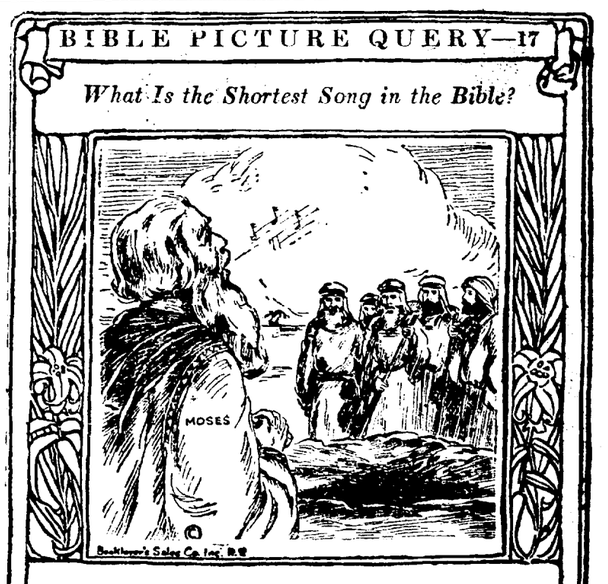

TIME'S SWIFT PASSAGE.

Not till that last day, that day that closes our mortal existence, shall we fully understand the brevity of time. Yet time is our life; its passage is our death. The moment we begin to live, that moment we begin to die. We forget too often that the departure of time means the departure of our life. When the warm blood flows full and strong through all the swelling veins and full-robed joy animates body and mind; when in the series of our days and years there occur no startling circumstances to arrest our notice or awake our thought, we forget that we are not moored, but are ever gliding, though we notice not our motion, down the stream of time.—Charles R. Stoddard.

Statistics compiled by the Citrus Protective league show shipments of California citrus fruit for the last three years aggregate 140,443 cars, distributed as follows: Oranges from southern California, 104,212 cars; from central and northern California, 15,407 cars, and from the whole state, 20,824 cars of lemons. The report shows that California has approximately 14,000,000 orange and lemon trees.

Last Week's Question and the Answer

Last week's query: "What women ate their own children?" These were the women of Israel, at the siege of Aamaria. The occasion is described in the Second Book of Kings, Chapter 6, Verses 28-29:

"And the King said unto her, What aileth thee? And she answered, This women said unto me, Give thy son, that we may eat him today, and we will eat my son tomorrow."

"So we boiled my son, and did eat him: and I said unto her on the next day, Give thy son, that we may eat him: and she hath hid her son."

Make Your Own Cough Syrup and Save Money

Better than the ready-made kind. Easily prepared at home.

The finest cough syrup that money can buy, costing only about one-fifth as much as ready-made preparations, can easily be made up at home. The way it takes hold and conquers distressing coughs, throat and chest colds will really make you enthusiastic about it.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex (60 cents worth). Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Shake thoroughly and it is ready for use. The total cost is about 65 cents and gives you a full pint—a family supply—of a most effectual, pleasant tasting remedy. It keeps perfectly.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the inflamed or swollen throat membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough will disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, whooping cough or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is known the world over for its prompt healing effect on the throat membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

DR. W. MARTIN LECTURES TO A LARGE AUDIENCE

Famous Battle Creek Doctor Handles Subject in an Impressive Manner

A large attendance greeted Dr. W. F. Martin on his appearance at the Majestic theatre Friday evening. Members of the Quest club had a small section of the theatre reserved for their organization, but the rest of the seats were free. Dr. Martin dwelt extensively on the great part that the venerial diseases wil play in the outcome of the war, and his slides portrayed graphically his speech.

A marvelous motion picture of the devastation of one of the smallest germs in existence proved to be a feature of the evening. Dr. Martin has probably come in contact with this specific kind of affliction more frequently than any other one man, having been at the Battle Creek sanatarium for more than twelve years. At the close of his lecture he appealed to all of his listeners and to the members of the Quest club particularly to do all in their power to stamp out the rapid growth of one of the worst menaces to mankind.

HOW THE U. S. IS GETTING INTO THE AIR TO WIN WAR

The king of birds! Not the enormous wings of this giant Curtiss flying boat. They have a total span of 92 feet. The photograph shows the great man-made bird ready to leave the factory for British war service.

By BURTON KNISELY.

Carrying out America's win-the-war-in-the-air program—the expenditure of $720,000,000 for 22,000 airplanes and 40,000 engines—means:

The country must spend wisely within a year, in a new industry still in the formative stages and for which there was little organization, a sum twice the total cost of the Panama canal. To do this more steel, more wood, more linen and more men are needed, and, after that—more money.

An airplane is composed of six main parts:

1. The wings.
2. The fuselage, or body.
3. The control surfaces, including rudders, elevators and the ailerons, or jointed and moveable wing tips.
4. The landing chassis—wheels or pontoons enabling the machine to leave land or water and return safely.
5. The propeller.
6. Finally, first in importance, the engine.

In the average biplane there are 2,000 to 2,400 separate pieces. In building our air fleet of 23,000 planes over 46,000,000 seperate pieces, the weakest of any one of which might cost a pilot's life, must be perfectly made and fitted together with absolute precision.

These 46,000,000 pieces—bits of wood and cloth, nuts, bolts and screws—do not include the scores of parts making up each motor.

For the wings of the American air fleet alone the builders require 23,000,000 feet of the finest spruce or ash wood—1,000 feet fo reach machine, of which 200 feet is actually used and 800 feet is discarded by a selective process which throws out the smallest knot or flaw in the wood.

Our allies need more than twice as much; and most of this 75,000,000 feet of choice wood which should now be seasoning is still in the trees.

For just the wings of this airplane fleet we need, besides the wood, nearly 4,000,000 yards of the finest linen. Ireland, where the best linen is produced, has an output so small that English airplane makers must distribute flaxseed to Irish flax growers to be sure of the linen needed for British machines. America must go into flax-farming on a large scale to find a substitute for this linen. What shall it be?

Now, after the wings, the fuselage, or body. There again strength and lightness must be twins, both developed to the supreme degree. There again fine spruce, ash or basswood, fitted with the skill of the maker of a piano body, are required, with the finest of steel tubing and wires.

Like the wings, the control surfaces—rudders, elevators and ailerons—are of choice wood covered with fine Irish linen, so accurate in construction that the linen must be shrunk after being fastened to the frame.

The landing chassis must stand the heaviest bumps, and still be almost light as air. Most of the steel for tubings and light special parts is manufactured in select plants in the Pittsburg district, and still U. S. airplane makers are forced constantly to deny that this choicest American steel is inferior to the grade of steel our allies find necessary.

The propellers must not only be of the finest wood—usually spruce—but they must be fashioned individually by master craftsmen, in a trade as highly skilled as any in modern industry.

And when this bird of beautiful body and strong wings is complete, when all these 2,000 and more separate perfect pieces have been perfectly joined, there remains to be put into its frame its heart—the engine which would shake a much stronger body to piece, an engine so light that it will weight not over three to five pounds for each horsepower developed, and so sure that it will run hours without a hitch.

That's the story of one airplane. But the nation is figuring airplanes in the tens of thousands.

Allied experts think the United States must build 10,000 airplane engines before April 1, 1918, and 46,000 by December, 1918, to win air mastery. With the best European experts, one American airplane company has spent one year and three million dollars in producing the first duplicate of the best European engine. One single American automobile company spent $500,000 in one year's experiments on air engines.

Today the nation's aviation industry has $40,000,000 invested, employs 15,000 men, occupies 4,000,000 feet of floor space—and turns out 200 planes a week. Even this is a monumental growth—from a few shacks in a few years—but not from such a productive capacity as this will the United States turn out 46,000 airplanes in little over 12 months.

Making one machine has been the work of months. One United States plant producing 20 to 30 finished planes a week employs 3,000 men, and each machine is the hand-to-hand product of 150 men, representing a score of different trades.

How, with such a start, are we to build 20,000, perhaps 50,000 airplanes to win the war?

The biggest answer to this question—almost the vital question of the war—is the Liberty motor, the standardized combination of the best features of European motors, so that air engines and their parts can be manufactured in every American automobile factory, and in hundreds and thousands of other machine plants, and so that nut turned out in Detroit will fit a bolt made in Birmingham.

Upon such organization as this, improvised by American genius, depends the fight to boost our airplane output from 200 planes a week to 3,500 planes a month—and more as the war shall require.

Standardization, standardization, standardization! System, system, sytem!

Making airplanes, or airplane parts, in auto factories, in cash register factories, in typewriter factories, in piano factories, in furniture factories, in carriage factories, and spending money at a rate that will exhaust that first $720,000,000 by the middle of next year—that is the only path that leads to United States victory in the air.

England is spending almost this much—$600,00,000—in raiplane manufacturing alone, this year. And with the planes we must have the men—say 30,000 pilots, with an army of 100,000 men, helpers, etc., for every 10,000 pilots.

And it has been figured that the training of each pilot costs more than $5,000, as much as his machine.

GOVERNMENT ACT WILL CREATE A NEW OFFICE

Will Require Persons to Issue Special Licenses.

Mayor William J. Hosey is in receipt of a letter from Von H. Manning, director, department of the interior, asking for any information on city ordinances in regard to the act passed by congress a few months ago requiring the licensing of all parties engaged in making, selling or storing explosives.

The city has no ordinances referring in a direct manner to the new law the only one being the one governing the sale of fireworks, and prohibiting the shooting of explosives within the city limits.

The letter also requests that a city official be appointed special agent to issue the licenses. The blank forms will be furnished by the government and the official will be allowed to charge twenty-five cents for every license that he issues. The office requires the administering of oath.

Many cities have a special department that confines itself to the issuance of licenses, but Fort Wayne has no such office. City Comptroller Baade issues the majority of them. Although nothing definite has been done in regards to an oppointment, it is probable that the city clerk will be designated to perform the duties.

SAYS RAILROADS ARE NOT DESPERATELY OFF

Counsel for Shippers in Rate Hearing Cites the Figures.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 17.—Clifford Thorne, leading counsel for shippers in the fifteen per cent increase rate case testified before the interstate commerce commission that the railroad securities have, in the last few months, declined less than many others and net operating revenues of the eastern railroads already are far in excess of their estimates for 1917. Mr. Thorne introduced statistics to prove his statement that the net operating revenues of the thirty-eight eastern roads interested in the case had reached a total of $283,000,000 up to September 30 last and stated that the railroads at the previous hearing estimated their net operating revenue for 1917 would be $215,000,000. Mr. Thorne also declared that the net operating revenue of the eastern roads was $543 a mile more during June, July and August than the commission estimated they would be when the decision against the increase was given last June. He testified that his conclusion regarding the position of railroad securities was reached after examination of the bonds of twenty industrial stocks published by a leading financial paper to give the general trend of the securities market and those of twenty leading cities of the countries. Statistics introduced including this statement. Mr. Thorne said, would show the railroads not in as dangerous position as previous testimony tended to show.

THIEVES TAKE SAFE TO CONVENIENT PLACE

An enterprising pair of thieves entered the Sax Bordeaux grocery store in the Rolling Mill district and calmly walked off with the safe. The thieves entered the store by turning the key which was in the inside lock with another key. After getting the safe on the outside they placed it in a wagon and hauled it to a distant meadow where they battered it out of all semblance of shape with a sledge hammer stolen from the Pennsylvania shops. Detective Sergeants Spillner and Junk have been detailed on the case and expect to apprehend the thives this afternoon.

Another grocery store in close vicinity of the Bordeaux store was entered Friday night. The thieves, who are suspected of being the same ones, gained entrance by "jimming" the front door.

FEDERATION OF LABOR FAVORS THE JUNE TIME

Overwhelmingly Votes to Change Annual Session to Warmer Month.

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 17.—The American Federation of Labor by an overwhelming vote today adopted a resolution to abandon its lifelong practice of meeting in November and to call future national conventions in the second week in June. In the debate a suggestion of political significance in the change was brought out. President Gompers said after the vote had been taken that there was nothing in the constitution of the American Federation of Labor to prevent discussion on non-partisan politics. Any subject of nation-wide importance relating especially to the workers of the country he considered a proper matter for consideration. In response to a resolution unanimously adopted President Gompers named a committee to report on the alleged shortage of labor existing in some parts of the country. This cry of shortage, the resolution said, was not always based upon facts, being raised in some instances because of a desire of employers to substitute female for male and unskilled for skilled labor. The convention adjourned until Monday.

BAKERIES WILL RUN UNDER REGULATIONS

J. B. Franke Announces Compliance of Baking Industries to New License.

J. B. Franks, appointed leader of section 37, of the war emergency organization of the baking industry, made the following statement in regards to the new regulations for all baking industries announced by Food Administrator Hoover: "The bakers of this district will comply readily with the new regulations under government licenses. The new regulations announced by Mr. Hoover will entail many readjustments in the baker's business, and I am particularly desirous that the public shall understand this fact and appreciate the difficulties and sacrifices involved.

"I am glad to hear that the bread program has been announced by all bakers and that they will operate under a government license during the period of the war. The standardization of loaf weights will set the public mind at rest on one important phase of the bread market and the limitation of the ingredients will simplify competition.

All reputable bakers will be glad to assist the administration in carrying out its policies. The situation at present is such that a first-class loaf of bread of standard weight cannot be sold for less than 8c wholesale, but if conditions can be brought about which will make a reduction possible, no one will be better satisfied than the baker."

"THANKSGIVINK" EDDYTORIUL

As erly as last Monday we begin to put our eddytoriul head to work on thinkin up a subjeck to dash off a eddytoriul about for this ishue of the Bugle & day after day we thort & thort in vain.

It peard to us that the more we thort the more we couldnt seem to scrape up a subjeck for a suitable eddytoriul being as in the past we calkilate we have wrote deep & lernd eddytoriuls about all the subjecks there is and we was most ready to give up in deespare as we mite say when all to onct as we set at our offis desk with our tired head in our hands lookin absently at the callender on the wall in front of us rite under our eddytoriul nose, so to speak, it ockurd to us like a blow that, snow or blow, rain or shine next Thursday will be THANKSGIVINK!

Well, whot we was about to state is that it has allus been our polisy as edditor & prop of the Boogle to dash off a eddytoriul on Thanksgivink every yr and we dont perpose to make enny excepshion of this yr let the chips fall where they will. The ridicklus part of it is that Thanksgivink like to of came and went afore we woked up to the fackt that we was standin rite on the threshole of it!

It is fitting on this ospishus occashion whitch we are rite on the brink of that evrybuddy in Bingville ort to think up somethink or other to be thankful for and on next Thursday to be thankful for it as hard as they can. Whot we ask have you got to be thankful for?

As for us personally we could be a good eal more thankfuller as Thanksgivink approaches if we had a few more financhial assets to jingle aginst one another in our wallet whitch we aint. We have jest completed a counting of our financhial standing and find that we possess 75 cts in currency and a lead quarter whitch some fiend in huming form worked off on us tother day without our nolledge & consent and if the pusilanimus cuss will call for said quarter and give us a silver one in its place no questshions will be askd.

In other words its diffycult for us to be very thankful when we aint got only 75 cts to rub aginst eatch other, but well be thankful as possibil or at least 75 cts worth hoping in the meanwhile that some of our dead beet subscribers will come to our rescue by paying us somethink on their back subscripshions so that when next Thursday comes we can return several dollers worth of thanks instid of 75 cts worth.

We dont persoom that owink to the depleated state of our finances that we will be able to indulge ourself and eddytoriul wife in a turkey next Thursday. Whot we persoom is that we will be lucky if we are able to indulge ourself and wife in a mess of corned beef and cabbage or salt pork and potaters—unless, of course some of our subscribers or friends who has been more blest with this worlds goods than we be should be mooved outen the goodness of their hearts to invite us to their partake of their turkey dinner whitch we would do with great cheer and gusto if invited. PLEASE THINK OVER THIS SUJJESTSHION ALL YOU FOKES WHO CAN AFFORD TO HAVE TURKEY ON THANKSGIVINK!

Be that as it may however we all ort to be as thankful as we can even if we aint got nothink to be thankful for, let us be thankful that it aint no worse whitch it mite be. Let us be thankful were livin and have our helth and are abel to ete three meels per day even tho we dont know whare the three meels is comink from!

In conclooshion we desire to say that there is allus somethink to be thankful for in this world and we mite as well look on the brite side of life as to set down and repine. As a repiner we wassent never mutch of a sucksess and were glad of it.

Hod a Prisner

Hod Slocomb had a ridicklus axident to happen to hisself whilst he was a choppin wood last wk away up on the side of Sawridge Mountaing whitch Hod will probly recall with horrer & loathing the iongest day he lives.

Hod was all soul alone and jest afore he stopd to ete his lunteh he had drove a iron wedge into a big mapel log, then Hod set down on the same log and begin to partake of a half doz hard biled eggs whitch his wife had biled for him with great gusto.

Jest as Hod had begin on the sixth egg the iron wedge somehow or other flew outen the log and the split in it snapd shet in sitch a manner that it ketched Hod by the seat of the pants as you mite say and to his amazement and surprise and disgust he found hisself a prisner.

Hod struggled to git loose but without avail and the more he struggeld the weaker he got and when nite arrove the very thort of settin on that log all nite long neerly driv him frantick but that diddent do no good becuz set there he did and like to of froze to deth afore mornink came.

Then all of a suddint with great presents of mind Hod had a brillyunt thort so he jerked offen his coat and vest and managed to squirm outen his pants leavin them a prisner in the log instid of hisself and broke for Bingville attired only in his shirt, coat and vest, underwear, shoes et cettery. Hod snuk home the back way unobserved and after a hearty brekfest he returned to his work, removed his pants from the log, put em on and went to work agin happy as a lark. Hod says it will be a cold day afore he gits ketched like that agin and if he does he'll have sents enuff to remove his pants at onct instid of settin there all nite like he done in this instants.

Inspector Who Put Twelve More Pounds in a Bushel

THIS is the story of how a great city was for years at the mercy of short-weight hucksters and merchants, and how "Hank" Weeke, a practical politician with twenty-five years' experience as a grocer and meat market proprietor took the oath of office as Inspector of Weights and Measures, and in six months completely reformed the food-cheats who had flourished for twenty years.

Inspector Weeke was out scouting a few days ago, observing the actions of a certain vegetable shopkeeper about whom he had received complaints.

An old woman entered the shop with a basket and made a few purchases, among them a peck of potatoes. Weeke watched the shopkeeper as he filled a "level measure" and dumped the vegetables into the market basket for a peck. As the old woman stepped from the shop, Inspector Keeke stopped her and said: "Madam, you just paid for a peck of potatoes and the dealer did not give you a full peck. Do you want me to make him give you a peck?"

The old woman hesitated and said she had seen the dealer fill the peck measure and believed she had a peck in her basket. Inspector Weeke introduced himself and explained to her that the law required a heaping measure for a peck. They entered the shop together and Weeke called the dealer. He ordered the merchant to replace the potatoes in a peck measure to see if he had delivered the right weight. The dealer at first demurred, but when Weeke identified himself he consented reluctantly. The measure was filled only to the level, and Weeke had the potatoes weighed. They tipped the scale at a fraction more than 12 pounds.

"Now heap that measure up until you can't add another potato," commanded Weeke. The dealer complied, and when the heaping measure was weighed it registered 15 pounds.

"Now, madam," said Weeke as he scraped off the surplus potatoes, "that is the amount that you are entitled to which you did not get at first. Do you think it is worth asking for?"

The old woman was amazed, and replied: "Yes, sir—that is enough to feed six or eight mouths at my home, and with potatoes so high it means a whole lot to me, I can tell you."

Gives Only One Warning.

"Well, the law in St. Louis now specifies that dealers must give 60 pounds of potatoes to the bushel, which means 15 pounds to the peck," said Weeke, "and when you buy by dry measure instead of by weight, you are entitled to a heaping measure as I showed you, in order that you may get 15 pounds."

The dealer was chagrined and made a bluff at protesting, but before Inspector Weeke left he promised to avoid arrest by voluntarily giving all his customers a heaping measure of potatoes in the future. If he fails to keep his promise, Inspector Weeke is likely to hear of it and prosecution will follow swiftly, because "Hank" does not give a dealer more than one warning.

Inspector Weeke's middle name is Practical, and he realizes that with all the reform he has brought about, and despite the air-tight law that strangles shortweight artists, the public will not be safe from fraud unless each purchaser understands that upon him rests the responsibility for reporting short weights.

Laws do not stop fraud and crime—they merely empower individuals to inflict certain penalties upon offenders. It is the duty of every housewife to inform herself as to what the law requires and then she must see to it that her huckster and her grocer and her butcher live up to the law.

The proper first step to enforce the law, according to Weeke, is for each housewife to provide herself with accurate scales, which can be purchased for about 75 cents.

Wrong Sometimes Unintentional.

Every article of food that is purchased should be weighed by a sensible housewife, Weeke says. Not on the theory that her grocer or butcher will deliberately cheat her in the weight—although this happens only too often—but because even the most scrupulous merchant will at times make mistakes and furnish the wrong weight when he will make his charge in accordance with the written memorandum he has.

If a housewife has a good set of scales she is thoroughly prepared to obtain her rights in St. Louis. If her merchants short-weight her, she can determine it after the goods are delivered, and by reporting the facts to Weeke she can have the merchant checked up or prosecuted, as the circumstances warrant.

Weeke has eight deputies and the entire police department at his call to enforce the laws or investigate complaints. The city courts have convicted in every case presented to them so far by Weeke.

Weeke agrees with those who advocate the sale of all foodstuffs by weight, but being a practical man, he realizes that ancient custom has familiarized the public with pecks and quarts and bushels, and it would be too radical a change to switch at once to pounds and ounces.

The United States Bureau of Standards has fixed the weight of every food commodity in a bushel, and when a housewife purchases a peck of Irish potatoes she should know that she is entitled to 15 pounds. If she purchases a peck of sweet potatoes she is entitled to only 14 pounds, because the specific gravity of sweet potatoes is not so great as that of Irish potatoes. Apples, according to the official standard, should run 48 pounds to the bushel or 12 pounds to the peck.

No doubt a great many people who have read political criticisms of Inspector Weeke in campaign times, will have a lingering suspicion that political influence might creep into his office and interrupt the smooth course of justice that he has promised to provide.

It would not be strange if such a suspicion entered the minds of people who know of politics and the ways of politicians only by reading more or less accurate stories about them in the daily press or magazines. Even a smart politician may entertain such a fancy in the case of Weeke, and the writer has personal knowledge that one politician who was "close to" Hank, as the saying is, did think he might influence Hank to protect a huckster who ran afoul of the new law.

This politician-friend came to Hank after the huckster had been arrested for having in his possession a short quart measure.

"Hank I have known this man since he was a little boy, and there ain't a crooked bone in his body," said the friend. "Your men have made a mistake in arresting him, and you ought to dismiss the charges as a matter of fairness. He is a good man, and worked for me in several campaigns. I'll vouch for him."

"He may be an honest man," replied Weeke, "but he's been keeping company with an awful crooked measure. Come here and look at it."

Weeke led the politician who had come to "front" for the huckster into the testing room and produced the alleged quart measure which his deputies had confiscated the day before.

"Do you call that a quart measure?" he asked the politician as he handed over the measure.

"Why, certainly," said the politician, putting on a bold front. "It might be a trifle short, but how can a man tell that? He is no expert."

Weeke did not argue further. He placed the short measure under a large funnel containing exactly one quart of flaxseed and opened the spigot at the bottom to let it drain into the confiscated measure.

"Just watch now," said Weeke, "and we will see exactly how close to a quart this measure is." The measure rapidly filled and then began to overflow. The overflow continued for quite a while, and the politician who came to "front" began to color up when he saw the size of the "spill."

What "Overflow" Showed.

Weeke measured the overflow and found it was one pint. "Now, a man don't have to be an expert to know that he is short a pint in a quart, does he?" asked Weeke. "That man is going to be convicted if the court pays any attention to me." And he was.

The law requires that hucksters and dealers shall use only measures and scales that are stamped by Weeke's department, to indicate their accuracy. The measure must be stamped every six months, and unless it bears the [illegible]ficial stamp it should be looked upon by a consumer with suspicion.

Stamping a measure is a good precaution against false measures, but it is not perfect, by any means. There are many tricks of the trade that unscrupulous dealers resort to by which they can turn a stamped measure into a false measure.

One favorite device is the false bottom. A metal measure of regulation size is produced at Weeke's office, tested and stamped O. K. The dealer takes it away and puts a wooden disc in the bottom that shortens the measure to the extent of the cubic contents of the disc. Sometimes a metal false base is soldered into the measure, and this is harder to detect. An honest measure, with a false bottom can be heaped up high with potatoes, to make the purchaser think it is full weight, and in reality it will be only three-quarters of a peck or bushel.

Another simple device that many housewives fail to guard against is to put dents in a measure that was regulation size when it was stamped. The dents occupy space inside the measure and reduce its capacity to that extent.

Never let a huckster measure your vegetables in a dented measure; it is sure to be short.

Sometimes a huckster will get his perfect measures stamped and then take them apart and remodel them into smaller measures without destroying the official stamp that has been driven into the metal. For that reason it is the custom to place the official stamp as nearly on the seam of a measure as possible, so that in taking it apart the stamp will be partly obliterated.

There are so many tricks of the trade that Weeke says it is absolutely necessary that a housewife have her own scales and weigh her purchases in order to be sure that she is not being cheated out of what she pays for. A good scale in the house is a perfect protection against any device that may be employed by unscrupulous dealers.

Scale Check the Best.

Weeke says the meanest man in the world today, in his opinion, is a dealer who will cheat poor people out of the food for which they are now compelled to pay such high prices.

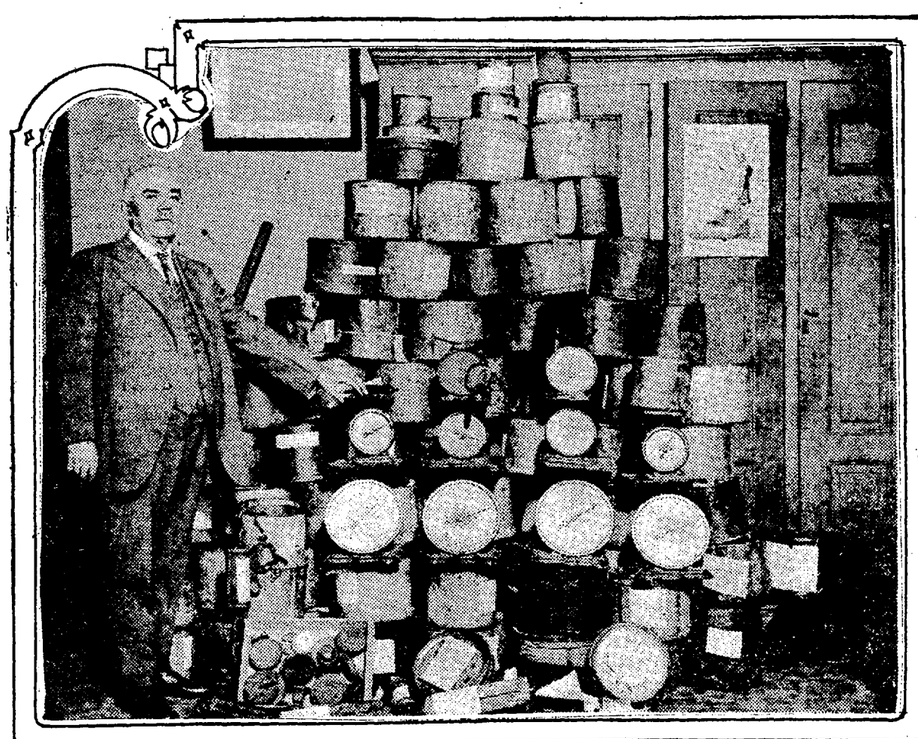

"A highwayman or an embezzler is entitled to the respect of the community alongside a false-weight dealer," said Weeke. "The false-weight man is preying mainly upon the poorest people in the city. He is taking the food out of the mouths of women and little children in order to make a few extra dollars. There are some merchants who do not regard this practice as a crime at all. They think that it is smart work, and pat themselves on the back for being shrewd enough to put it over on the poor women who buy from them. Such dealers should be put clear out of business by law when it is proved that they deliberately plan to steal."

Another field covered for the first time through the operation of Weeke's new law is the ice business. Until now it has not been unlawful for an iceman to cut a square of ice guessing at its weight, and deliver it at a home in the window of which is displayed a sign calling for a certain amount of ice.

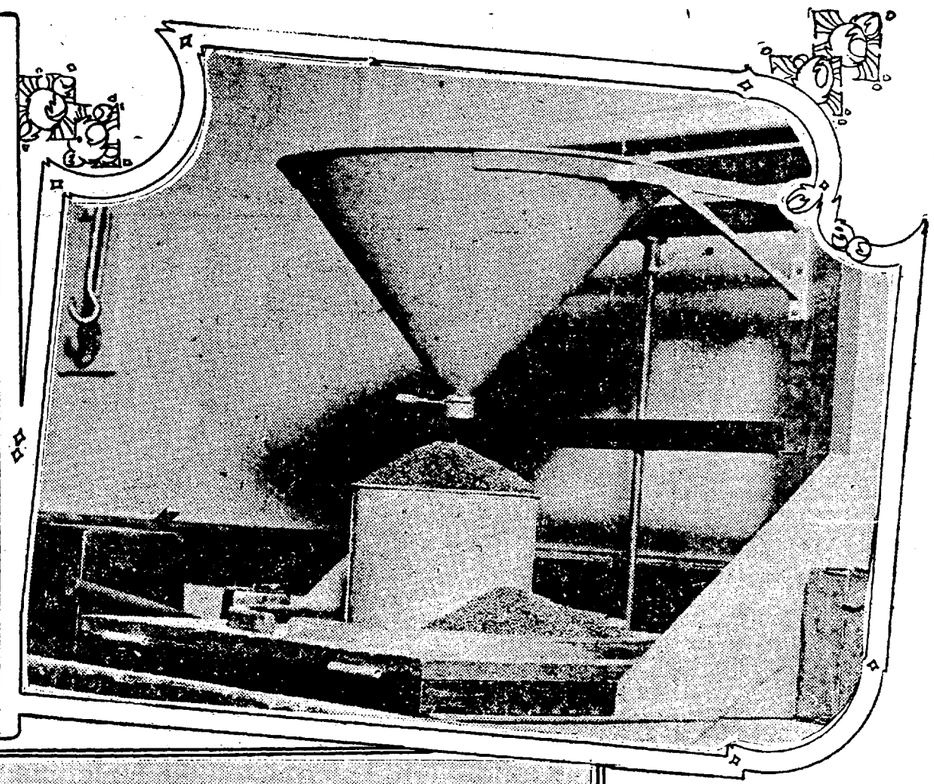

Frequently the pieces are cut in irregular shapes in this guessing contest. One piece may weigh a little more than 50 pounds and another must therefore weigh a little less.

A woman puts a sign in her window calling for 50 pounds of ice. The iceman reads it from the street and delivers a block that may weigh only 40 or 45 pounds. He carries no scales, as a rule, and had no means of knowing exactly how much the piece weighs. If this happens every day throughout the summer, the customer will lose several hundred pounds of ice in the season.

Weeke's law provides that every ice wagon must be equipped with a stamped scale, and every piece of ice that is delivered must be weighed and the customer notified of the weight delivered. Since the law became effective in September eighty-five concerns have purchased ice scales and paid the fee to Weeke for stamping them.

AN ELECTRICAL EXPERIMENT.

ELECTRICAL experiments are always of interest, not only to the learned who work in laboratories, but also to the average person. By means of the apparatus described below an electric spark can be obtained in the simplest way imaginable, by any one, with very little expense of time or trouble.

A strip of tinfoil is fastened around the center of a common lamp chimney, and then a straight strip of the same material is pasted on the chimney from one end of the same to within one-third of an inch of the ring.

Then a piece of silk is wrapped around a brush, to clean the chimney and the interior of the chimney is rubbed briskly; but the fingers must not touch the tinfoil. If this is done in the dark, each time that the brush is withdrawn from the chimney a bright electric spark will be seen to spring from one piece of the tinfoil to the other.

Many other experiments of this kind can be tried with this simple apparatus. For example, it may be shown that poor conductors can be electrified by rubbing; further, that good conductors can carry the electricity from an electrified body to one which has not been charged with electricity, and finally the power of bodies charged with the same kind of electricity to repel each other can be illustrated in the following manner:

Bind a woolen thread (or better still an iron or brass wire) over the tinfoil ring, and on the end of this hang little strips of thin paper.

If the interior of the chimney is now rubbed, the silk-covered brush being introduced at the opposite side to that into which it was formerly placed, the ring of tinfoil is charged with electricity, which is conducted by the thread or wire to the strips of paper, which fly apart.

As in all such experiments, the loss of electricity through dampness must be avoided. This can be done by thoroughly drying the brush, the silk and the chimney at the fire before trying the experiment.

CORK AFTER-DINNER DANCER.

The base for them is a small hemisphere that can be made in a few moments by pinching and rolling a piece of tinfoil into the required shape. All that is necessary is to see that it is perfectly smooth and perfectly true in shape.

Then crumble pits of cork roughly into the shape of men or women or animals, pinning the parts thoroughly with slivers from toothpicks. With a little ingenuity exceedingly ludicrous figures can be made. They may be colored with a black end of a burned match.

Pin them on the flat side of the tinfoil hemisphere and set it on the table. The little figures are so light that the tinfoil will keep them upright all the time. They may be laid flat or may be shaken in all directions; yet they will always bob right up again and the resulting motions often are very funny.

NEWS BY TELEPHONE.

The rural telephone in Canada has until recently largely served as a medium of exchange between farmers and for ordering supplies from dealers in town. But it has been demonstrated that the rural telephone can easily perform other services of equal importance.

There are now country districts in Canada where the telephone company has undertaken to supply a daily news service. At a certain hour the telephone bell rings five times. That is the news signal and every interested subscriber along the line takes down his receiver. Then the central operator gives the weather report, a condensed market summary and important news. It takes only a short time to give this information to every subscriber, and the line is engaged for only a few minutes.

As a man can't spend his money and have it, too, there are some who have adopted the expedient of spending somebody else's.

FIGHTING A HABIT WITH THE ROEBUCKS

The fighting Roebucks faced police court on the usual assault and battery charges Saturday morning. Both Charlie and Tony have been arrested four or five times on this same charge. The trouble arose Thursday when Charlie Roebuck walked into a saloon at the corner of Gay and Eliza streets and hit Albert Jansen over the head with a beer glass. Five witnesses were called and all testified Roebuck struck Jansen without provocation or cause. Jansen was so badly cut that it necessitated his being taken to the hospital for treatment. Roebuck had been out of jail but a few hours on another assault and battery charge before he struck Jansen. Judge Kerr assessed a fine of $10 and costs.

Toledo's Turn Next.

Charles McDonald, the young man arrested by Sergeant Immel at South Bend for beating his board bill at the Rich hotel, was assessed a fine of $25 and costs. As soon as the man serves his sentence here, he will be sent to Toledo to answer a charge of defaulting a board bill and passing a bad check.

Other Police Court Cases.

Burt Warden and Frank Thornton, drunks, were ordered to get out and get to work. John Connor failed to appear, but his bond of $15 sufficed to pay a fine of $5 and costs. Claud McCoolicher, arrested on a loitering charge and found carrying a number of razors, was discharged for lack of evidence. Clay Patterson, the negro suspected of stealing articles of merchandise from a men's furnishing store, was ordered released for lack of evidence.

Gary Kimmel, the General Electric elevator operator, arrested for carrying lewd pictures, was ordered out of town.

B. Brubaker Missing.

Mrs. B. Brubaker, 1201 St. Mary's avenue, has reported to the police that her husband has been missing from home since last Wednesday. She states that he started for the business district Wednesday and that she has not seen him since. He carried close to $200 at the time of his disappearance.

THOUSANDS OF MEN GOVERNMENT NEEDS

ended June 30, 1917, and since that date appointments have been made in increased proportion.

An appropriation of $7,500,000 is now being expended in the enlargement of the great naval gun factory at Washington, which, when completed, will furnish employment for 4,000 or more skilled mechanics, in addition to the 8,000 already at work in the plant. In this mammoth factory, one of the best equipped and most interesting in the world, are built the great guns for our war vessels, which carry to every country the message of America's ability to protect herself and to safeguard the rights of her citizens wherever they may be.

The new naval aircraft factory at Philadelphia, which will be completed this month, will also employ about 3,000 men.

The workers who man such plants are of a superior class, and they feel a personal pride in turning out products that will stand the test of conflict with the arms of other nations. A considerable part of the building of war vessels is also done in government yards.

The United States civil service commission which is charged with the task of recruiting the ranks of this great civilian army, through its widespread organization is furnishing the men as they are needed. In certain trades, particularly those connected with shipbuilding, there is usually a shortage. Sailmakers, coppersmiths, shipfitters, anglesmitchs, blacksmiths and machinists are especially needed. Women to operate power sewing machines are also in great demand. The representatives of the civil service commission at the postoffices in all cities are the official recruiting agents for this as well as other branches of the civil service. The commission urges competent mechanics to offer their services to the government at this time of great need.

to care for drafts from the district.

Will Then Wipe Out Appeals.

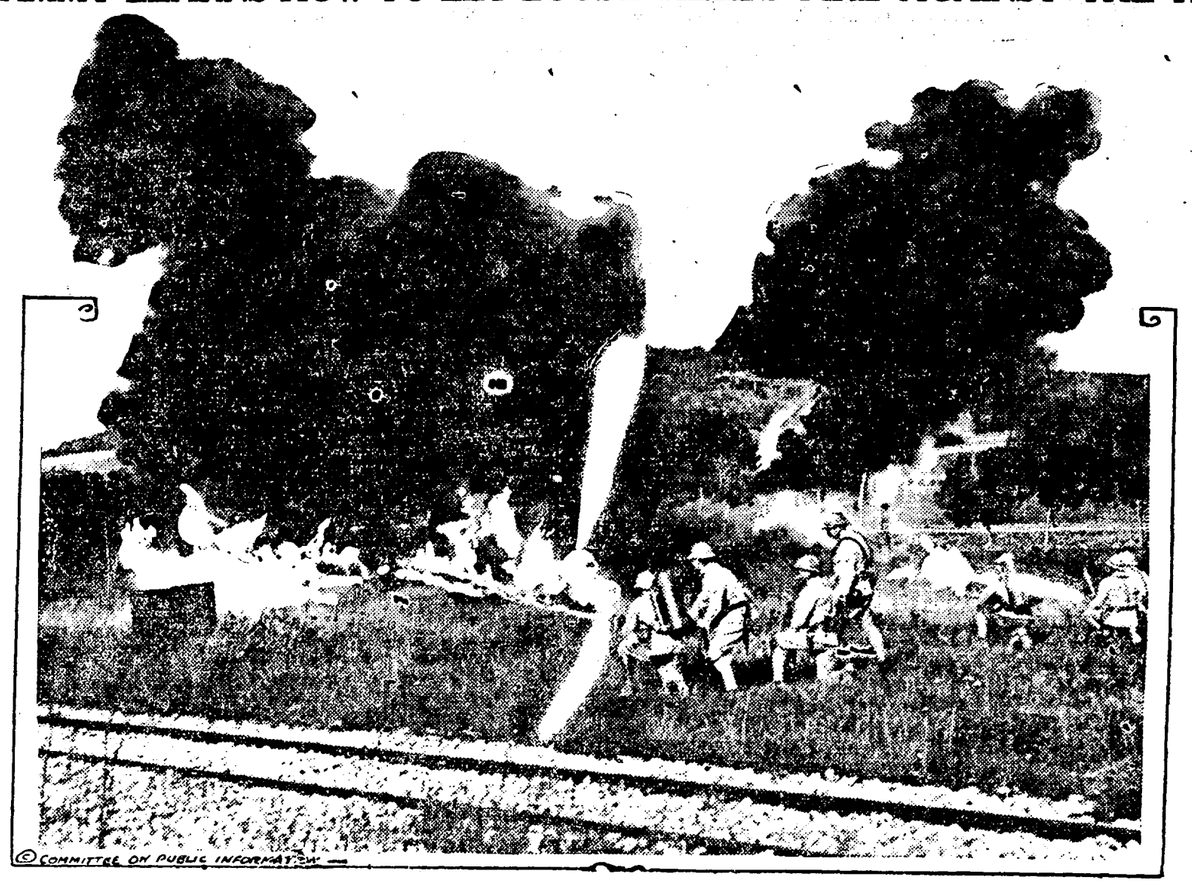

All pending appeals will then be wiped off the slate and the new system will apply in full.

Another change permits enlistment of registered men in the navy or marine corps where they are so far down on the call list as to make certain that their action will not delay the task for army building. Credit is given for such enlistment on army quotas however, and local boards are judges of each case.

Provision for voluntary enlistment in the army is made by means of a voluntary waiver classification and the automatic advancement of the registrant to class 1 and his induction at once into the military service; where the registrant has dependents his waivor must be accompanied, however, by waivors from those depent if not minors or by affidavits showing that minor dependents will be adequately provided for if there are minor dependents.

Louis Millar, a draftsman, who is now connected with the radio department of the government military service, is here on a visit and called at the General Electric works yesterday to see his former associates in office work. Last spring Mr. Millar resigned a position at the General Electric drafting room to take employment with the Wildwood Builders, resigning that position soon afterward to enter the government service. Yesterday he received a first lieutenant's commission.

SAMMY LEARNS HOW TO LET LOOSE HELL'S FIRE AGAINST THE HUN

Here are American troops in France practicing the use of liquid fire with new and improved apparatus that goes the Teutons one better. What chance would the Boches have if they were behind these flaming trees and bushes, where in this maneuver they are supposed to be?

PRESIDENT WILSON GREETS NORTHWEST

Washington, D. C., Nov. 17.—President Wilson sent this message last night to a loyalty gathering of citizens of six of the northwestern states at St. Paul, Minn.:

"Nothing could be more significant than your gathering to express the loyalty of the great northwest. If it were possible I should gladly be with you. You have come together as representatives of that western empire in which the sons of all sections of America and of the stocks of all the nations of Europe have made the prairie and the forest the home of a new race and the temple of a new faith.

"The time has come when that home must be protected and that faith affirmed in deeds. Sacrifice and service must come from every class, every profession, every party, every race, every creed, every section. This is not a bankers' war, or a farmers' war, or a manufacturers' war, or a laboring man's war—it is a war for every straightout American, whether our flag be his by birth or by adoption. We are today a nation in arms, and we must fight, farm, mine and manufacture, conserve food and fuel, save and spend to the one common purpose.

"It is to the great northwest that the nation looks as once before in critical days for that steadiness of purpose and firmness of determination which shall see this struggle through to a decision that shall make the masters of Germany rue the day they unmasked their purpose and challenged our republic."

LEADER NEED OF RUSSIANS

authority and order. Railway men, the correspondent adds, said that Kerensky and Lenine and Trotzky, the Bolsheviki leaders, all ought to be thrown into the Neva.

People Long for Real Leader.

For the provisional government nowhere was there a spark of enthusiasm, he adds, as it was felt to have deserved its fate. Everywhere, however, the correspondent found a longing for real order and real authority and for somebody who would save Russia from trouble.

Throughout the ten Kuban territories order was undisturbed and on arriving at Rostove-on-the-Don on Nov. 9 the correspondent found the garrison and workers in a ferment. They had passed a resolution in favor of the Bolsheviki but in the neighboring town of Novo Tcherkask, the capital of the Don territory, the Cossack government under Gen. Kaledines had declared for the provisional government, assumed full power in its own territories and had established contact with Cossack governments in the neighboring territories.

Cossacks Form a League.

A few days before the Don Cossacks rose, backed by the Cossacks in the provinces of Kuban and Astrakhan, the Kalmuks of the Steppes and the mountain tribes of Daghestan and the Black sea coast had formed a league of autonomous uits with a common federal government over the whole territory north of the Caucasus between the Caspian and Black seas. The existence of this leag... the correspondent says, guarantees complete order in that territory which includes the richest granary in Russia.

Gen. Kaledines' government on Nov. 8 declared martial law in the disturbed mining area in the Donets basin and it was declared that the miners had resumed work.

The Cossack congress which happened to be sitting at Kiev, took command of the situation there and immediately arrested the Ukranian council and suppressed the Bolsheviki.

Finds Order the Rule.

From Rostov onward, the correspondent continues, there was a complete absence of definite news. Order prevailed at all stations and fewer soldiers than usual besieged the train. The more intelligent soldiers with whom the correspondent talked were indignant with the Bolsheviki while the socialists declared they were for General Korniloff. Others seemed to know little of politics and to care less. There was complete order when the train passed through Khrakova, Kurkosk and Orel.

Many contradictory reports were current as the train approached Moscow. The train was stopped on the outskirts of the city.

"We heard the sound of guns," the Telegraph's correspondent says, "and were told by officers that the training school was being bombarded. Women told terrible stories of fighting and bloodshed throughout Saturday and Sunday. They declared that entire lines of men were mown down by machine guns.

Truth Hard to Obtain.

"At the station there was not a single intelligent person and I could only gather vague rumors of continuous fighting, of houses destroyed by artillery and of thousands killed and wounded. The streets near the station were lined with people listening to the battle, but it was said that the streets beyond were empty. As the train left the station the sound of a volley came from somewhere near the central postoffice. The only passenger who boarded the train at Moscow was a soldier, whose information was confused and fragmentary. He said that the foreigners were helping the government troops."

Thereafter until the train reached Petrograd only contradictory rumors were heard. Arriving in the city the correspondent found the residents guarding the doors and gateways to the dwellings. He concluded: "I then plunged into a flood of rumors, party wranglings and furious recriminations. Outside Petrograd it is more easy to believe in Russia. Here the atmosphere of catastrophe is stifling."

SUMMARY OF THE DAY'S WAR NEWS

Russian people want a leader who will maintain authority and order.

From Lake Garda to the Adriatic sea, over the Asiago plateau and down the Piave valley, the Italians are holding the Austro-Germans in check. Nowhere has the Italian line been penetrated for important gains, although the enemy pressuer is very strong. Teutonic attacks have been repulsed with heavy losses everywhere in the mountainous region except around Cismon in the Sugana valley northeast of Asiago. The intense artillery duel continues along the Piave. The invaders have been unable to make further crossings of the river. At the river's mouth the enemy advance has been held up if not stopped completely through the Italian action in opening the floodgates of the Piave and Sile rivers, resulting in the inundation of seventy square miles of terrain. Attempts to cross the river further north have been defeated by the Italians. The Teutonic force which crossed at Zenson is held oon the river's bank by the Italians.

In the other theaters there has been no intensive fighting. A French attempt to cross the Ailette river southwest of Laon, Berlin says, was repulsed. The French reached the northern bank of the stream, but a German counter-attack threw them back to their original, on the southern side.

In Flanders last evening in the Passchendaele area, the British carried out a successful operation, taking more of the valuable ground on the main ridge north of the village. They effected a slight advance as well in the difficult low-lying terrain sloping off to the west. There has been notable artillery activity in the French sector held by the American troops, the German fire causing additional casualties among the Americans from shrapnel and when an American gun was hit by a German shell. The American fire in response has been extremely spirited and it is believed that more than equal punishment was inflicted upon the Germans.

An interesting naval development is in progress in the North sea, where British light naval forces this morning engaged German light cruisers in Helgoland bight. The British admiralty reports the British forces pursuing the German warships, which retired at high speed.

MINIATURE FLEETS SOON TO DO BATTLE

Koritza, Albania, Oct. 10.—(Staff Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—A naval battle between French and German warships is imminent, which, when it occurs, will not be recorded in any official communique, though it will be in a way, one of the most unique naval engagements of the war.

Lake Ochrida is a large body of fresh water lying a few miles north of here, at the point where Albania, Serbia and Macedonia touch. It is forty miles long and twenty miles across, with towering mountains running around it. The north end of the lake is held by the Germans, and the south end by the entente allies. It has been the scene of the latest hard fighting, when the entente troops made a forward drive of thirty miles from Pagrodak, at the south end, to Padahoja far up toward the north sea.

With the Germans holding the north end of the lake, they did not confine their operations to the land. A miniature flotilla soon made its appearance with oil-burning launches, about fifteen feet iong, each mounting one gun forward. This mosquito fleet soon became a real menace, for it darted to the south end of the lake, at night and bombed the small villages along the south shore, held by the French, Russians and Serbs. The headquarters of General Taranahoff, of the Russian division, operating with General Sarrail, was in one of these villages.

The French soon took steps to counteract this menace. A small steel craft, thirty feet long, was brought overland from the French fleet at Saloniki. This mounted two guns, one forward and one aft. With it came a commander and a crew of French sailors. This was soon followed by a second thirty-foot boat mounting two guns, with its equipment of officer and crew.

Thus two miniature fleets find themselves face to face on Lake Ochrida, with a battle not far off. The French have the advantage of larger ships, carrying more guns, but the Germans have the advantage in number of craft. Their flotilla consisting of six or seven 15-foot boats mounting one gun each.

It seemed strange as we went along a mountain road today, to see the uniforms of French officers and sailors at a point so remote from the sea. They were in a camion on the way to their naval base at the south end of the lake. The commander, Lieutenant Dutoit, stopped for a moment and spoke enthusisastically of his little fleet.

"In bringing the boats from Saloniki," he said, "we took out the engines, so that the hulls weighed only three tons. This made reasonably easy going on the camions. There was no mishap, the first boat is launched, with her engine in place and guns mounted, and the second will soon follow. And then," he added with a laugh, "we'll see who will do the bombarding."

When operations will begin is not certain, but plans are so far advanced that a fight is looked for almost any time now. With such mosquito craft it might be considered a toy battle if it were not for the reality of the warfare, with real naval boats manned by real sailors of the French and German navies, fighting with as much determination as on the deck of 20,000-ton dreadnaughts.

A trough of low pressure reaches southward over the Missouri valley to Oklahoma, and rain has occurred from Nebraska southward to central Texas. The pressure is high over southeastern districts, and an area of high pressure of considerable magnitude occupies the country from the Rockies westward to the coast. The weather is slightly cooler than the normal in the Atlantic and east gulf states, and also in the plateau region, but between the eastern slope and the Mississippi river temperatures are above the seasonal average.

STOCK MARKET HAS A DAY OF UNCERTAINTY

Conditions Erratic That Rule Nominal Trading for Half Day.

New York, Nov. 17.—Uncertain conditions ruled during today's very nominal trading in stocks. Heaviness of rails and utilities offset better tendencies among industrials and specialties. The few noteworthy features of strength includer, shippings, motors and active equipments. United States Steel and allied shares were little more than steady. The closing was irregular. Sales approximated 175,000 shares.

Moderate buying advanced leading stocks from fractions to a point at the outset of today's dealings, a few issues scoring even larger gains. Rails were variable. Further readjustments of the Liberty Bonds was noted, the 4s making a new low at 98.60 and the 31-2s rising to 99.22.

Rufus Flory, of the time department of the General Electric works, is still quite ill at his home on South Wayne avenue, though there is a noticeable improvement today. He has been off duty over a week.

Nine loads of hay were baled and were shipped to the army cantonments, who have contracted for large amounts of baled hay throughout the country. New corn enjoyed its biggest day. Eleven loads reached the market and prices ranging from $1 to $1.05 a bushel were paid. Old corn was again on the absent list. Five loads of oats brought 60c and 63c a bushel.

WARFARE IS HOTTER ON AMERICAN FRONT

GERMAN SHELL WRECKS AMERICAN GUN

With the American Army in France, Friday, Nov. 16.—(By the Associated Press.)—The artillery fighting in the sector held by American troops has become even more lively and there have been further casualties, shrapnel wounding some men in the trenches. An enemy shell hit an American gun today and caused casualties. Some of the men wounded in the last two days have died.

The American batteries have been firing rapidly in return. The visibility is becoming better and it is considered certain that more damage and casualties have been caused in the German lines than the Germans have inflicted on the Americans. Patrolling continued actively last night.

The American troops witnessed their their first encounter. Three enemy airplaines apepared overhead. Soon all of them except one fled at the approach of five French machines. One of the French outmaneuvered this German and "git on his tail" the German aviator then bolted. The rattle of machine guns finally died away as the two airplanes disappeared to the west.

The French general commanding the sector has mentioned in the dispatches fifteen American officers and soldiers including three who were killed for excellent military qualities andfor bravery displayed in the recent trench raid.

A note accompanying the citations says that between 8,000 and 10,000 shells were used in the attack, which had been in preparation for three months, down to the finest details. The results obtained by the enemy were very small, he having been unable to penetrate more than the first line trenches because of the resistance of the American soldiers with rifle and pistol fire and hand grenades. The enemy had to content himself, the citation continues, with carrying off a few prisoners.

The general in the order mentions the —— company commanded by Lieut. (name deleted by censor) as follows: "On the night of Nov 2-3 this company, which was in the lines for the first time, met an extremely violent bombardment despite which it seized arms and offered such stubborn resistance that the enemy, though numerically superior, was obliged to retire."

The general specially cited in the order of the day, corporal, James Gresham and privates, Merle D. Hay and Thomas F. E. Wright, "who died bravely in hand to hand fighting with the enemy, who had penetrated the first line."

The others cited, "who showed excellent military qualities" are second lieutenants, M. C. Laughlin, R. O. Ratterson and E. A. Erickson; sergeant, John Arrowwood; corporals, David M. Knowles and Homer Givens; privates, Charles Massa, Wm. B. Thomas, George Hurd, Boyce Wade, Robert Winkler and John J. Jarvis.

FURTHER BRITISH PROGRESS.

London, Nov. 17—Further progress was made yesterday by the British troops on the main ridge in the vicinity of Paschendaele, on the Belgian battle front, the British war office announced today.

NAVAL ACTION REPORTED.

London, Nov. 17.—British light forces today engaged German light cruisers off Helgoland, the British admiralty announced today. The German warships retired and the British forces are now chasing them.

LEADER NEED OF RUSSIANS

London, Nov. 17.—Nowhere throughout a journey from the Caucasus to Petrograd did a correspondent of the Daily Telegraph hear a word of sympathy for Premier Kerensky. The educated passengers he met, he says in a dispatch sent from Petrograd on Monday, were infuriated at Kerensky's laxity in permitting the Bolsheviki agitation and soldiers were indignant that the premier was unable to maintain

PROTECTS MEN OF CLASS ONE

NO WAY TO CALL UP SUCH OUT OF TURN

Dependents Must Waive the Claim They Have on Registrant.

Washington, Nov. 17.—Men of draft age with dependent relatives are placed in a more secure position under the new regulations to govern future operations of the active service law made public today by Provost Marshal General Crowder.

While deferred classification under the new plan, which replaces all discharge or exemption certificates, may be revoked when granted for any other cause, there is no way in which men with dependents can be called up for service out of their turn. Added protection for dependents is secured by the requirement in cases where the registrant seeks to waive his deferred classification status that waivers also must be obtained from those dependent upon him before he can be taken into the military service.

Closes Ranks to Many.

The effect of the regulations is to close the ranks of the army, navy or marine corps absolutely to men between 21 and 31 years of age where they have dependents upon them who would suffer if they went to the front. Local boards are constituted judges of all such cases. For the first time also a way is provided in which men physically unfitted for front line duty in the army and yet able to do some part of the work of a soldier may be called for limited military service behind the lines. Partial physical exemptions may be granted by local boards to create this new classification.

Where registrants are away from home districts or in other circumstances application to the local board for a questionaire is all that is required.

Changes in Regulations.

Among the most noteworthy changes in the regulations are the following:

Local boards are granted virtually judiciary powers to summon witnesses and obtain information. Local police will see that any witness responds.

A definite program of correspondence between the boards, state officials and the provost marshal general's office is provided to keep this aspect of the business decentralized and moving smoothly.

The entire postoffice machinery is drafted to aid local boards in tracing registrants and right-of-way for mail connected with draft proceedings is required.

Highly Skilled Special Classes.

Authority is granted to form special classes of men highly skilled in particular trades or professions and summon them under this special heading regardless of their grouping in the general classification plan. The secretary of war may revoke original classification, except that no man granted deferred classification because of dependents may be advanced in any way or called for service out of his regular order; when deferred classication has been granted for industrial or agricultural reasons a specially qualified registrant may be summoned out of his turn.

Under the new regulations, district boards become purely appellate bodies before which can be heard only evidence originating before the local board. For additional facts the case must be returned to the local board.

It is made plain that men already held by local boards for service will continue to be sent forward as needed until such time as the new class 1 in each district is sufficiently organized

TWO TURN JOB DOWN

BOTH MEYER AND SCHEUMANN DECLINE

Mayor-elect W. Sherman Cutshall seems to be having some difficulty in finding a comptroller. Whoever is selected will be third choice as the position some days ago was offered to Edward F. Scheuman, 2429 Calhoun street, assistant cashier of the First and Hamilton National bank, and later to Otto C. Meyer, 117 East Suttenfield street, a clerk for the Pennsylvania company. Both turned the job down with thanks.

"The position of comptroller was offered to me some days ago by Mr. Cutshall," Mr. Meyer stated Saturday, "but I declined it. I have no idea who Mr. Cutshall will name."

Mr. Cutshall refused to announce his appointment when asked by a Sentinel reporter Saturday. He said that he may do so within a few days. He was asked regarding the probability of the appointment of Robert B. Hanna, who is being prominently mentioned.

"There is nothing to that report," Mr. Cutshall replied. "Mr. Hanna has not asked for an appointment and has not talked with me regarding his own or anybody else's appointment. Bob has a good job and he's not an applicant."

Must Be Fuelber.

If neither Messrs. Scheumann, Meyer or Hanna are to receive the plum then it must be Anselm Fuelber. Mr. Fuelber was asked if he expected to be named and he replied that he did not.

"If I am to be appointed comptroller I know nothing of it," declared Mr. Fuelber. "I have asked for no appointment and have talked with Mr. Cutshall but once or twice since the election and then he simply expressed his appreciation for the part I had taken in the election."

Who Will Be Chief?

Mr. Cutshall stated Saturday that the appointment of a chief of police will be left entirely with the board of safety. Three men are being prominently mentioned for this job—Daniel W. Kintz, Dayton F. Abbott and Gus Borgman. It is reasonably certain that one of these three men will be given the appointment and it is also reasonably certain that whoever Mr. Cutshall suggests the board of safety will name. There is also a persistent rumor that the present chief, Charles Lenz, may be retained.

New Appointees.

Announcement was made Friday by the newly elected mayor of the appointment of a city attorney and members of the board of public works, board of public safety and board of public health. There is little doubt but that Frank M. Randall will be retained as city engineer, which position he has held under both republican and democratic mayors for a number of years.

Members of the board of public safety—B. F. Sarver, foreman of the Pennsylvania boiler shop, 234 East Woodland avenue, chairman; J. B.

Italians Holding Their New Line and Chasing Foe to Other Side.

Rome, Nov. 17.—The German troops which forced a crossing of the Piave riven at Zenson are being pressed back steadily by the Italians, it is announced officially. In other sectors nearly 1,000 prisoners have been taken.

Two more crossings of the Piave were effected yesterday by the Germans. At Follina the German troops were destroyed or captured.

At Fagare they were driven back to the embankment and their return was hindered by the Italian artillery.

More than six hundred prisoners were taken at Fagare on the Piave at Zenson and three hundred were captured at Follina on the northern front near the upper Piave.

BERLIN OFFICIAL REPORT.

Berlin, Nov. 17.—(Via London.)—Austro-German troops invading the northern province of Italy, yesterday, stormed Meonte Prsassolan, between the Brenta and Piave rivers, says the official statement issued today by the German general staff. Eight hundred Italians were taken prisoner.

OPERATIONS ON FRENCH FRONT.

Paris, Nov. 17.—"There were active artillery engagements last night north of Courtocon," says today's official communication. "We repulsed an enemy detachment which attempted to approach our lines in this region and inflicted serious losses on it. Raids on German trenches southwest of St. Quentin, in the Champagne, east of Teton and in the Woevre enabled us to bring back prisoners, including one officer and war materials. In upper Alsace the artillery fighting was rather heavy at Schonholz. Elsewhere the night passed in quiet.

Summary of the Day's War News

(By the Associated Press.)

Defeated in battle by the Bolsheviki and deserted by most of his own officers and men, Premier Kerensky is in flight and his whereabouts is unknown in Petrograd. The head of Russia's provisional government was about to surrender to the Maximalists under coercion when he disappeared.

In Moscow, the tide apparently has turned and the Bolsheviks are in control of the ancient Russian capital, with the forces of the provisional government besieged in the Kremlin. One report says heavy artillery is being used against the historic walls. Another declared a truce between government and Bolsheviki troops has been arranged. Between 2,000 and 5,000 persons have been killed in Moscow since the outbreak of the revolt. Gen. Kaledines, leader of the Cossacks, is reported approaching the city with relief for the Kerensky forces. A third armed force, supposed to be composed of released convicts, is said to be fighting both Bolsheviki and government troops.

Prior to his sudden flight Premier Kerensky had seen his force, mostly Cossacks, defeated by the Bolsheviki near Tsarskoe-Selo, now in the hands of the revolutionists. The Bolsheviki troops were commanded by members of the ol daristocracy and former army officers. A traveler returned from the Caucasus reports that while conditions in most provinces are not abnormal, there is no sympathy with Premier Kerensky. He believes that the

POWER OF PREMIER SEEMS COLLAPSED

Petrograd, Friday, Nov. 16.—(Noon.) Deserted by most of his officers and virtually ordered to surrender to the Bolsheviki, Premier Kerensky evaded the guards sent for him and has disappeared. Gen. Dukhonin has resumed temporary command of the Kerensky forces recently defeated at Tsarskoe-Selo.

Gen. Krasnoff, former commander under Kerensky, who was arrested with other members of the premier's staff, has been released on the ground that he was only obeying the orders of his superior. Gen. Krasnoff's report concerning the disappearance of Kerensky confirms that he fled under disguise.

Premier Kerensky, when told that his officers were against him and that his men weer on the point of deserting, agreed to come to Petrograd, but while a guard was being arranged he dropped out of sight.

Talks With Gen. Krasnoff.

"At 3 o'clock on the afternoon of Nov. 1 (old style, Nov. 14 new style) I called the quarters of the commander-in-chief," said Krasnoff. "He appeared nervous and excited. 'General,' said he, 'you have betrayed me. Your Cossacks say they will arrest me and give me up to the sailors.'

"'Yes,' I answered, 'such a discussion is now going on. There appears to be little sympathy for you.'

"'Do the officers feel the same way?" he asked.

"'Yes.'

"'What shall I do? Will I have to commit suicide?'

"'If you are an honest man you will go to Petrograd under a white flag and appear before the revolutionary committee where you will negotiate as head of the government.'

"Kerensky agreed to this and he was promised a guard. He objected to a guard of sailors on the ground that some enemies were among them. He wanted to wait until night, but finally agreed to make the trip by daylight.

Kerensky Flees in Disguise.

"I went and called Colonel Kishkoff, of the Tenth Don Cossacks and ordered him to appoint a guard of eight men. A half an hour later the Cossacks told me that Kerensky could not be found. I raised the alarm, thinking that he could not have left Gatchina."

M. Bibenko, member of the committee on war and marine has reported to the workmen's and soldiers' congress that Kerensky fled garbed as a sailor. Before Kerensky's flight, Bibenko said he talked with Cossacks and found they were willing to come to an agreement with the Maximalists, only the officers being opposed. He said that he had promised the Cossacks that they would be released and possibly be allowe dto retain their mounts and arms and return to the Don region.

Bibenko denied that Michael Romanoff, the former grand duke Michael Alexandrovitch was with Kerensky. He denied also that General Korniloff had escaped from prison.

CONGRESSMEN UNDER FIRE IN THE WAR ZONE

British Front in Belgium, Friday, Nov. 16.—(By the Associated Press.)—Five members of the party of American congressmen and private citizens, who spent yesterday and part of today visiting the Belgian war zone, had a narrow escape from death or injury today when they were caught in a sudden burst of German machine gun fire, while inspecting the front line trenches near Dixmude. The Americans in danger were Congressman C. C. Dill, of Spokane, Wash.; Congressman Charles B. Timberlake, of Colorado; Congressman John Miller, of Seattle, Wash.; Congressman Albert Johnson, of Washington, and former Representative Stout, of Montana. Nobody was hit, but it was one of those peculiar freaks of fortune which soldiers call luck, because the shots came in a shower, so close to them it seemed almost certain some one must be wounded; although they were exposed only for a brief time. The other seven members of the party was in another section of the trench and were not disturbed by the fire. Later, however, when all the Americans were together the Germans dropped a big sheel some yards away, seriously endangering every one. One member in describing the incident to the correspondent later, said he and his companions heard the shell coming.

"It sounded like the road of an airplane," he said. No one was injured. The visitors spent the night near the front and rose early this morning for a trip to the trenches in the vicinity of Dixmude. The Belgian and German lines run within thirty yards of each other at one point and it was there that the five men came into danger. Only the usual firing was under way when the party, accompanied by Belgian officers, reached this place.

The Americans were having an excellent view of the lines when several of them got into an exposed position and were seen by the eGrmans. Before the visitors realized the situation bullets were whining all about them like a storm of hail and dirt was being thrown into their faces as some of the steel pellets struck the top of the trench.

The Americans departed this afternoon for England. On arriving at the port whece they sailed they said their trip to the Belgian front had been most satisfactory and that the reception accorded could not have been more cordial. They were especially pleased at the invitation of King Albert to take tea with him. The American minister Brand Whitlock also was present at the invitation of the king.

HOW VILLA WORKED TO GET REVOLT IN MOTION IS RELATED

Presidio, Texas, Nov. 17.—Details of the 4,500 mile trip which Francisco Villa made recently through a dozen Mexican states to discuss with his chiefs plans for launching a new revolution, were related today by Colonel Miguel Trillo, Villa's secretary who came to the Mexican side of the Rio Grande.

Disguised as a wealthy rancher, with a long black beard, a charros suit and big sombrero, Villa visited Durango, Zacatecas, Jalisco, Morelos, Northern Vera Cruz, Coahuila, Michoacanan and other states, conferring with the various revolutionary chieftains and discussing plans for the popolitical revolution throughout the republic.

"Villa was known as 'Captain' to his officers, who accompanied him as a body guard," Trillo said. "Among the chiefs Villa met on this three months' trip were Maquel Palz in Northern Vera Cruz and the Tampico district; Roberto Sechudo, in Vera Cruz; Sedilla brothers, in San Luis Potosi; Zapata, in Morelos; Reyna, in Sonora, and Eugeno Aguilar, in the south.

"Returning from this trip on October 11 Villa rejoined his column at Canutilla, Durango, and the advance to the border here started. Marching at night and hiding in the daytime, the troops reached Ojinaga after six weeks' marching. A part of the time the Villa command carried skull and cross bones flags of General Murguias' death head brigade to disguise the identity of his men. The capture of Ojinaga was the start of the big campaign."

Russian government troops have united with the proletariat red guard and are in control. The Bourgeois has organized a white guard, which also is well armed.

LIBERTY BONDS HAVE SINGULAR MARKET COURSE

New York, Liberty bonds moved in a perplexing manner on the stock exchange today, the 4's declining in the first hour to the new low record of 98.18, a depreciation of almost 2 per cent, while the 3½'s advanced from yesterday's final quotations of 99 to 99.22.

Various reasons are given by bond dealers in explanation of this movement. The more popular theory is that the 3½'s being tax exempt are most favored by persons of wealth, while the 4's are subject to a super tax. It is believed also that many subscribers to the 4 per cents found themselves unable to take up their allotment because of existing conditions in the stock market and these subscriptions are now being liquidated.

FATE OF RUSSIAN WOMEN WARRIORS CAUSES CONCERN

Petrograd, Nov. 15.—(Thursday.)—The fate of the women soldiers captured at the winter palace is arousing speculation. It is said they have been transferred to Liavoshzva, beyond Bielievostrof, Finland, where it is reported they have been treated harshly. Three are said to have disappeared. The British embassy has made futile efforts to ascertain the conditions under which they are held.

DON'T KICK—HELP.

There would be much less complaint of the coal situation, we believe, if consumers would reflect somewhat upon the prodigious difficulties with which the fuel administration has had to deal. Almost at the outset of the fuel administration's work the industrial situation in the mines of several extensive regions became acute. Strikes were launched and for many days the affected regions produced no coal. Many operators were not disposed to acquiesce in the government regulations and no great haste was made in some instances to get an understanding with the workers in the mines.

It also should be considered that the coal situation has been one of the phases of the greatest breakdown of railway transportation this country has ever known. That condition has been persistent for a year and a half. It was constant all through the fall and winter of a year ago. It has been aggravated during the past half year by the unprecedented demands of the government to meet its needs in the war. Some improvement has been lately the fact and there is no reason to question that the railway management of the country, under the direction of the railway war board, has been doing everything possible to bring something like order and effectiveness out of a situation that was almost chaotic. The draft on the railroads will continue with increasing strain through the winter, but there are now in evidence encouraging reasons to believe that transportation will be so capably directed as to ward off actual distress from the fuel situation.

The federal government has no greater corollary problem of the war to deal with than the question of fuel. It relates not only to domestic and industrial consumption of coal in the United States, but to the work of the navy in the war and to the continued military efficiency of two of our allies—France and Italy. To expect that all phases of this gigantic problem can be given immediate and happy solution at the outset of the government undertaking to control fuel is to expect the impossible. In time there will be control that is thorough and administration that is smoother.

Consumers of coal, no matter whether domestic or industrial, must understand their own importance as factors in the coal situation. There must be such a conservation of fuel as this country has never attempted. Waste and extravagance must cease. Overheated homes and office buildings can no longer be the rule. Careful and scientific stoking must take the place of over-feeding to produce steam for industry. Use of fuel to produce electric current for garish display must come to an end. All these economies and conservations cannot be made the effectual practice at once. In a short time, it is to be thought, they will become the daily common practice. They will have to be or the country will suffer in the war.

America is entering upon a new experience. Carelessness, waste, extravagance in the use of our resources have been our practices for a century and more. We have always had over-abundance of fuel and of food. We now have come upon a time in the midst of the nation's most perilous crisis when we can produce enough of neither to answer our needs except by conserving what we are able to get. There must be patience with this fuel problem. It will be solved at length in a fashion that will answer all imperative necessities provided there be co-operation of the public with the purposes of the government. Remember that war needs stand above and take precedence over all other needs. The nation is now fighting for the security of its future. The people of the country must join all their efforts and strive as one to increase the power of the government. One way in which this can be done is to aid in the solution of the fuel problem.

Don't kick. Help.

MR. CUTSHALL'S APPOINTMENTS.

Only actual trial on the job will demonstrate what sort of public servant any man will make. So there is no saying how Mayor-elect Cutshall's appointees, just announced, may turn out. Some very promising men make rather indifferent executive officers of a government.

It is to be said, however, in all sincerity for the gentlemen the mayor-elect has designated for his boards that they vouchsafe an excellent prospect of a capable and satisfactory administration. Some of them have had experience in public affairs. Some of them are without any such experience. All of them are of high character and will enter office in enjoyment of an excellent degree of public confidence and that is a good asset to begin with.

We note with no little satisfaction that Mr. Cutshall has chosen his official subordinates with some reference to age. Most of the men he has named are, while by no means youths, such as may be described as young. If this means anything it should mean enthusiasm, energy and ambition to perform well.

We design nothing invidious and no disparagements whatsoever as to the others in noting with special approval Mr. Cutshall's appointment of Dr. Eric A. Crull to the board of health. We assume that it is the purpose to have Dr. Crull become the executive officer of the board. No better appointment could have been made from among Mr. Cutshall's friends and supporters or outside that circle, for the matter of that. Dr. Crull served four years on the board and during that term was its executive officer. Any respect in which he did not acquit himself well and thoroughly "make good" we have yet to find out. It is an excellent appointment and made, as we are glad to believe, wholly in the public interest.

Mr. Cutshall is framing up the executive department of the government under which the people of Fort Wayne must live and their city must progress during the next four years. We trust in all sincerity that his aides may turn out under trial to be as good as they look and we are pleased to add that we are harassed by no doubt on that score.

IN RUSSIA.

There is a faint gleam of hope to be seen even in the fact of a limited civil war in Russia. So far the clash is between military and naval factions variously divided, one element fighting for the Bolsheviki and the other for the provisional government. Kerensky appears to have been beaten in a rather decisive fashion near Petrograd and if his overthrow has not been accomplished the early consummation of it is indicated. In the greater part of vast Russia there is said to be no disturbance, a very natural incident of the situation. Russia in the mass seems to be waiting with a characteristic patience for something to come out of the bloody rivalries of the extremists to which they can lie. Sooner or later some sort of strong, if not wise, leadership will come and open the way to the establishment of order and the setting up of the state. It may be a democracy and it may be a despotism come back that such state will be, but there soon must come something. The patience of the people in this acute stress is itself promising. They will help along with something, even it be only with a civil war out of which bloody trial their future must be wrought.

Austrians in Minnesota were murdered, it is said, because they had invested in Liberty bonds and had given aid to the Red Cross. That is a new turn in enemy propaganda and one that will not greatly improve the cause of the kaiser or the progress of the kaiserists in this land. Assassination as a rebuke to loyalty and a punishment of patriotism will not go far nor accomplish much in the United States.

If there are four hundred and fifty million bushels of potatoes in the country from this year's harvest, the bet is a good one with odds on that they are going to be cheaper in midwinter than they are now. The food administration will probably have its eye out that no potatoes are dumped into the river to create a scarcity and a better price.

Thomas A. Edison has invented an engine that will propel a seagoing ship without vibration. That might be applied also to certain seagoing vehicles that navigate the land.

It will not surprise many to learn that reports of the arrest of Hon. Joseph P. Tumulty, of the White House, as a spy are wholly unfounded

Editor of Every Week.

Yesterday I met a man who had just landed from the western front; and he told me the heart-rending story of the walking wounded.

The wounded who have lost an arm, or an eye, or a part of the face, but are still able to struggle back from the front line trenches alone.

Go with me for a moment to France: I want you to see what he saw. I want you to know the truth.

It is the day before the big push. For weeks the army has known the exact hour and moment when the barrage would lift and the men leap out "over the top."

The enemy has known it, too; his preparations are as great and as careful as ours.

On the day before, the engineers plant a line of painted white spots a few yards apart, leading from the rear straight to the borders of No Man's Land.

Simple painted posts: what are they for?

They are to guide the walking wounded. Eyes blurred with blood and suffering that might lose the road can follow the trail of those painted posts; bodies too weak from shell shock or gas to stand alone can find there a momentary support.

The trail of the painted posts is the trail of the walking wounded; the trail of blood and misery and pain.

Just before dawn the men file into the forward trenches. Singing? Not a bit. Talking? Hardly a word. Only the silent, heavy tread of men who have written their last letters home. Men with faces carved out of stone.

They pass out of camp; they pass the base hospitals; they pass the canteen. And just before they reach the front trench—at the very front, under the fire of the big guns themselves—each man pauses for just a second at a dug-out.

From it a hand reaches out; in the hand a piece of chocolate for each man to be eaten in case he falls wounded in No Man's Land. A hearty Good Luck and God Bless You. It is with this, the voice of the Y. M. C. A. secretary, ringing in their ears that the men go "over the top."

An hour passes: two hours. And slowly, painfully, draggingly, they come back. The men who have lost an arm, and the men who have lost an eye, and the men who carry in their shoulders or their abdomens or their legs the enemy's bullets and shell.

And they stop at the Y. M. C. A. dug-out first. It lies nearest the guns. Nearer than the doctor or hospital. There every man gets a cup of hot tea if he wants it: there two orderlies stand with hypodermics in their hands.

"Do you want it?" they demand of each man who passes through.

And either he thrusts out his arm to receive the soothing potion, or he nods his head and passes on.

On along the way of painted posts to the hospitals and to rest.

Sometimes the dug-out is shelled, and a Y. M. C. A. secretary loses his life; two went out together on one day recently.

It is part of the game; they ask for no sympathy: they ask not even for pay: many of them are working for nothing at all.

All they ask is for money to "carry on." To be able to stand just behind the front with chocolate for the men who are "going over the top." To be able to stand there with hot tea and morphine for the men who are staggering back along the way of painted posts.

Thirty-five million dollars—it is a lot of money. But you would not say so if you stood beside the way of painted posts.

You would not say so if you saw the procession of the walking wounded.

It would not be much if one of the walking wounded were your brother or your cousin or your son.

He may be one of them before the war is over; he may be over there even now. Stand with him, asks the Y. M. C. A. Let the hand that the Y. M. C. A. reaches out be your hand. Let the chocolate that it gives be your chocolate, as he goes past the dug-out "over the top."

And be there with your cup of tea and your morphine when he comes back again.

Past the dug-out.
With the walking wounded.

(Capper's Weekly.) —

Herbert Hoover's repeated and even solemn exhortations to the American people to cut down on certain foods, wheat bread in particular, have not had the hearing they deserve.

Thousands, if not millions, of people take these appeals lightly, and do not yet see the seriousness of a situation that those familiar with facts think can scarcely be exaggerated.

Why should Americans stint on wheat bread—just so that some foreign peoples may have flour?

Why, isn't there enough food to go around?

There is no evidence of a famine that those people can perceive. They take the Hoover warnings with a grain of salt.

The facts are suggested, however, in such stories as that of ex-Consul Roth of the wonderful improvements made by the German engineers and mechanics in the U-boat.

Food must be saved particularly wheat and flour, because food is being destroyed as well as eaten. So that there is a shortage and nobody knows how great the shortage is and may be.

It all depends upon the warfare between the U-boat and the various machines that fight it.

At best thousands of tons of wheat and flour must be sunk in the sea, besides that which is consumed, and those hundreds of millions of bushels that are not available for export.

In times like the present, when the genius if all the foremost nations is engaged in a terrific contest, it is well not to take too lightly any earnest counsel that comes from the highest and most expert quarters.

In any case the sacrifice made in curtailing wheat consumption and veal, lamb and similar foods is a small gift to the nation compared with what those who are devoting their lives to its service are giving daily and hourly.

KNITTING OF OLD AND NOW.

(Hartford Times.)

In grandmother's day every girl was taught to knit, but most of the knitting actually was done by the older women, supposed to be possessed of greater leisure. Knitting, with the four fine steel needles and fine yarn then used, was a slow process. Even a stocking was the work of weeks, according to the time per day devoted. It might be added that when tapered and "toed" it was a stocking recognizable as such and not mistaken for either a helmet or a mitt. Those were the days when knitting was a business, not an adventure or a freak of fashion.

Grandmother sat by the fireside, and her needles clicked through the daylight hours. She would hardly have felt justified in taking her knitting to church. Her descendants seem to have gone daft over what she took calmly. So we meet the children, with their shining morning faces, knitting on the way to school.

We note the society woman knitting at the opera or the play, or perhaps in her motor, and even on the street and and in steam cars. The devotee of the movies watches the unfolding pictures while her fingers work automatically on in the darkness. Young and old of the female persuasion are knitting seduiously, almost frantically, while even males with overmuch leasure are suspected of yielding to the fascination of the points and the yarn and the stitches. A mass of garments of one sort or another, some with form and comeliness and use, some without, is going to be the result.

And little harm done, to be sure. Knitting is a pursuit of thrift. The knowledge of how to fashion useful garments with nothing but needles and yarn will not come amiss. The training of the mind and the muscles is good for the nerves, properly conducted. The height of the present wave will doubtless pass, but it will leave many with useful knowledge and profitable habits, while something is bound to come out of this that in some manner can be utilized for wear. Four needles of our younger days have given way to two.

SAVE THE FUEL.

Editor of The Sentinel:

About eighty per cent. of the domestic consumers are wasting from ten to forty per cent. of their coal.

Some consumers don't know this and others know and don't care, while comparatively few are properly conserving the limited supply. Let's "wake up" and take notice.

This same coal that is now the serious concern of the entire country and that the consumers are necessarily paying big prices for, even when they can get it, falls through and around the grates int othe ash-pan and is thrown out. And it costs good money to have it hauled to the dump.

Let every care-taker of steam and hot water boilers, furnaces, baseburners, soft coal heaters and ranges sift the cinders for one month as a personal experiment for those who have never tried it. If this is done, how many hundreds of tons of fuel can be conserved in Fort Wayne and Allen county alon? Do this now, if never before, as a patriotic duty.

Word has been received in this city announcing the accidental death at Stockton, Cal., of Charles G. Barthold, formerly of this city. The new church known as "Christ's Evangelical Lutheran Church of the General Synod," was fully organized at the Y. M. C. A. rooms last Sunday. There were in all fifty-four who signed the constitution of the new organization as charter members, and were received into the fellowship and communion of the church. Several families of children were also baptized. The following officers were elected: Elders, Jacob H. Keil and Joseph Merillot; deacons, George W. Puff and Charles A. Singry. Rev. J. S. Nelson was also chosen as pastor. The Lord's supper was then administered, Rev L. A. Getwald, D. D., of Wittenberg, of the Theological seminary, Springfield, Ohio, officiating. In the evening an enthusiastic Y. P. S. C. E. was organized with officers as follows: President, William H. Myers; vice president, Miss Stella Nelson; secretary, Miss Maud Merillet; corresponding secretary, Miss Rena B. Nelson; treasurer, Charles Boshler. After a most excellent sermon by Rev. Gotwald, Rev. Nelson was publicly installed pastor of the new church, which starts out upon its mission of saving souls under very favorable auspices. The services were all well attended and deeply impressive and helpful.

W. C. T. U. INSTITUTE TO BE HELD FRIDAY

Arrangements Have Been Made for an All-Day Session at the Court House.

The Allen County W. C. T. U. institute will hold an all-day session in the assembly room of the court house Friday, November 23, to which the public are cordially invited. A fine program has been arranged which should not only appeal to those connected with this organization, but to all persons who are interested in welfare work and the betterment of humanity.

Reports will be made by both county and local superintendents of each department. Several new departments have been added to the organization and many new members have been enrolled, all of which will enter into the splendid reports which will be given on Friday. After the day's business session an evening program will be given which will include a play by the Sahara quartette entitled, "The Death of John Barleycorn." The public are invited to this.

Several days ago a list of the new superintendents for the coming year was published and the following were unintentionally omitted: Mrs. Ella Gillum, 727 Knitters' avenue, superintendent medical department; Mrs. W. J. Whiteman, 807 Huffman street, assistant superintendent Temperance and Mission.

The W. C. T. U., organized primarily to annihilate the liquor traffic, has gradually enlarged its scope until today it is truthfully called a "University of Reform." The busy woman can here get into touch with all forms of social service. To bring this concentrated reform movement to the attention of the public by the largest organization of women in the world and to further educate and enthuse its own members is the purpose of the W. C. T. U. institute.

IN MEMORIAM.

(In loving memory of my husband, Herman Zelt, who passed away two years ago today, November 17th, 1915.)

The month of November again is here,
To us the saddest of the year,
For it took from us away
A dear one two years ago today.

A precious one from us is gone;
A voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.

SOCIETY

The assembly room of the Jefferson school was well filled Friday afternoon by women who were interested in a demonstration and talk by Miss Elizabeth Cowan, of Washington, who is here for the purpose of assisting the women along the line of food conservation. Two things which Miss Cowan said are particularly interesting. One was that a silver lining to the war cloud is the return of women to the habits of thrift and work that were characteristic of their grandmothers. Another, was the fact that the reason for conserving animal fats is because the government needs them in making high explosives. Miss Cowan made and gave recipes for corn pone, oatmeal coffee cake, date muffins, and bean loaf, the latter being a meat substitute. "Don't be afraid of seasoning well," cautioned Miss Cowan for in that respect the substitute needs pepper and salt in order to suggest the tastiness of meats. The recipe for bean loaf is as follows: Two cups cooked and mashed lima beans, one cup breadcrumbs, one tablespoon of chopped onions, one egg, two tablespoonfuls of melted vegetables fat or oil, season well with pepper and salt and add two tablespoonfuls of tomato catsup. Mix and shape into a loaf such as a meat loaf cook thoroughly. Eat with tomato sauce made of two slices of onion and two tablespoonsful of flour, salt, pepper and narrow strips of green pepper.

Winter Coat With Two New Wrinkles

A winter coat of heavy wool velour with fur bandings is anything but a novelty these frosty days but the designer of the coat pictured here has covered two new wrinkles in the art of coat making—the flaring skirt and a fur cuff that extends from the buckle of the hand to the elbow.

The flare, welcome change from the long straight line of the universal silhouette, is achieved by the cut at the waistline, and by generous fullness held smoothly in check by a fitted piece over the hips.

The deep graceful cuffs reach almost from the finger-tip to the elbow on the outer arm.

EVENING GOWNS ARE DESIGNED TO SUIT TASTES OF ALL AND HERE ARE TWO OF THE ACCEPTED MODES

Whether one is a slim young debutante affecting fluffiness and simplicity, or of mature dignity demanding clinging velvet or satin, one's taste may be suited in the evening gowns which are the accepted modes of the season.

The close fitting frock is of thick, lustrous satin in the softest cream color, embroidered in silver sequins. The fish-tail train is lined with cloth of silver.

The other frock uses satin in apricot shade merely as its firm foundation and obtains its charming airiness by goodness knows how many yards of chiffon.

INTERNAL SITUATION OF GERMANY IS BAD

Economic Conditions Are Serious and Mutinies in Navy and Army.

Berne, Oct. 22.—(Correspondence.) There has just arrived here from Germany a naturalized American, who has lived in Germany throughout the war, worked in German seaport cities, passing for or being considered a German subject, mingling not only with the common people, but having occasional access to the councils of the high.

In his opinion Germany is suffering acutely now and dissatisfaction and worse reign in certain strata of her army and navy. Recent mutinous uprisings have had to be sternly repressed and the mutineers shot. Thoughtful Germany, he thinks, comprising men of the Ballin type, is desperately anxious for peace and secretly anxious to end the war before America has been utterly alienated.

This man left Germany early in October, because he had reason to fear that he was going to be impressed for military service. The German government had refused to recognize the validity of his American naturalization since he failed to comply with the law existing in 1913, and did not seek the consent of the German government to his step. To get out he had to induce the Spanish embassy to bring pressure to bear on the German government. On reaching Switzerland one of his first steps was to seek The Associated Press correspondent, to whom he first proved satisfactorily his American citizenship, then volunteered such information as he possessed about Germany as the duty of a patriotic American citizen. Strangely enough, at the very moment he was telling his story with details about mutinies in the German navy, the German minister of marine, Admiral von Capelle, was announcing the naval mutinies to the reichstag.

Economic Situation Bad.

"The economic situation in Germany," he says, "is far worse than anyone on the outside realizes, is so critical that I for one look for a break, a collapse, next spring or late in the winter. Nor are the good crops that one hears boasts about every once in so often going to change the situation materially.

"Throughout the German people there is what amounts to a hatred of America, and this hatred has been carefully concentrated on President Wilson because it is easier to hate a man than a notion, especially a nation that is the home of pretty nearly everyone's relative.

"But the big men of Germany, the men who have to look ahead and guide the empire after the war, do not hate America. They feel too keenly that they need America, and they would like to stem the tide of hate before it becomes mutual and the United States are alienated, perhaps for all time.

"They know that after the war there is only one country in the world where they can get the money they shall need, America, and they are worrying a-plenty nowadays. They, and all Germany, want increasingly a peace that shall specify, among other things, the right to purchase raw as well as finished materials anywhere in the world on the same terms as any other nation.

May Confiscate Property.

"Every indication points to probable confiscation of property and repudiation of perhaps half the war loan totals after the war. Even the percentage of property to be confiscated is being talked of, and it seems probable that the government will take twenty per cent. of everything.

"On the other hand its seems probable from all I hear that an even half of all outstanding war loans will be nullified. The seventh will suffer exactly as the first, and the first as the seventh. Fifty per cent. will be repaid, and the other fifty per cent. will either be cancelled or will merely continue to pay interest—will be a sort of perpetual investment, the capital for which cannot be realized.

"As surely as anything can be predicted there will be in the central powers a series of laws forbidding emigration. And in anticipation of them countless Germans today are talking about ways and means of getting away after the war. South and North America, and peculiarly enough New Zealand and Australia, are the havens to which they speak of fleeing. The first German ship that lands in America after hostilities will leave fifty per cent. of its crew.

"Central Europe" Idea Impossible.

"It is becoming clearer and clearer to Germans every day that all the talk that has gone the rounds about a "Central Europe" after the model of Professor Naumann and others will be out of the question.

"Contrary to the belief that seems to be almost universal outside of Germany, I really believe that Pan-Germanism is on the decrease rather than the increase among the masses of the people, and this despite the increased noise about it everywhere in Germany, and the intensive way in which it is being encouraged. The reason for this is that more and more the German people are coming to realize what a catastrophe it will be for them after the war is over if they are hated in all the world. Pan-Germanism, they are coming to feel, is likely to intensify the feeling against them, and thereby make their economic struggle in the future more difficult."

He then touched briefly on Austro-German relations and cautioned against any hope that Austria will fall away from her big ally, for, he explained, she is too independent financially and militarily, to be able to shake loose, much as she might like to do so. The German military authorities see to it that German soldiers are intermingled with Austrian troops not only to spur them on in fighting, but also to prevent their quitting.

Mutinies in Navy and Army.

Regarding the naval and military situation he told of mutinies aboard battleships as hinted at by von Capelle. The men had, he said, dismounted guns and thrown them overboard, had assaulted officers and refused to obey orders, in the hope of crippling the German navy and bringing about a peace of desperation in that way. The mutinous forces, however, had not been large or strong enough to accomplish much, and had been put down. Most of them were shot, others in exceptional cases had been put back into service on their promise to be good.

This spirit, he continued, extended to the army also, fanned to a flame occasionally by sectional jealousy and dislike. Thus, he said, he knew that miniature battles had been fought between Bavarian and Prussian troops, and that certain troops on the east front had on one occasion mutinied and declared in favor of marching on Berlin rather than Petrograd. Naturally all news about these and similar clashes had been carefully suppressed and leaked out only when the soldiers returned or wrote home, in the same way that sailors in Hamburg and Kiel spread the first reports of the mutinies aboard the ships.

WHAT HAS BECOME OF—

THE EXCEEDINGLY POPULAR FOUNTAIN

There is no testimony as to whether the dance of these nymphs is for the purpose of making this fountain a popular resort or of increasing by exposure the resistance of young ladies' epidermis. Bernarr McFadden, their health teacher, says open-air dancing is healthful. See how sorry the little Cupid in the centerd is, because he has forgotten his bow and arrows.

LUTHERAN HOSPITAL ASSOCIATION TO MEET

Report of Various Officers and Committees Will be Made Monday Afternoon.

The Lutheran Hospital association will meet Monday afternoon at two o'clock in the reading room of the nurses' home. It being the semi-annual meeting of the association, reports of the various officers and committees will be submitted and discussed.

The most important work that will lay open before its members is the discussion as to the future welfare of the institution. No doubt, not only the members of the hospital association take great pride in the institution, in the work of the dostors in that institution and the nurses' work upon the sick and convalescing, but also men of all classes of the city and surrounding territory who have in any way become acquainted with the good work, take the same pride.

The institution with all its workers is as patriotic as any institution in the country, inasmuch as it tries to conform with the wishes of its government. Therefore the hospital board, after getting the consent of the churches who are backing the institution, has upon request of the government, resolved to add an additional building to the nurses' home. The hospial now has a home accommodating about 40 nurses. Still, in order to make it possible for more nurses to prepare themselves to serve their country in alleviating pain of the sick and wounded, the above resolution was made. It is not known whether any other hospital in this city or any other has done more. The new building will cos tapproximately $10,000. Dr. H. A. Duemling, the chief surgeon of the hospital, is a very enthusiastic worker for the new addition of the nurses' home.

NOT ALLOWED TO SELL AT EXCESSIVE PROFIT

Notice to That Effect is Served Upon Wholesale and Retail Grocers.

H. E. Barnard, federal food administrator for Indiana, has served notice to the wholesale and retail grocery trade that all goods must hereafter be sold at a reasonable advance over the actual purchase price. Hoarding on the part of retailer and consumer also will not be permitted.

Mr. Barnard's notice follows:

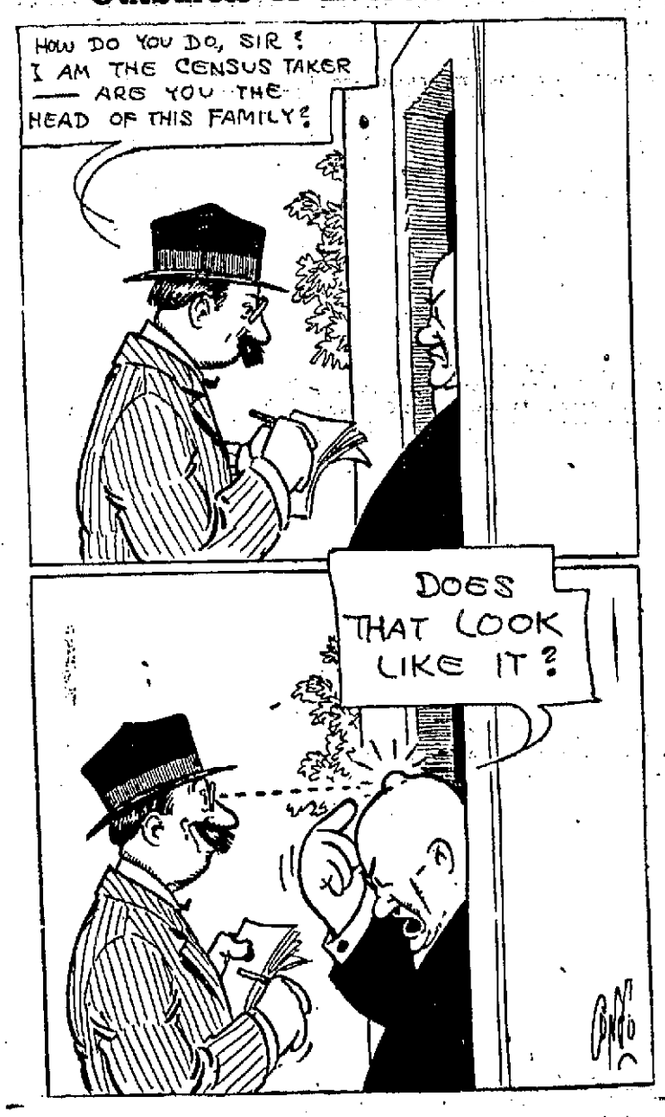

"Notice to the wholesale and retail grocery trade: The rules and regulations governing the handling of food by firms licensed under the Food Control Act provide that all goods must be sold at a reasonable advance over the actual purchase price of the particular goods sold within regard to the market or replacement value at the time of such sale. In interpreting this rule I shall hold that it applies to all foods commonly sold in groceries. The purpose of the rule is obviously to keep food stuffs out of the hands of speculators and to distribute them at a reasonable profit.

"While retail dealers who do a business of less than a hundred thousand dollars a year are not licensed, wholesalers are prohibited from selling goods to retailers who do not sell their trade on the basis above indicated. Whenever retailers exact more than a fair profit over the purchase price of the goods they handle, wholesalers are instructed to sell them no more goods.

"List of licensed goods is as follows:
Wheat, wheat flour, rye or rye flour.

Mary McLane, she who collaborated with copper ore to make Butte, Mont., famous, has gone into filmdom. Mary is now entertaining the cameraman in the filming of one of her most famous books, "Men Who Have Made Love to Me."

Says Douglas Fairbanks: "There is one rule which every athlete must follow to be successful and that is be clean in mind and body. For a starter, I know of no better advice."

The collection of precious stones owned by Miss Edna Goodrich might well be envied by an honest-to-goodness princess. And she wears them all in her first Mutual picture, "Reputation," in which she somes back to the screen, after an absence of two years.

Have you ever seen "Teddy," the dog actor, in the Mack Tennett comedies? Well, "Teddy" has adopted an understudy. This is a St. Bernard pup, and his name is "Tramp," and they sure make some fun.

Nazimova's initial starring vehicle, "God's Message," under the Metro banner, is said to have received government aid in staging the war scenes.

Little six-year-old Mary McAlister, of Essany, was one of the first purchasers of liberty bonds during the last drive. Out of her own salary she bought a $100 bond.

"A Jitney Elopement," the latest Charlie Chaplin film, is said to be the biggest scream this popular film artist has ever done.

"The Lost Express," the 15 chapter serial, and the latest film in which Helen Holmes appears as the star, is a Mutual production that is "taking" well.

Julian Eltinge, one of the latest additions to filmdom, will shortly be seen in another new film, "The Clever Mrs. Fairfax," which is said to be even better than his first screen appearance.

How to Send Christmas Boxes To American Soldiers Abroad

For American Expeditionary Forces in Europe

1. By agreement between the War Department, the Postoffice Department, and Express Companies, the Commanding General, Hoboken, New Jersey, is designated as the forwarding agent for the re-routing and shipment of all express and mail matter, intended as Christmas Presents, for ultimate delivery to the American Expeditionary Forces.

2. The Express companies are heartily co-operating with the war department to facilitate to the greatest possible extent the prompt movement and delivery of Christmas Boxes to our expeditionary forces abroad, which includes the ambulance and aviation service taken over by the army. The special arrangements do not apply to shipments addressed to Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., Knights of Columbus or other organizations outside the army.

3. All shipments by express should be packed in wooden boxes, limited to twenty (20) pounds in weight, measure not more than two cubic feet in volume, be well strapped, and should have a hinged or screw top to facilitate opening and inspecting. No food products, other than those enclosed in cans or glass jars, should be packed in any such shipments.

4. Boxes must be fully, correctly and legibly addressed and conspicuously marked "CHRISTMAS BOX." The consignee's name, company, regiment or other organization, followed by the words "American Expeditionary Forces," should appear in the address, as follows:

From
W. H. Black,
51 John Street.
Buffalo, N. Y.

CHRISTMAS BOX

Private John W. Black,
Company "C,"
256 Regiment,
American Expeditionary Forces

Contents
Books
Clothing
Tobacco

In care
Commanding General,
Hoboken, N. J.

In the upper left corner the name and address of the sender must be placed as shown. The contents of each package will be stated on the outside by the proper wording, which will indicate the general nature of the contents. The address should be written or printed in ink.

5. In addition to the name and address of the sender and consignee, it is permissible to write or print on the box the occupation of the sender and inscriptions such as "MERRY CHRISTMAS," "PLEASE DO NOT OPEN UNTIL CHRISTMAS," "HAPPY NEW YEAR," "WITH BEST WISHES," and the like may be placed on the box in such a manner as not to interfere with the address.

6. All boxes must be waybilled to Hoboken, N. J., as prepaid to Hoboken, New Jersey.

7. The government will undertake the transportation of these CHRISTMAS BOXES from New York to the expeditionary forces abroad free of charge. No export license, invoices or other customs papers are required.

8. These boxes will be admitted to foreign countries free of duty.

9. Perishable articles should not be sent.

10. The principal articles prohibited are intoxicants of all kinds, poison, inflammable materials including friction matches, or composition which may kill or injure another or damage other goods. The commanding general, Hoboken, New Jersey, will cause every box to be opened and strict search to see that nothing of an explosive or other dangerous character is loaded aboard ship.

11. Owing to the great demand on transportation space, senders are urgently requested to make their packages as small as possible, preferably not exceeding 10 lbs. in weight, as we are advised that the small boxes will be given preference in shipment in order to accommodate the greatest number of prsons.

12. The shipment of Christmas boxes may begin immediately and no boxes will be forwarded overseas which do not reach Hoboken, New Jersey, on or before December 5th, 1917.

13. The name and complete address of both the consignee and sender should be written on a piece of paper or cardboard and enclosed within the box.

14. Because of the short time before December 5th it is necessary to give this opportunity for sending Christmas boxes the greatest possible publicity. Agents will very generally be able to secure the co-operation of local newspapers. We want all who have relatives and friends in the army abroad to know about this service.

15. All employes are requested to give these Christmas boxes especial attention. Careful handling and preferred service are necessary. We must do our part to insure the prompt and safe arrival at the front of all these reminders of home and the Holidays for our boys who are offering everything they have to our country.

Many People North of Garrett Have Been Exposed to the Disease.

(Special to the Sentinel.)

Garrett, Ind., Nov. 17.—The centralized school, located one mile north of this city and known to every one as the "North school" was closed yesterday on account of smallpox that has broken out. It seems that about every one has been exposed to it as on Thursday evening a birthday party was held in that vicinity and one of the parties, who was broken out and not aware of what was the matter, attended the party and the next morning was quite sick, necessitating the care of a physician, who immediately pronounced it smallpox. DIVORCE GRANTED TO MRS. EDNA CURRAN

(Special to The Sentinel.)

Auburn, Ind., Nov. 17.—Mrs. Edna Curran was granted a divorce Friday in the DeKalb circuit court from her husband, Floyd Curran, of Garrett. The couple were married in September, 1916, and eloped to Hillsdale, Mich. They have one child. Curran has been a prisoner in the county jail, having failed to make his payments to his wife which the court ordered him to do last spring when the divorce case was first filed. When he was brought into the court room Friday by Sheriff Baltz he was accompanied by his mother and step-father, Mr. and Mrs. Steve Martin, of Fort Wayne, former residents of Garrett. Mrs. Curran related a story of abuse which began two days after their marriage. She sprung a sensation when she made the statement that Curran had told her several times that he would do the same to her that he did to his first wife, adding that he had pinched her repeatedly and that when she died she was black and blue. The first wife will be remembered as Miss Fay Clayton, of Garrett, who died when her baby was born. This child by the first wife is cared for by Mr. and Mrs. Martin. Curran paid the amount due his wife and the court ordered him to pay $4 a week for the support of the child until it is sixteen years old.

The Auburn High School Athletic association will clear about $200 from the sacred opera, "Queen Esther," which they gave in the Court theater two nights this week.

PUBLIC WARNED AGAINST RATS

In this time of high cost of living, everybody should help to kill rats, a pest that destroys over $200,000,000 worth of foodstuffs annually besides distributing disease germs that cause the deaths of untold numbers of human beings. The easiest and most effective way to rid the house, barn, store or other buildings of rats is with Stearns' Paste, which can be bought for 45 cents at any store. It also effectually destroys mice, cockroaches and waterbugs that prey upon foods.—Advertisement.

Liberty Gardens Will Have Grocery

Mr. William S. Strauss says that he has admired Liberty Gardens for some time and just neglected to inquire more about them. Consequently the piece that he most desired was sold before he made inquiry. This no doubt is the case with many people, and those who wait too long will lose the opportunity that they now have.

Mr. Strauss, however, saw the many advantages in Liberty Gardens and at once selected two very choice lots. He expects to put a grocery store on one and a beautiful home on the other lot next spring. The news will be welcome to many who have bought, as well as to many who intend to buy. The slogan adopted by Mr. Rastetter, who has charge of selling Liberty Gardens, of "one look means two lots," is being carried out very nicely.

A Community of Homes in Country Club Gardens

During the last week or so a great many people have purchased lots in Country Club gardens, the new suburban development of the City and Suburban Building company, located just west of the Country club, on the Fort Wayne and Northern Indiana traction line, and also on the Huntington road. The majority of these people have signified their intention to build in the gardens by next spring. This will help make it the popular suburban place for many people of like avocation. Mrs. Matilda Koehler, 115 East DeWald, has just purchased one of the lots here of the City and Suburban Building company for an investment.

This store stands for Service, Quality, Reliability and has stood for these things for half a century, right here in Fort Wayne. Foster's.

The collection of precious stones owned by Miss Edna Goodrich might well be envied by an honest-to-goodness princess. And she wears them all in her first Mutual picture, "Reputation," in which she somes back to the screen, after an absence of two years.

Have you ever seen "Teddy," the dog actor, in the Mack Tennett comedies? Well, "Teddy" has adopted an understudy. This is a St. Bernard pup, and his name is "Tramp," and they sure make some fun.

Nazimova's initial starring vehicle, "God's Message," under the Metro banner, is said to have received government aid in staging the war scenes.

Little six-year-old Mary McAlister, of Essany, was one of the first purchasers of liberty bonds during the last drive. Out of her own salary she bought a $100 bond.

"A Jitney Elopement," the latest Charlie Chaplin film, is said to be the biggest scream this popular film artist has ever done.

"The Lost Express," the 15 chapter serial, and the latest film in which Helen Holmes appears as the star, is a Mutual production that is "taking" well.

Julian Eltinge, one of the latest additions to filmdom, will shortly be seen in another new film, "The Clever Mrs. Fairfax," which is said to be even better than his first screen appearance.

How to Send Christmas Boxes To American Soldiers Abroad

For American Expeditionary Forces in Europe

1. By agreement between the War Department, the Postoffice Department, and Express Companies, the Commanding General, Hoboken, New Jersey, is designated as the forwarding agent for the re-routing and shipment of all express and mail matter, intended as Christmas Presents, for ultimate delivery to the American Expeditionary Forces.

2. The Express companies are heartily co-operating with the war department to facilitate to the greatest possible extent the prompt movement and delivery of Christmas Boxes to our expeditionary forces abroad, which includes the ambulance and aviation service taken over by the army. The special arrangements do not apply to shipments addressed to Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., Knights of Columbus or other organizations outside the army.

3. All shipments by express should be packed in wooden boxes, limited to twenty (20) pounds in weight, measure not more than two cubic feet in volume, be well strapped, and should have a hinged or screw top to facilitate opening and inspecting. No food products, other than those enclosed in cans or glass jars, should be packed in any such shipments.

4. Boxes must be fully, correctly and legibly addressed and conspicuously marked "CHRISTMAS BOX." The consignee's name, company, regiment or other organization, followed by the words "American Expeditionary Forces," should appear in the address, as follows:

From
W. H. Black,
51 John Street.
Buffalo, N. Y.

CHRISTMAS BOX

Private John W. Black,
Company "C,"
256 Regiment,
American Expeditionary Forces

Contents
Books
Clothing
Tobacco

In care
Commanding General,
Hoboken, N. J.

In the upper left corner the name and address of the sender must be placed as shown. The contents of each package will be stated on the outside by the proper wording, which will indicate the general nature of the contents. The address should be written or printed in ink.

5. In addition to the name and address of the sender and consignee, it is permissible to write or print on the box the occupation of the sender and scriptions such as "MERRY CHRISTMAS," "PLEASE DO NOT OPEN UNTIL CHRISTMAS," "HAPPY NEW YEAR," "WITH BEST WISHES," and the like may be placed on the box in such a manner as not to interfere with the address.

6. All boxes must be waybilled to Hoboken, N. J., as prepaid to Hoboken, New Jersey.

7. The government will undertake the transportation of these CHRISTMAS BOXES from New York to the expeditionary forces abroad free of charge. No export license, invoices or other customs papers are required.

8. These boxes will be admitted to foreign countries free of duty.

9. Perishable articles should not be sent.

10. The principal articles prohibited are intoxicants of all kinds, poison, inflammable materials including friction matches, or composition which may kill or injure another or damage other goods. The commanding general, Hoboken, New Jersey, will cause every box to be opened and strict search to see that nothing of an explosive or other dangerous character is loaded aboard ship.

11. Owing to the great demand on transportation space, senders are urgently requested to make their packages as small as possible, preferably not exceeding 10 lbs. in weight, as we are advised that the small boxes will be given preference in shipment in order to accommodate the greatest number of prsons.

12. The shipment of Christmas boxes may begin immediately and no boxes will be forwarded overseas which do not reach Hoboken, New Jersey, on or before December 5th, 1917.

13. The name and complete address of both the consignee and sender should be written on a piece of paper or cardboard and enclosed within the box.

14. Because of the short time before December 5th it is necessary to give this opportunity for sending Christmas boxes the greatest possible publicity. Agents will very generally be able to secure the co-operation of local newspapers. We want all who have relatives and friends in the army abroad to know about this service.

15. All employes are requested to give these Christmas boxes especial attention. Careful handling and preferred service are necessary. We must do out part to insure the prompt and safe arrival at the front of all these reminders of home and the Holidays for our boys who are offering everything they have to our country.

(Special to The Sentinel.)

Auburn, Ind., Nov. 17.—Mrs. Edna Curran was granted a divorce Friday in the DeKalb circuit court from her husband, Floyd Curran, of Garrett. The couple were married in September, 1916, and eloped to Hillsdale, Mich. They have one child. Curran has been a prisoner in the county jail, having failed to make his payments to his wife which the court ordered him to do last spring when the divorce case was first filed. When he was brought into the court room Friday by Sheriff Baltz he was accompanied by his mother and step-father, Mr. and Mrs. Steve Martin, of Fort Wayne, former residents of Garrett. Mrs. Curran related a story of abuse which began two days after their marriage. She sprung a sensation when she made the statement that Curran had told her several times that he would do the same to her that he did to his first wife, adding that he had pinched her repeatedly and that when she died she was black and blue. The first wife will be remembered as Miss Fay Clayton, of Garrett, who died when her baby was born. This child by the first wife is cared for by Mr. and Mrs. Martin. Curran paid the amount due his wife and the court ordered him to pay $4 a week for the support of the child until it is sixteen years old.

Liberty Gardens Will Have Grocery

Mr. William S. Strauss says that he has admired Liberty Gardens for some time and just neglected to inquire more about them. Consequently the piece that he most desired was sold before he made inquiry. This no doubt is the case with many people, and those who wait too long will lose the opportunity that they now have.

Mr. Strauss, however, saw the many advantages in Liberty Gardens and at once selected two very choice lots. He expects to put a grocery store on one and a beautiful home on the other lot next spring. The news will be welcome to many who have bought, as well as to many who intend to buy. The slogan adopted by Mr. Rastetter, who has charge of selling Liberty Gardens, of "one look means two lots," is being carried out very nicely.

FOR SALE — Franklin five passenger touring car; owner leaving city; will sell for highest offer. Enquire at Riegel's cigar store, Main and Calhoun streets.

The majority of these people have signified their intention to build in the gardens by next spring. This will help make it the popular suburban place for many people of like avocation. AERIAL PLAY WILL MARK SUNDAY'S GAME

Both the Columbus Panhandles and the Friars Rely on Open Style.

One of the largest crowds of the season will be present Sunday to witness the game between the Columbus Panhandlers and the Fort Wayne Friars. The visiting team, as usual, will have one of the best teams in the west and a hard game may be expected. In the last two previous seasons, at their annual game, the Friars have outlucked the Buckeye team and won, both times by a 3 to 0 score. On previous occasions the Panhandles have come with a heavy team and depended on straight football for their gains. This year they will use a light but speedy backfield and depend on aerial play and open field end runs. This is the same game that the Friars have been using and so one of the fastest and most sensational games of the season will be seen.

Five of the famous Nesser brothers, always a drawing card in this city, are making the trip with the Panhandles and will be seen in action. Corcoran and Davis are new men in the back field. Both are light, weighing about 150 pounds, but are fast and extremely dangerous if they ever get loose with the ball. Brigham, at center, is another light man who is recognized as one of the best centers in the game. He has turned down offers to play with various Ohio college teams.

The Panhandles have been playing with the best teams of the west for a number of years and have made a reputation as the team that is never beaten. This honor is paid them because they never give up and fight all the way against all odds. Their famous drive toward the close of the game last season will never be forgotten, when they carried the ball nearly the full length of the field by straight line plunges, only losing the ball on a fumble just as the game closed.

The same Friar team will take the field that did such effective work last Sunday against Racine. Elward and Glockson will be held in reserve and may be expected to get into the contest when they are most needed. Helwig and Berghoc will start the game at ends, but may be replaced by Huntington and Elward. Pliska and Specht will start the game at the halves with Chambers at full. Smith and Young will get in the second half.

The preliminary game will be between the Tigers and the Overland Specials and should be one of the best preliminaries of the season as both teams are made up of a number of young stars who are expected to mix it from whistle to whistle. The lineup follows:

The Wolverines outweighed the Pennsylvania eleven, their line averaging 177½ pounds and the back field 164¾, compared to 171 and 158½ for the Quakers. The game started at 2:30 p. m.

Of the twelve games played between th etwo teams, Pennsylvania has won six, Michigan four and two were tied.

LAJOIE A MANAGER.

Cleveland, Nov. 17.—Managing a major league in 1918 is among the possibilities for Napoleon Lajoie, the former Cleveland star, who piloted the Toronto club to a championship in the International league last season. Although he signed only a one-year contract, Lajoie is assured of his berth in Toronto if he wishes to return.

Lajoie, who is spending the winter in Cleveland, asserts he will make no effort to obtain a better berth, but that he will not refuse a major league managership. Lajoie apparently believes in the old political adage that "the office should seek the man."

(By Morris Ackerman, Famous Hunter and Trapper.)

Outside of rabbits there probably are more ducks shot than any other American game.

You get that—"American game?" Really we should say that there are more ducks shot in the United States than any other kind of game, with the possible exception of rabbits.

Broadly speaking the wild duck is not a native of this country, as it breeds in the vast territory above the northern line of the United States and winters south of our boundaries.

It is on the fall migration that we get our best duck shooting, as the federal law prohibits the killing of migratory birds in the spring. There are several successful legal ways of hunting ducks, depending on the location and layout of each hunting place.

The best territory, the easiest hunted and with the largest bags is marsh ground. The marches offer wild rice and other vegetation that the ducks want and must have to sustain them on their long trips and as it is a natural feeding ground that is where you find them.

This is especially so of the mallard, black duck, teal and other non-diving ducks.

In this kind of hunting a blind is essential. That made of grass and rushes or weeds, stands about four feet high and is built right in the marsh. The ducks are either called in or decoyed, or both.

In marsh shooting the weather, while a consideration, does not spell half so much as is the case of ponds or lakes, where there is no food to entice ducks.

It takes good rough weather to bring in the ducks to the little ponds and lakes, and in order to have success you must be concealed in a blind, or in the weeds, along the lee shore.

In hunting certain varieties of ducks, such as ruddies, you can sneak up on them in a boat. While there is always a chance of sneaking up on most any kind of ducks, either in marshes or ponds, where you punt near the shore and where they are coves and bays along the shore line.

It may be said that duck hunting is not for the weak—that "the rougher the weather the better the shooting."

WABASH MEETS PURDUE AT LAFAYETTE TODAY

I. U. and DePauw Play at Bloomington — Other Indiana Games.

Purdue and Wabash at Lafayette, and Indiana and DePauw at Bloomington met on the football field this afternoon. Notre Dame played the Michigan Aggies at Notre Dame. Earlham met Butler at Indianapolis, and at Terre Haute Rose Poly played St. Louis university.

While Purdue naturally is much interested in the outcome of the game today with Wabash, it also is watching the result of that between Indiana and DePauw. The same is true of Indiana students in regard to their own game, and the one between Purdue and Wabash. The reason is that Purdue and Indiana have their annual game next Saturday, and each hopes to "get a line on the other" through today's results.

Wabash has developed a much stronger team than its early season games promised. Since its defeat by Indiana in its second game it has strengthened the weak places, and last Saturday held DePauw to one touchdown. DePauw started with a strong team and has not gone backward by any means. Early in the season Purdue was able to defeat DePauw by one point only.

Coach Stiehm during the past week not only trained his men for the DePauw game today, but also for the Purdue game. The same can be said of Coach O'Donnell at Purdue. He has had his mind on the Indiana game while handling his men for today's contest.

At Bloomington there has been much secret practice, some of it being by electric light. DePauw has been trying a number of new plays all week, and some of them promised shifts in today's lineup. Indiana is handicapped today by injuries to no less than six of its better men.

Earlham and Butler went into today's contest with stronger teams than they had at the last previous games. Earlham had both Jessup and Brown, its two halfbacks, again in the lineup.

WILL SAVE REGULARS FOR SATURDAY'S GAME

ATHLETIC HEADS TAKEN.

Lawrence, Kan., Nov. 17.—The war has taken three heads of Kansas university's athletic department. Herman Olcott, coach of the university's football eleven; has accepted, for the duration of the war, a position to assist in directing athelitics and the physical education of the 12,000 men at the Great Lakes Naval Training station.

George "Potsy" Clark, who was Olcott's assistant last year, is a second lieutenant at Camp Funston. Leon B. McCarty, former coach of the freshman team, is a first sergeant in a company of Kansas engineers.

This was Olcott's third year at Kansas university. He coached football teams and weight men for the field events. This fall he put his football squad through a period of military drill at the end of each day's practice.

MUCH IS AT STAKE IN TODAY'S GAME

Columbus, O., Nov. 17.—With the championship of the western conference at stake, Illinois and Ohio football teams are ready to battle at Ohio field this afternoon. Neither team has been defeated this season and followers of the gridiron sport predict a bitter game, with the advantage resting slightly with the Ohioans, last year's champions.

Both coaches refused this morning to make predictions, but stated they would have their regular teams on the field and it would be a fight to the finish. Last year's game was a 7 to 3 victory for Ohio. The probable lineup:

DECLINES TO SEND HORSE EAST.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 17.—John W. Schorr, of Memphis, Tenn., has declined to send Cudgel, his three-year-old, east to race against Omar Khayyam at Bowie for a purse of $5,000, because he was unable to arrange for satisfactory transportation. Cudgel, after the close of the Latonia meeting, with the other Schorr horses, was brought here for the winter.

Nothwithstanding the Cudgel was defeated Nov. 10 in his last start of the season, when he finished third to Rancher and Arriet at Latonia, horsemen who saw the race agree that it was a remarkable performance. Cudgel was assigned 135 pounds and after having been practically left, the son of Broomstick was timed the mile in 1:35 4-5 and a mile and an eighth in 1:49 2-5.

Mr. Schorr has said he would like nothing better than the opportunity to race Cudgel against Omar Khayyam, Wesly Hogan and other eastern cracks, "just to show the truf world what my colt can do, but he has had a hard season and is entitled to a rest."

FIGHTER AT CAMP TAYLOR.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 17.—Jimmy Dunn, for ten years a professional boxer and for years manager of prize fighters, has taken up his duties at Camp Zachary Taylor as boxing instructor to a considerable portion of the 30,000 selected men from Indiana, Kentucky and Southern Illinois. At present Dunn is attached as a civilian under the committee on training camp activities.

Dunn sponsored Johnny Kilbane, featherweight champion and at one time had thirty-two fighters under his wing.

Dunn's work at the camp is with the infantry school of arms, and in it he teaches especially capable men the art of self-defense, and they in turn will act as instructors for their companies. Army officers say that boxing teaches men to take punishment and increase their self-confidence.

MIKE O'DOWD DRAGS MIDDLEWEIGHT CROWN FROM BROW OF AL M'COY

(By Paul Purman.)

The middleweight crown which has for several years rested uneasily on the brow of Al McCoy, the Brooklyn southpaw, has been clawed from Al's dome and now adorns the curly head of Mike O'Dowd, the Fighting Harp," of St. Paul. It is going too far to say that Mike O'Dowd is the greatest middleweight fighter today, but by a curious freak of fortune he has the title and unless all signs fail will hang onto it with a death grip.

The middleweight title has been buffeted unmercifully since the death of Stanley Ketchell. Billy Papke first claimed it and defended it successfully against Willie Lewis in Paris in 1910.

The next year Cyclone Johnny Thompson defeated Pape and claimed the championship, but in 1912 both outgrew the title which remained in abeyance until Frank Klaus claimed it by virtue of a victory over Papke in 1913. His claims were pretty generally recognized.

Early in 1914 Chip unfortunately ran into a punch in the first round of his bout with Al McCoy and the latter assumed the title. McCoy was never a real champion, and usually dodged anyone who was likely to knock him out. He was beaten repeatedly in no-decision bouts, but O'Dowd was the first to make him take the count.

O'Dowd is a native of St. Paul. He recently graduated from the welterweight class and has not been taken very seriously as a middleweight. He is 22 years old, and has been fighting since 1913.

PURDUE AND WABASH IN ANNUAL CLASH

Lafayette, Ind., Nov. 17.—Purdue met Wabash in Stuart field here this afternoon with the strongest lineup it has presented at any time this season. The field was fast and championship play was expected. Donovan, of the Boilermakers, hoped to be able to keep his plays under cover for the game with Indiana next Saturday. Today's contest is the last home game for Purdue.

TWO NOTRE DAME MEN OUT OF TODAY'S GAME

Notre Dame, Ind., Nov. 17.—With two regulars, Gipp and Miller, out of the Notre Dame lineup Coach Harper was forced to send the lightest team that has represented Notre Dame in five years against the Michigan Aggies, when the two elevens met on Cartier field this afternoon. The team averages only 165 pounds. The Aggie squad arrived last night.

SPORT CHATTER

TED HAS HIM BEAT.

We slandered Jess Willard the other day when we said he was in a class by himself because he had contributed three minutes of boxing to U. S. soldiers. Ted Lewis goes him one better. He hasn't contributed anything.

The guys who watch a wrestling match are spectators. They ought to be a jury.

Ban Johnson is hunting in the south. Ban ought to do pretty well. All he would have to do would be to order the deers to stop running so he could get a shot at them.

Among things to lose sleep over is the fact that the basketball season will start soon.

REAL MARTHONERS.

Sidney Hatch, the long distance runner, has joined the army. It's to be hoped they don't send him to the Russian front. We like to have our championships stay in America and its a cinch there are at least 2,000,000 men in the Russian army who can beat Sid.

SURETHING PREDICTION FORCES ATTELL TO KNOCK OUT BAKER

(By Ed Moriarity, Noted Sport Writer.)

Sport fans wonder often how sport writers are courageous enough to risk being "shown up" as a result of strong predicitions which the writers make on coming sport events.

Many times ye scribe is banking on his general knowledge. Often, like the average fan, he discovers, when too late, that personal prejudice figured in his prediction.

But sometimes he possesses information which enables him accurately to foretell what may be expected to happen, if he can depend upon the participants 'levelling,' which is to say, combating on the square.

Here is an example of how the "dope" was discovered in one instance and worked perfectly. Some years ago a promising featherweight boxer, Harry Baker, of San Francisco, lost a twenty round decision to Abe Attell, then champion feather. Some of the papers hailed Baker as a coming champion and likely to defeat Abe the next time out.

One sport writer had noticed that at the end of several rounds Attell would let loose for a few seconds and rush Baker toward the ropes. The men were rematched.

The sport writer went to Attell during his training and told him that he was certain he had stalled with Baker the first time.

"Are you going in for a knockout this time?" he asked Abe. The latter said he was. "Kid" Dalton, a hardy boy, who had lost several decisions to Baker, was training Attell. Your sport writer knew Baker never could knock Dalton out.

Attell and Dalton agreed to fight—not spar—two hard rounds in private for the benefit of the sport writer. In the second round the scribe was forced to pull Attell off Dalton, the latter being in danger of a knockout."

"You can knock Baker out if you want to. If you don't, it'll look bad to me, Abe," proclaimed the key tapper.

The betting was 2 to 1 that Baker would not be knocked out. The scribe went back to his office and insisted in his paper that the fight should end in a knockout if Attell really fought. The trouble ended in the eighth round when Abe sent Baker down for the count.

This was an instance when the writer was not guessing as regarded Abe's ability to score a knockout victory—and he had the champion's word that he would "level."

RELIGION, TEMPERANCE AND HEALTH

BY REV. R. P. ANDERSON.

Some years ago I came across a French novel that threw a lurid light upon the natural history of sin.

Sin, of course, is a word that jars upon cultured ears, like the word hell. We do not like to hear it, or to be reminded in a personal way that we are sinners. The fact is too ugly.

From a pretty little town in the provinces came a bright young man to study law in Paris. He was hungry for a taste of life, eager to learn, not only from books, but from contact with living souls. He was hungry, too, like a healthy young animal, for pleasure, for the gilded joys of the crowded boulevard, the cafe, and, above all, for love.

He met a young girl, a seamstress, alone in Paris, and quite as lonely and as hungry for friendship and love as he himself was. On bright Sundays they would go out together to the woods and spend happy hours in simple pleasure. They loved, or, at least, alas! the girl loved, and her love brought her shame. For the man had no intention of marrying. That would spoil his career. Besides, it would shock his family. His studies over, he disappeared.

Left to her fate the girl struggled on, heroically endeavoring to support herself and her child, a pretty boy. But the struggle proved too hard for her slender strength. She died, and her boy was sent by the authorities to an institution.

In the cold and inhuman atmosphere of this place he grew to young manhood, repressed, beaten, cowed, until his heart was hot against all men. At length, unable to endure the torture longer, he ran away and became part of that floating mass of humanity that rises like scum at night to the surface of Parisian life. He lived in the gutter. What he needed he stole. His meals were often filthy crusts. His pleasures were those of swine.

Then one day, hungry and desperate, he determined to rob a Jewish pawnbroker. He entered the shop, his purpose was detected, and in a fury of uncontrollable rage he slew the man —for bread.

And now comes the terrible irony of the story.

The boy's father had succeeded in life. By this time he was a famous lawyer and held the office of public prosecutor. In this capacity the case of the boy murderer was assigned to him and he set about obtaining the conviction of his own son.

Consider a moment. In those roseate days of youth sin was to this lawyer as a sweet and desirable morsel. He did not stop to think of possible consequences. Youth rarely does that. He lived in the ebullient moment. The fruit of the tree looked good in his eyes and he plucked it, ripe, and devoured it.

Sin offers pleasure to its devotees, and it keeps its word. It is sweet to the taste, honey-sweet, delicious. But it turns to ashes in the mouth.

As time went on the first pangs of sorrow were assuaged—they could hardly be called pangs of conscience, for conscience recognizes guilt, and this man felt only deprivation, annoyance. Then, with more mature thought, he began to realize that he had made a mistake. He often thought of the girl and his baby. Where were they now? They had dropped out of life entirely. He could not even trace them.

That is the second phase of sin. When the sweetness goes out of it, it is recognized as a mistake. Conscience is still drowsy; its eyes are full of sleep. A mistake.

According to the custom of French law the prosecutor questioned the boy murderer in private. As the story of the lad's life was unfolded the man realized the ghastly truth. He was the boy's father. More than that, his heartless abandonment of the mother was undoubtedly the cause of the lad's trouble. He and not the boy was responsible in the last analysis for the murder.

He let the matter run on, fighting a fearful battle in private, his conscience now thoroughly awake. The case was called in court. The facts were indisputable. But the lawyer, in his address to the jury, outlined the life of the boy, telling the story of the abandonment of the mother, of her struggle, of her death; scoring the cruelty of the heartless father, and finally confessing that he was that father, the really guilty man.

And this is the third phase that sin assumes. It is first a sweet morsel. Then it is seen to be a mistake. But it is more than a mistake. It is a curse.

That is the Bible statement about it. A curse! No other word describes it properly. A curse which, like a ploughshare, tears up the sacred things of life!

Most men pass through these three phases in their feeling about sin, even if sin does not rend their lives so dramatically and tragically as it did the life of this lawyer. The thought of sin rests lightly upon the young heart. A feather. No more. But as thought comes, and meditation on the grim realities of life, men see that sin is a blunder. There is no doubt of it. A sad blunder. But they go farther than that. The time comes, especially if they give thought to divine things and study their own hearts with any care, that sin is recognized as more than a blunder. A curse. Oh, a curse!

And that is why the words of Revelation are so precious to some of us: "There shall be no more curse." The torture of broken lives will be removed. The healing hand of Jesus Christ will bind up that which is broken. He alone can remove the curse. That is His mission.

Today we need a clear view of sin, that it may shock us. The saints of old had it and it made them strong men. For as long as we do not see sin for what it is we shall tamper with it.

DOING AS A MEANS OF LIVING.

This do and thou shalt live, said Jesus; for connected with every precept is a promise; and, while the precepts are few, the promises are like the sands of the sea and the stars in heaven for multitude. There are more than thirty thousand promises given us by the covenant-keeping God. By means of a promise Abraham was educated and went forth not knowing whither he went except that God had bidden him. He followed on to know the Lord and so became known as the friend of God. Back of every promise are the resources and the character of God as men learn to "feed upon the faithfulness of God" and so become partakers of the divine nature. "Thou hast magnified thy word above all thy name." So Moses lived as the Lord made known His ways unto Moses, who made God his home, his very abiding place, and declared that a prophet should the Lord make known unto you like unto me.—Bishop Eugene R. Hendrix.

LIFE MADE GREAT BY PURPOSE.

Life can be a very tame, insipid thing, or it may be exhilarating, sparkling like wine; it will depend upon the cause to which life is devoted. Life is made great by the purpose to which life is yoked. You may give a banquet to a thousand, and heaven may not even note it in the log book. You may give a cup of cold water in the name of the King, and all the angels in heaven shall crowd about the gates of the celestial city to witness the deed, and the reward is sure. It is not what you do, nor how long you take in doing it, but rather why you live and strive. Is there a flaming love behind the simple deed? Is there a full consecration that, like a golden thread, runs through the warp and woof of your life? Then whenever you are taken, it shall be said of you: "It is finished." "Well done, good and faithful servant."—Episcopal Recorder.

"THINGS IMPOSSIBLE WITH MEN"

We have not to travel far before we meet the impossible. We soon reach the end of the short road of "the possible," and then the impossible looms before us! It is possible to restrain a man from crime; it is impossible to restrain him from sin. We can compel a man to pay his income tax; it is impossible to compel him to be generous. We can readjust a man's circumsatnces; we cannot renew a man's heart. We can educate; we cannot regenerate. We can refurnish a man's mind; we cannot give him the mind of Christ. We can give him courtesy; we cannot endow him with grace. We may give him good manners; we cannot make him a good man. We may save him from worldly excesses; we cannot make him immune from the contagion of the world. We may "patch up a bad job," but we have no power of new creation.—J. H. Iowett, D. D.

Nothing Lost by a Reverence for Holy Name, as Girl Shows

(Evaline Wright Nelson in Christian Advocate.)

In our home special emphasis was placed on reverence for the Holy Name and the Holy Day.

After father's death an inventory of stock showed good stuff for farm trade: overalls, work suits, heavy shoes, etc. I rented an old schoolhouse at the center of a thrifty agricultural section, transported the goods by wagon and engaged an auctioneer acquainted with the people. It was a unique experience for a town woman unused to trade.

The second day the auctioneer said: "I see old Captain B— coming; he'll make things hum. He lives miles away, goes to all the sales, buys for everybody in his neighborhood and treats the folks well." The Captain certainly boomed the bidding and kept the boys laughing. While success seemed surer every hour, the burden on my heart grew heavier, for as he became better acquainted with the stock and felt more at home he punctuated his humor more and more with the Holy Name.

He came early the next morning and business looked good. My prayer that the Holy Spirit would touch his heart and check his blasphemy had not been answered. Under pretext of having a bill changed, for he had abundance of small change, I took him aside, and said, "Captain, you have been so nice to us I regret to say it, but this is my place of business; you profane the name of my best Friend; I am obliged to ask you not to do so." He went back to his bidding for a few minutes, then withdrew to another part of the room, manifesting no interest.

At noon the auctioneer said, "It's all up; you've spoiled everything; old Cap's mad and won't buy any more." I could only reply that, cost what it might, profanity would not be permitted.

That afternoon, when the greatest crowd of the week was there, the old sailor, who had been bidding hard since dinner time, pointed his finger at me in a way he never dreamed was embarrassing, and called out, "You're a chip of the old block. Your daddy told me many a time to quit swearing or leave his store."

We shook hands and the bidding went on.

Anti-Gossip Crusade Starts After Gossip Had Slain Its Victim

(Home and School.)

A terrible tragedy in an English village lately culminated in the coroner's verdict, "Killed by idle gossip." So great was the stir in the public mind all over the country that an anti-gossip crusade was started, so an English weekly tells.

A society has been formed, to embrace rich and poor alike. The members take a vow to avoid either starting or spreading any unkind remarks about anyone else, or listening to a person who tries to spread gossip. To repeat what has been heard, even if true, is counted as bad as to set the ball rolling.

The organizers of the crusade believe that even the worst gossips talk scandal more as a matter of habit than through any malicious desire to injure others. They are convinced that the majority of talkers can be reformed by keeping the thought before their minds that gossip is evil and dangerous.

The first breach of rules is punished by a fine of one shilling, the next pays a forfeit of two shillings, and so on, up to ten shillings. After that the offender is blackballed as an "incurable." Of course, no one wishes to have the reputation of being an incurable gossip.

"Before making a statement to anyone, do not forget to let it pass the three golden gates—It is true? Is it needful? Is it kind? These form the motto of the anti-gossip crusade."

The third chapter of James, of course, is the proper Scripture reading for the members, being as timely today as it was nineteen hundred years ago, when people gossiped in Greek and Hebrew, instead of the modern languages.

Sin Should Be Seen In Its Worst Aspect Says Doctor Jowett

Anything which makes sin less sinful connives at sin. Anything that glosses sin, that varnishes it, that decorates it, is in reality a minister of sin. And in this way even our very forgiveness can be the enemy of virtue and the barrier to a holy life. In our desire to be "nice" we are often hurtful, and in our wish to be sweet and pleasant we are often morally and spiritually destructive. We may smother the report of an open sewer with a flask of eau de cologne. Our forgiveness may be just sweet-scented sentiment, and the uncleanliness of the sin is only daintily concealed. If the holy Lord is to forgive our sin, it must be in some way that will not make light of it. However he may forgive us, the sin which is forgiven must not appear light and frivolous; it must appear exceedingly sinful, black with the blackness of the blackest night. If the holy Lord made sin less awful by the manner of his forgiveness, what an awful world would this become! It is at the cross of Christ that we see what divine forgiveness has cost. At the cross the guilt of sin is forgiven, while its appalling nature is revealed.

Gardeners who had only evenings in which to care for their vegetable patches, were handicapped by the little daylight allowed them. With this difficulty in view, a New Orleans electrical company has put on the market a light, which readily lights a fair-sized garden. This light is mounted on a pole, and its glow intensified by a reflector. The lower end of the pole is pointed, and set firmly in the soft soil. The plug may be attached to a socket within the house.

YOUR HEALTH AND HOW YOU CAN KEEP IT

This condition may follow their recovery from diphtheria and may persist in exceptional cases a long time, owing very largely to the presence of tiny spots of inflammation often in the tonsils, which do not disturb the person's general health.

It may also follow their recovery from such mild cases of diphtheria that the disease was not recognized.

Persons who have never had diphtheria may, themselves, become "carriers" after exposure to cases of the disease or "carriers" of the germs.

Treatment for carriers should be as follows:

2. Operative treatment on the mucous membrane of the nose and throat is often necessary to remove abnormalties or inflammatory processes such as adenoids or enlarged tonsils.

3. Local treatment is most important. This should include a thorough douching of the nose and throat three or four times daily for several weeks. In the nose bland washes, such as normal salt solution, in the throat bland washes or antiseptics, of which a 30 per cent. solution of alcohol is most efficacious.

Cultures should be taken on two successive days at intervals of one or two weeks to ascertain the effect of treatment.

What Tartar is and How It Slowly Forms on Teeth.

Tartar is a deposit of lime-like material from the saliva mixed with food particles which forms around the neck of the teeth at the edge of the gum.

These deposits are invisible at first, being usually on the inner surfaces of the lower front teeth and on the outer surfaces of the upper teeth.

They cause the gums to become swollen, sore and bleeding. Later the gums recede, exposing delicate portions of the teeth to the possibility of decay.

If this tartar is allowed to continue, pus pockets form and eventually the tooth is lost.

To avoid tartar, the teeth should be cleaned by thoroughly brushing at least twice a day, and a dentist should examine the teeth and remove any tartar deposits regularly twice a year.

Pyorrhea or Riggs disease is a disease of the sockets of the teeth. While it resembles tartar, it is a much more loathsome and persistent disease.

A dirty, vile-smelling mouth is a reproach to anybody, and a partial set of decayed, diseased snags and remnants of teeth are so many monuments to the owner's stupidity, ignorance and indolence.

Bad teeth are an unnecessary evil, a sin of omission.

Things That Should Be Done for the Newly Arrived Baby.

When the baby comes—

There should be a soft, warm blanket to receive it.

The eyes should be carefully cleansed with a saturated solution of boric acid using a separate piece of sterile absorbent cotton for each eye, and into each eye the doctor or nurse should put two or three drops of a 2 per cent. solution of nitrate of silver to prevent sore eyes and, possibly, blindness.

There are thousands of people in this country who had their eyes been treated when they were tiny babies would not now be blind.

After the baby's eyes have been cleansed and treated the body should be oiled with warm sterilized sweet oil or vaseline.

At birth there is on the baby's skin, particularly under the arms, between the fingers and toes, and in the creases of the skin, an accumulation of a white cheese-like substance that can only be removed with oil.

If the baby is robust, after the oil bath a warm water bath may be given. Keep the child warm and covered as much as possible during the bath, which must be gently but quickly given.

The baby should be placed in a quiet, darkened room, properly protected against the cold, but not surrounded with too many hot water bags or bottles.

The baby should have a bed by itself. A large clothes basket makes a satisfactory bed for a little baby. It can be moved easily and kept clean. When the baby sits up, it is a good place in which to play. The basket should be furnished with a hair pillow for a mattress protected by a piece of rubber sheeting or oilcloth and a picee of padding over that.

THE BEAUTY OF GOODNESS.

Did it ever strike you that goodness is not merely a beautiful thing, but the beautiful thing—by far the most beautiful thing in the world—and that badness is not merely an ugly thing, but the ugliest thing in the world? So that nothing is to be compared for value with goodness; that riches, honor, power, pleasure, learning, the whole world and all in it, are not worth having, in comparison with being good; and the utterly best thing for a man is to be good, even though he were never rewarded for it; and the utterly worst thing for a man is to be bad, even though he were never punished for it; and, in a word, goodness is the only thing worth loving, and badness the only thing worth hating.—Charles Kingsley.

Dying as a Dog Dies Was This Man's Idea of the End of Life

BY DR. JAMES I. VANCE.

"I am going nowhere!" It was a workingman who said it. His wage was small. He was a cog in a machine. He was known on the pay roll not by his name, but by a number. His daily battle was for bread. His constant struggle was for time enough to keep a roof over the heads of his wife and children and to frighten the wolf of want from the door.

I was talking to him about the spiritual side of life and urging him to attend church. I was trying to suggest a horizon wider than the smoky shop and grimy tools. I wanted to make him look up from his monotonous task and feel himself a man. In doing so I spoke of immortality and of the fact that man has two worlds, and that this one is preparation for the next—that time is but a school for eternity. He gazed at me with a quizzical sort of expression and said that he believed when he died that was the last of him. He was not going to heaven and he was not going to hell. He was going nowhere. Man died as a dog dies.

I am free to say that I cannot greatly blame a man who is so beaten down by circumstances that he must live a dog's life for not finding room in his soul for an immortal hope. Such a life has no outlook. There is no window of vision in the house where he dwells, no program but the daily grind. The only battle such a man has time to prepare for is the battle for bread. The only hell he fears is right here on earth. The only heaven he seeks is the heaven of a better house to live in, of a table lers bare and a decent chance.

Yet what such a man needs most is an outlook. He is losing the joy and beauty of life because he thinks that a wooden bench is all the world he has. He needs a glimpse of vistas that are endless. He needs to feel the spell of the eternal that he is not a dog but an immortal, not a cog in a machine nor a number on the pay roll of the company, but a child of God whose name is in the Book of Life. He needs to feel in his pulses the beat of an immortal existence, to have his will reinforced with a courage that is divine and the "signet of eternity" pressed down on every transitory task.

The Story of a New Testament and the Good It Performed

(Selected.)

A little girl expressed to her parents one day a wish that they would give her two New Testaments. To the question of her parents why it must be two new testaments, the child replied, that one was for herself and the other to send to the heathen.

She was given the two volumes, and in one of them she wrote: "A little girl who loves the Lord Jesus wishes with all her heart that whoever reads this should also love and believe on Him."

This new testament went to India, and found its way to a station in the interior. A Hindu lady obtained it. She could read, but was unable to write, and as she longed to be able to write, her attention was immediately drawn to the inscription on the flyleaf. The large and distinct characters of the child's handwriting attracted her so much that she tried to imitate them again and again. Gradually the sense of the words made an impression on her, and the question arose: "May not these words have been written for me?" She began then earnestly to read the new testament: her eyes were opened, and she learned to know and love the Saviour.

Years passed on. The little girl had meanwhile grown up and thought no more of the new testament she had sent once upon a time to the heathen, but her love for missions had grown up with her, and it was with joy she went to India. There she entered one day the house of a Hindu Christian lady. In the course of conversation the Hindu lady showed her visitor a book, a new testament, and told her how she, a Hindu heathen, had been by its means brought to Christ.

Imagine the joyful astonishment of the lady missionary when she recognized in the book the same new testament on whose flyleaf she had many years ago, as a little girl written those words which had served to show the poor Hindu lady the way to Jesus. Together they knelt down; praised God's wonderful ways and thanked Him who had drawn them both to Himself.—"Cast thy bread upon the waters: for thou shalt find it after many days."

Harmony in Family Life Possible by Teamwork in Home

Independence, thrift, and domestic harmony on the farm very largely depend upon family co-operation where there is a division of labor and where every member of the family takes an interest in farm work and home making. From the young children to the adult field hands, each should have some responsibility and be anxious to render some assistance to the manager of the farm and the guardian of the home. Such co-operation makes work easy and increases the pleasures of home life.

Just as each member of a large business firm has his respective duties and is required to use his endeavors in such a way as to supplement his associates for the good of the business, so should each member of a farm family labor and plan to advance the interest of the family.

Every schoolboy knows what team work means. It takes united effort, close co-operation, trained muscles, and skilled intellects to win in a football or baseball contest. The team is concerned in winning for the honor of the team more than for any individual, and each individual is honored when the team wins.

In the trials and toils of the farm manager and the keeper of his home, if each member of the family works in harmony for the common interest, farm work is pleasant and is quite likely to be profitable. Such families are able to do their part to the government and to society in most any emergency.

A SERGEANT OF THE "USAACS" TELLS WHY HE VOLUNTEERED HIS SERVICES FOR THE WAR

(Harry M. Chalfant in the Christian Advocate.)

Years ago I saw him. He was then in his hobby-horse age. Astride a broomstick he could charge the enemy with his little tin sword, or he could outdistance any other steed that ventured on the race course. Weary with hours of vigorous play, his eyes began to blink and he trundled off to his little bed, perchance to dream of new adventures when the day should come again.

The last sight I had of him was on a hot July day, near the end of the month, in this momentuous year of 1917. Place, the city of Allentown, Pa., concentration camp of the United States army ambulance corps. The boys were getting their letters addressed in abbreviation—U. S. A. A. C.—and hence the reference to themselves as the "Usaacs."

When I asked for the first sergeant and his name was called, a young man, busy writing at a table, promptly arose and responded to my inquiry: "I am he, sir." I must confess a measure of surprise. I had not been quite able to follow in my imagination the evolution of the little horseman of a few years ago into the stalwart defender of my country who now stood before me.

He was busy, extremely busy, as I discovered. But in a few minutes he would be able to delegate his task to another and be with me for a quiet little visit. And I soon discovered the reason of the unusual activity all about me. The first sergeant of section number — had been ordered to have his men in shape to move to the front at any hour.

By and by we sat alone. We talked of mutual friends and of his mother, widowed from the childhood days of her boy. And in that moment I thought of her proffered contribution to freedom's cause, he being her only child. I asked him, "why are you here?"

A new expression came upon his face and into his eye. The brawny big sophomore was thinking of the game. I fancied I saw him in the football scrimmage, about to smash through the enemy's line. And then he talked more freely than hitherto. The story was coming, the thing I wanted most of all I was about to get—a revelation of the young man's soul, an uncovering of the motive that was driving him swiftly and resistlessly into the vortex of the great world war.

It was May day when the war fever hit him up there in the university town. He could not sleep for thinking about the thing. He lost all interest in his studies and university sports. He read about war, he talked about war. It awakened him in the morning and went to sleep with him at night. He made up his mind to get in somewhere. He journeyed to Philadelphia. He talked with sailors and soldiers, with privates and commanders. He soon reached a decision. He would serve in the ambulance corps. And his enlistment sent nearly half the students of that university scampering away to the training camps or to some civilian field of service.

The sergeant pointed with pride to the high character of the forty men under his command—nearly all university men. Of students for the Christian ministry his section alone had eight or ten and one of his own professors was now subject to his orders.

"This is intensely interesting," I said, "but now tell me, why did you volunteer? What was your motive?" He continued to speak. There was an utter absence of any spirit of boasting, not the slightest taint of revenge and no apparent desire for adventure. Frankly, but with childlike simplicity, the young American soldier bared to me his breast and permitted me to see the very heart throbs that were moving him to action.

Not in exact words, but in substance and in spirit do I report the sayings of my friend, seeking to quote the language of his heart as I read it rather than if his lips as I heard it.

"This war is just. It would be an awful calamity for the world if we should fail. But to win it millions of young men must rally to the flag. Why should not I? I am young and strong and none are dependent on me."

"We recognize," I said, "the extreme danger of the service to which you are going, but, of course, we are all looking at the best side and expecting our friends to come back."

"The danger does not deter me," he said, "although I am fully conscious of it. Possibly I chose this branch of service because I had expected to study medicine if the war had not come on, but when it came I had to go. I could not stay out. You know, after the war, I will have to live with myself and I am not able to see how I could live in peace with myself if I should fail to 'do my bit' to help win it. Guess I had better get over there and stay than to run away from it."

Days and weeks have passed and I have not yet lost from my mind the picture of my young friend's countenance as he talked about having to live with himself after the war is over.

Not all the young men who enter the army do so with the same high purpose that drove the sergeant into the struggle, but I am confident he voiced the motive of myriads of men who have sprung to arms to defend their country against a brutal foe.

I walked through the camp a few moments later with the sergeant by my side. Again he expressed to me his eagerness to get quickly into the service. Again I took his hand and wished him good luck. The cultured, modest, consecrated young man, every inch of him a soldier, was offering his life that I and my family and my country might be safe and that the rights of the race might not be lightly forfeited.

A few days later 600 young men filed in silence up the gang plank of a ship at an American port. My young friend marched at the head of his section and his section led the procession. The cable announces their safe arrival "somewhere in France."

Back to the hotel I hastened at the conclusion of my visit with him, that I might pen a letter to the lad's mother in her distant home, congratulating her on the rare contribution she had been privileged to make to the cause of freedom when she mothered and sent forth this sergeant to the Usaacs.

TIME'S SWIFT PASSAGE.

Not till that last day, that day that closes our mortal existence, shall we fully understand the brevity of time. Yet time is our life; its passage is our death. The moment we begin to live, that moment we begin to die. We forget too often that the departure of time means the departure of our life. When the warm blood flows full and strong through all the swelling veins and full-robed joy animates body and mind; when in the series of our days and years there occur no startling circumstances to arrest our notice or awake our thought, we forget that we are not moored, but are ever gliding, though we notice not our motion, down the stream of time.—Charles R. Stoddard.

Statistics compiled by the Citrus Protective league show shipments of California citrus fruit for the last three years aggregate 140,443 cars, distributed as follows: Oranges from southern California, 104,212 cars; from central and northern California, 15,407 cars, and from the whole state, 20,824 cars of lemons. The report shows that California has approximately 14,000,000 orange and lemon trees.

THE SACRIFICE

(By GLADSTONE HOLM.)

"Bring forth the best ye breed!"
So spake Jehovah to the people that were His.
"Ye shall not offer me of beasts that are impaired,
Nor blind nor broken, maimed nor scabbed, nor having wen
Nor scurvy, shall ye bring to me when ye appear
Before my courts to sacrifice to me."

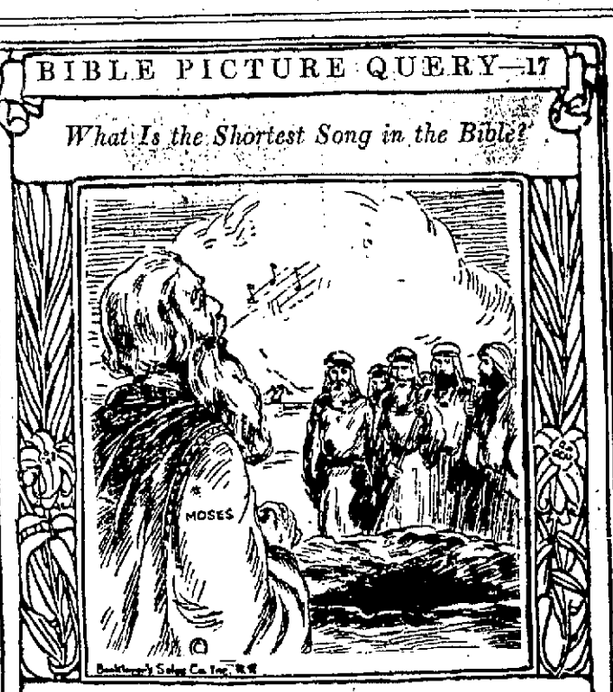

"Bring forth the best ye breed!"
Thus speaks Jehovah in these days of direst need.
"My kingdom that is built foursquare upon the props
Of justice, honor, truth and mercy, fair to see,
Is being invaded by a horde that know me not,
And Freedom struggles bravely for her throne."

"Bring forth the best ye breed!"
So calls fair Freedom from her home on mountain heights.
"Nor lame nor halt nor blind, nor weak nor craven-heart,
But only those endowed with symmetry and grace—
With matchless strength and courage high and glorious faith
To battle for the safety of my realm."

The best we breed are thine!
Our valiant sons who have been sired by those who fought
In freedom's wars; who never have been serfs nor bent
The knee to foreign sway, nor worn the chafing yoke
Imposed by tyrant hand—we give, O God, to Thee,
That freedom shall not perish from the earth.

Last Week's Question and the Answer

Last week's query: "What women ate their own children?" These were the women of Israel, at the siege of Aamaria. The occasion is described in the Second Book of Kings, Chapter 6, Verses 28-29:

"And the King said unto her, What aileth thee? And she answered, This women said unto me, Give thy son, that we may eat him today, and we will eat my son tomorrow."

"So we boiled my son, and did eat him: and I said unto her on the next day, Give thy son, that we may eat him: and she hath hid her son."

Famous Battle Creek Doctor Handles Subject in an Impressive Manner

A large attendance greeted Dr. W. F. Martin on his appearance at the Majestic theatre Friday evening. Members of the Quest club had a small section of the theatre reserved for their organization, but the rest of the seats were free. Dr. Martin dwelt extensively on the great part that the venerial diseases wil play in the outcome of the war, and his slides portrayed graphically his speech.

A marvelous motion picture of the devastation of one of the smallest germs in existence proved to be a feature of the evening. Dr. Martin has probably come in contact with this specific kind of affliction more frequently than any other one man, having been at the Battle Creek sanatarium for more than twelve years. At the close of his lecture he appealed to all of his listeners and to the members of the Quest club particularly to do all in their power to stamp out the rapid growth of one of the worst menaces to mankind.

The cultivation of tepary beans is something new in the state of California. This legume came up from old Mexico and has been popular in New Mexico and Arizona for years. Because of its hardy habit, it is capable not only of standing extremes of temperature, but doing welle under exceptionally arid conditions. It is hardy bush bean with a high nutritive value.

HOW THE U. S. IS GETTING INTO THE AIR TO WIN WAR

The king of birds! Not the enormous wings of this giant Curtiss flying boat. They have a total span of 92 feet. The photograph shows the great man-made bird ready to leave the factory for British war service.

By BURTON KNISELY.

Carrying out America's win-the-war-in-the-air program—the expenditure of $720,000,000 for 23,000 airplanes and 40,000 engines—means:

The country must spend wisely within a year, in a new industry still in the formative stages and for which there was little organization, a sum twice the total cost of the Panama canal. To do this more steel, more wood, more linen and more men are needed, and, after that—more money.

An airplane is composed of six main parts:

1. The wings.
2. The fuselage, or body.
3. The control surfaces, including rudders, elevators and the ailerons, or jointed and moveable wing tips.
4. The landing chassis—wheels or pontoons enabling the machine to leave land or water and return safely.
5. The propeller.
6. Finally, first in importance, the engine.

In the average biplane there are 2,000 to 2,400 separate pieces. In building our air fleet of 23,000 planes over 46,000,000 seperate pieces, the weakest of any one of which might cost a pilot's life, must be perfectly made and fitted together with absolute precision.

These 46,000,000 pieces—bits of wood and cloth, nuts, bolts and screws—do not include the scores of parts making up each motor.

For the wings of the American air fleet alone the builders require 23,000,000 feet of the finest spruce or ash wood—1,000 feet fo reach machine, of which 200 feet is actually used and 800 feet is discarded by a selective process which throws out the smallest knot or flaw in the wood.

Our allies need more than twice as much; and most of this 75,000,000 feet of choice wood which should now be seasoning is still in the trees.

For just the wings of this airplane fleet we need, besides the wood, nearly 4,000,000 yards of the finest linen. Ireland, where the best linen is produced, has an output so small that English airplane makers must distribute flaxseed to Irish flax growers to be sure of the linen needed for British machines. America must go into flax-farming on a large scale to find a substitute for this linen. What shall it be?

Now, after the wings, the fuselage, or body. There again strength and lightness must be twins, both developed to the supreme degree. There again fine spruce, ash or basswood, fitted with the skill of the maker of a piano body, are required, with the finest of steel tubing and wires.

Like the wings, the control surfaces—rudders, elevators and allerons—are of choice wood covered with fine Irish linen, so accurate in construction that the linen must be shrunk after being fastened to the frame.

The landing chassis must stand the heaviest bumps, and still be almost light as air. Most of the steel for tubings and light special parts is manufactured in select plants in the Pittsburg district, and still U. S. airplane makers are forced constantly to deny that this choicest American steel is inferior to the grade of steel our allies find necessary.

The propellers must not only be of the finest wood—usually spruce—but they must be fashioned individually by master craftsmen, in a trade as highly skilled as any in modern industry.

And when this bird of beautiful body and strong wings is complete, when all these 2,000 and more separate perfect pieces have been perfectly joined, there remains to be put into its frame its heart—the engine which would shake a much stronger body to piece, an engine so light that it will weight not over three to five pounds for each horsepower developed, and so sure that it will run hours without a hitch.

That's the story of one airplane. But the nation is figuring airplanes in the tens of thousands.

Allied experts think the United States must build 10,000 airplane engines before April 1, 1918, and 46,000 by December, 1918, to win air mastery. With the best European experts, one American airplane company has spent one year and three million dollars in producing the first duplicate of the best European engine. One single American automobile company spent $500,000 in one year's experiments on air engines.

Today the nation's aviation industry has $40,000,000 invested, employs 15,000 men, occupies 4,000,000 feet of floor space—and turns out 200 planes a week. Even this is a monumental growth—from a few shacks in a few years—but not from such a productive capacity as this will the United States turn out 46,000 airplanes in little over 12 months.

Making one machine has been the work of months. One United States plant producing 20 to 30 finished planes a week employs 3,000 men, and each machine is the hand-to-hand product of 150 men, representing a score of different trades.

How, with such a start, are we to build 20,000, perhaps 50,000 airplanes to win the war?

The biggest answer to this question—almost the vital question of the war—is the Liberty motor, the standardized combination of the best features of European motors, so that air engines and their parts can be manufactured in every American automobile factory, and in hundreds and thousands of other machine plants, and so that nut turned out in Detroit will fit a bolt made in Birmingham.

Upon such organization as this, improvised by American genius, depends the fight to boost our airplane output from 200 planes a week to 3,500 planes a month—and more as the war shall require.

Standardization, standardization, standardization! System, system, sytem!

Making airplanes, or airplane parts, in auto factories, in cash register factories, in typewriter factories, in piano factories, in furniture factories, in carriage factories, and spending money at a rate that will exhaust that first $720,000,000 by the middle of next year—that is the only path that leads to United States victory in the air.

England is spending almost this much—$600,00,000—in raiplane manufacturing alone, this year. And with the planes we must have the men—say 30,000 pilots, with an army of 100,000 men, helpers, etc., for every 10,000 pilots.

And it has been figured that the training of each pilot costs more than $5,000, as much as his machine.

BAKERIES WILL RUN UNDER REGULATIONS

J. B. Franke Announces Compliance of Baking Industries to New License.

J. B. Franks, appointed leader of section 37, of the war emergency organization of the baking industry, made the following statement in regards to the new regulations for all baking industries announced by Food Administrator Hoover: "The bakers of this district will comply readily with the new regulations under government licenses. The new regulations announced by Mr. Hoover will entail many readjustments in the baker's business, and I am particularly desirous that the public shall understand this fact and appreciate the difficulties and sacrifices involved.

"I am glad to hear that the bread program has been announced by all bakers and that they will operate under a government license during the period of the war. The standardization of loaf weights will set the public mind at rest on one important phase of the bread market and the limitation of the ingredients will simplify competition.

All reputable bakers will be glad to assist the administration in carrying out its policies. The situation at present is such that a first-class loaf of bread of standard weight cannot be sold for less than 8c wholesale, but if conditions can be brought about which will make a reduction possible, no one will be better satisfied than the baker."

"THANKSGIVINK" EDDYTORIUL

As erly as last Monday we begin to put our eddytoriul head to work on thinkin up a subjeck to dash off a eddytoriul about for this ishue of the Bugle & day after day we thort & thort in vain.

It peard to us that the more we thort the more we couldnt seem to scrape up a subjeck for a suitable eddytoriul being as in the past we calkilate we have wrote deep & lernd eddytoriuls about all the subjecks there is and we was most ready to give up in deespare as we mite say when all to onct as we set at our offis desk with our tired head in our hands lookin absently at the callender on the wall in front of us rite under our eddytoriul nose, so to speak, it ockurd to us like a blow that, snow or blow, rain or shine next Thursday will be THANKSGIVINK!

Well, whot we was about to state is that it has allus been our polisy as edditor & prop of the Boogle to dash off a eddytoriul on Thanksgivink every yr and we dont perpose to make enny excepshion of this yr let the chips fall where they will. The ridicklus part of it is that Thanksgivink like to of came and went afore we woked up to the fackt that we was standin rite on the threshole of it!

It is fitting on this ospishus occashion whitch we are rite on the brink of that evrybuddy in Bingville ort to think up somethink or other to be thankful for and on next Thursday to be thankful for it as hard as they can. Whot we ask have you got to be thankful for?

As for us personally we could be a good eal more thankfuller as Thanksgivink approaches if we had a few more financhial assets to jingle aginst one another in our wallet whitch we aint. We have jest completed a counting of our financhial standing and find that we possess 75 cts in currency and a lead quarter whitch some fiend in huming form worked off on us tother day without our nolledge & consent and if the pusilanimus ciss will call for said quarter and give us a silver one in its place no questshions will be askd.

In other words its diffycult for us to be very thankful when we aint got only 75 cts to rub aginst eatch other, but well be thankful as possibil or at least 75 cts worth hoping in the meanwhile that some of our dead beet subscribers will come to our rescue by paying us somethink on their back subscripshions so that when next Thursday comes we can return several dollers worth of thanks instid of 75 cts worth.

We dont persoom that owink to the depleated state of our finances that we will be able to indulge ourself and eddytoriul wife in a turkey next Thursday. Whot we persoom is that we will be lucky if we are able to indulge ourself and wife in a mess of corned beef and cabbage or salt pork and potaters—unless, of course some of our subscribers or friends who has been more blest with this worlds goods than we be should be mooved outen the goodness of their hearts to invite us to their partake of their turkey dinner whitch we would do with great cheer and gusto if invited. PLEASE THINK OVER THIS SUJJESTSHION ALL YOU FOKES WHO CAN AFFORD TO HAVE TURKEY ON THANKSGIVINK!

Be that as it may however we all ort to be as thankful as we can even if we aint got nothink to be thankful for, let us be thankful that it aint no worse whitch it mite be. Let us be thankful were livin and have our helth and are abel to ete three meels per day even tho we dont know whare the three meels is comink from!

In conclooshion we desire to say that there is allus somethink to be thankful for in this world and we mite as well look on the brite side of life as to set down and repine. As a repiner we wassent never mutch of a sucksess and were glad of it.

Hod a Prisner

Hod Slocomb had a ridicklus axident to happen to hisself whilst he was a choppin wood last wk away up on the side of Sawridge Mountaing whitch Hod will probly recall with horrer & loathing the longest day he lives.

Hod was all soul alone and jest afore he stopd to ete his luntch he had drove a iron wedge into a big mapel log, then Hod set down on the same log and begin to partake of a half doz hard biled eggs whitch his wife had biled for him with great gusto.

Jest as Hod had begin on the sixth egg the iron wedge somehow or other flew outen the log and the split in it snapd shet in sitch a manner that it ketched Hod by the seat of the pants as you mite say and to his amazement and surprise and disgust he found hisself a prisner.

Hod struggled to git loose but without avail and the more he struggeld the weaker he got and when nite arrove the very thort of settin on that log all nite long neerly driv him frantick but that diddent do no good beenz set there he did and like to of froze to deth afore mornink came.

Then all of a suddint with great presents of mind Hod had a brillyunt thort so he jerked offen his coat and vest and managed to squirm outen his pants leavin them a prisner in the log instid of hisself and broke for Bingville attired only in his shirt, coat and vest, underwear, shoes et cettery. Hod snuk home the back way unobserved and after a hearty brekfest he returned to his work, removed his pants from the log, put em on and went to work agin happy as a lark. Hod says it will be a cold day afore he gits ketched like that agin and if he does he'll have sents enuff to remoeve his pants at onct instid of settin there all nite like he done in this instants.

Sossiety Mentchion

Miss Sophy Hoskins one of Bingvilles most estymable yung ladies (altho Sophy aint as yung as she onct was and has begin to show it too) give a popcorn party at her home last Thursday evg whitch was a very enjoyable affair altho it was informal and got up on the spur of the minnit as you mite say nevertheless all present enjoyd the occashion turrible and et popcorn until they like to of bust after whitch they departed for their various homes conchious of a evg very enjoyable spent and the gests who was present hopes that Sophy will repeet the operashion in the near fuchure.

Miss Amelia Tucker Bingvilles raining sossiety queen and leader of the soshial whirl skored another triumfant soshial sucksess last wk by giving at her residence on Main st whot she cald a gesing party to whitch aleet of Bingville sossiety was present and participated with great eclaw. After the gests had assembeld Miss Amelia brung in a glass jar full of beans and the gests present gessed the number of beans in the jar whitch was counted later. Rufe Green gesd the closest and got the prize whitch consisted of a camisole (whotever that is). No wonder Rufe got the prize—Rufe allus raised more beans on his land than ennythink else and whot he dont know about beans aint worth knowink.

Miss Milly Andrews has sent out invites to a seleckt musicale whitch will ockur in her home on Wensday evg of next wk. Miss Milly for the past several wks has been taking lessons on the melodeum from a teacher over to the co seat and we persoom she wishes to show off how mutch she has lernt to her assembeld gests. We trust that Miss Milly will confine herself excloosive to the melodeum instid of trying to sing. We have heerd Miss Milly try to sing when we was passin by and it allus sounds to us like as if she was suffern from turrible pain.

These is all the sossiety items whitch we can think up at the present writing but no doubt by next wk there will have tuk place in our midst various other soshial events among our soshial whirl and lokal 400 whitch will be entitled to a place in these collums. Read the Bugle if you want to kep posted up on sossiety news.

No More Wood if You Please

Notise is hereby give that no more stove or firewood is desired by us in exchange for subscriptions until further notis.

When we put a ad in the Bugle a wk or so ago to the effeck that we would exsept a reasonable amt of stove and firewood in exchange for subscriptions we diddent think that our subscribers would respond quite so noble and sooperfloos. The amt of wood we have received as we go to press surpases our fondest expecktashions and as a result we cant skeercely git into our house for wood of all descripshions and we calkilate that weve got enuff wood on hand to last us all this winter and most of next so kindly dont bring no more wood. If you desire to bring ennythink in exchange for back subscripshions please bring cash whitch will be a good eal more acceptabler than wood we do ashure you.

Inspector Who Put Twelve More Pounds in a Bushel

THIS is the story of how a great city was for years at the mercy of short-weight hucksters and merchants, and how "Hank" Weeke, a practical politician with twenty-five years' experience as a grocer and meat market proprietor took the oath of office as Inspector of Weights and Measures, and in six months completely reformed the food-cheats who had flourished for twenty years.

Inspector Weeke was out scouting a few days ago, observing the actions of a certain vegetable shopkeeper about whom he had received complaints.

An old woman entered the shop with a basket and made a few purchases, among them a peck of potatoes. Weeke watched the shopkeeper as he filled a "level measure" and dumped the vegetables into the market basket for a peck. As the old woman stepped from the shop, Inspector Keeke stopped her and said: "Madam, you just paid for a peck of potatoes and the dealer did not give you a full peck. Do you want me to make him give you a peck?"

The old woman hesitated and said she had seen the dealer fill the peck measure and believed she had a peck in her basket. Inspector Weeke introduced himself and explained to her that the law required a heaping measure for a peck. They entered the shop together and Weeke called the dealer. He ordered the merchant to replace the potatoes in a peck measure to see if he had delivered the right weight. The dealer at first demurred, but when Weeke identified himself he consented reluctantly. The measure was filled only to the level, and Weeke had the potatoes weighed. They tipped the scale at a fraction more than 12 pounds.

"Now heap that measure up until you can't add another potato," commanded Weeke. The dealer complied, and when the heaping measure was weighed it registered 15 pounds.

"Now, madam," said Weeke as he scraped off the surplus potatoes, "that is the amount that you are entitled to which you did not get at first. Do you think it is worth asking for?"

The old woman was amazed, and replied: "Yes, sir—that is enough to feed six or eight mouths at my home, and with potatoes so high it means a whole lot to me, I can tell you."

Gives Only One Warning.

"Well, the law in St. Louis now specifies that dealers must give 60 pounds of potatoes to the bushel, which means 15 pounds to the peck," said Weeke, "and when you buy by dry measure instead of by weight, you are entitled to a heaping measure as I showed you, in order that you may get 15 pounds."

The dealer was chagrined and made a bluff at protesting, but before Inspector Weeke left he promised to avoid arrest by voluntarily giving all his customers a heaping measure of potatoes in the future. If he fails to keep his promise, Inspector Weeke is likely to hear of it and prosecution will follow swiftly, because "Hank" does not give a dealer more than one warning.

Inspector Weeke's middle name is Practical, and he realizes that with all the reform he has brought about, and despite the air-tight law that strangles shortweight artists, the public will not be safe from fraud unless each purchaser understands that upon him rests the responsibility for reporting short weights.

Laws do not stop fraud and crime—they merely empower individuals to inflict certain penalties upon offenders. It is the duty of every housewife to inform herself as to what the law requires and then she must see to it that her huckster and her grocer and her butcher live up to the law.

The proper first step to enforce the law, according to Weeke, is for each housewife to provide herself with accurate scales, which can be purchased for about 75 cents.

Wrong Sometimes Unintentional.

Every article of food that is purchased should be weighed by a sensible housewife, Weeke says. Not on the theory that her grocer or butcher will deliberately cheat her in the weight—although this happens only too often—but because even the most scrupulous merchant will at times make mistakes and furnish the wrong weight when he will make his charge in accordance with the written memorandum he has.

If a housewife has a good set of scales she is thoroughly prepared to obtain her rights in St. Louis. If her merchants short-weight her, she can determine it after the goods are delivered, and by reporting the facts to Weeke she can have the merchant checked up or prosecuted, as the circumstances warrant.

Weeke has eight deputies and the entire police department at his call to enforce the laws or investigate complaints. The city courts have convicted in every case presented to them so far by Weeke.

Weeke agrees with those who advocate the sale of all foodstuffs by weight, but being a practical man, he realizes that ancient custom has familiarized the public with pecks and quarts and bushels, and it would be too radical a change to switch at once to pounds and ounces.

The United States Bureau of Standards has fixed the weight of every food commodity in a bushel, and when a housewife purchases a peck of Irish potatoes she should know that she is entitled to 15 pounds. If she purchases a peck of sweet potatoes she is entitled to only 14 pounds, because the specific gravity of sweet potatoes is not so great as that of Irish potatoes. Apples, according to the official standard, should run 48 pounds to the bushel or 12 pounds to the peck.

No doubt a great many people who have read political criticisms of Inspector Weeke in campaign times, will have a lingering suspicion that political influence might creep into his office and interrupt the smooth course of justice that he has promised to provide.

It would not be strange if such a suspicion entered the minds of people who know of politics and the ways of politicians only by reading more or less accurate stories about them in the daily press or magazines. Even a smart politician may entertain such a fancy in the case of Weeke, and the writer has personal knowledge that one politician who was "close to" Hank, as the saying is, did think he might influence Hank to protect a huckster who ran afoul of the new law.

This politician-friend came to Hank after the huckster had been arrested for having in his possession a short quart measure.

"Hank I have known this man since he was a little boy, and there ain't a crooked bone in his body," said the friend. "Your men have made a mistake in arresting him, and you ought to dismiss the charges as a matter of fairness. He is a good man, and worked for me in several campaigns. I'll vouch for him."

"He may be an honest man," replied Weeke, "but he's been keeping company with an awful crooked measure. Come here and look at it."

Weeke led the politician who had come to "front" for the huckster into the testing room and produced the alleged quart measure which his deputies had confiscated the day before.

"Do you call that a quart measure?" he asked the politician as he handed over the measure.

"Why, certainly," said the politician, putting on a bold front. "It might be a trifle short, but how can a man tell that? He is no expert."

Weeke did not argue further. He placed the short measure under a large funnel containing exactly one quart of flaxseed and opened the spigot at the bottom to let it drain into the confiscated measure.

"Just watch now," said Weeke, "and we will see exactly how close to a quart this measure is." The measure rapidly filled and then began to overflow. The overflow continued for quite a while, and the politician who came to "front" began to color up when he saw the size of the "spill."

What "Overflow" Showed.

Weeke measured the overflow and found it was one pint. "Now, a man don't have to be an expert to know that he is short a pint in a quart, does he?" asked Weeke. "That man is going to be convicted if the court pays any attention to me." And he was.

The law requires that hucksters and dealers shall use only measures and scales that are stamped by Weeke's department, to indicate their accuracy. The measure must be stamped every six months, and unless it bears the latest official stamp it should be looked upon by a consumer with suspicion.

Stamping a measure is a good precaution against false measures, but it is not perfect, by any means. There are many tricks of the trade that unscrupulous dealers resort to by which they can turn a stamped measure into a false measure.

One favorite device is the false bottom. A metal measure of regulation size is produced at Weeke's office, tested and stamped O. K. The dealer takes it away and puts a wooden disc in the bottom that shortens the measure to the extent of the cubic contents of the disc. Sometimes a metal false base is soldered into the measure, and this is harder to detect. An honest measure, with a false bottom can be heaped up high with potatoes, to make the purchaser think it is full weight, and in reality it will be only three-quarters of a peck or bushel.

Another simple device that many housewives fail to guard against is to put dents in a measure that was regulation size when it was stamped. The dents occupy space inside the measure and reduce its capacity to that extent.

Never let a huckster measure your vegetables in a dented measure; it is sure to be short.

Sometimes a huckster will get his perfect measures stamped and then take them apart and remodel them into smaller measures without destroying the official stamp that has been driven into the metal. For that reason it is the custom to place the official stamp as nearly on the seam of a measure as possible, so that in taking it apart the stamp will be partly obliterated.

There are so many tricks of the trade that Weeke says it is absolutely necessary that a housewife have her own scales and weigh her purchases in order to be sure that she is not being cheated out of what she pays for. A good scale in the house is a perfect protection against any device that may be employed by unscrupulous dealers.

Scale Check the Best.

Weeke says the meanest man in the world today, in his opinion, is a dealer who will cheat poor people out of the food for which they are now compelled to pay such high prices.

"A highwayman or an embezzler is entitled to the respect of the community alongside a false-weight dealer," said Weeke. "The false-weight man is preying mainly upon the poorest people in the city. He is taking the food out of the mouths of women and little children in order to make a few extra dollars. There are some merchants who do not regard this practice as a crime at all. They think that it is smart work, and pat themselves on the back for being shrewd enough to put it over on the poor women who buy from them. Such dealers should be put clear out of business by law when it is proved that they deliberately plan to steal."

Another field covered for the first time through the operation of Weeke's new law is the ice business. Until now it has not been unlawful for an iceman to cut a square of ice guessing at its weight, and deliver it at a home in the window of which is displayed a sign calling for a certain amount of ice.

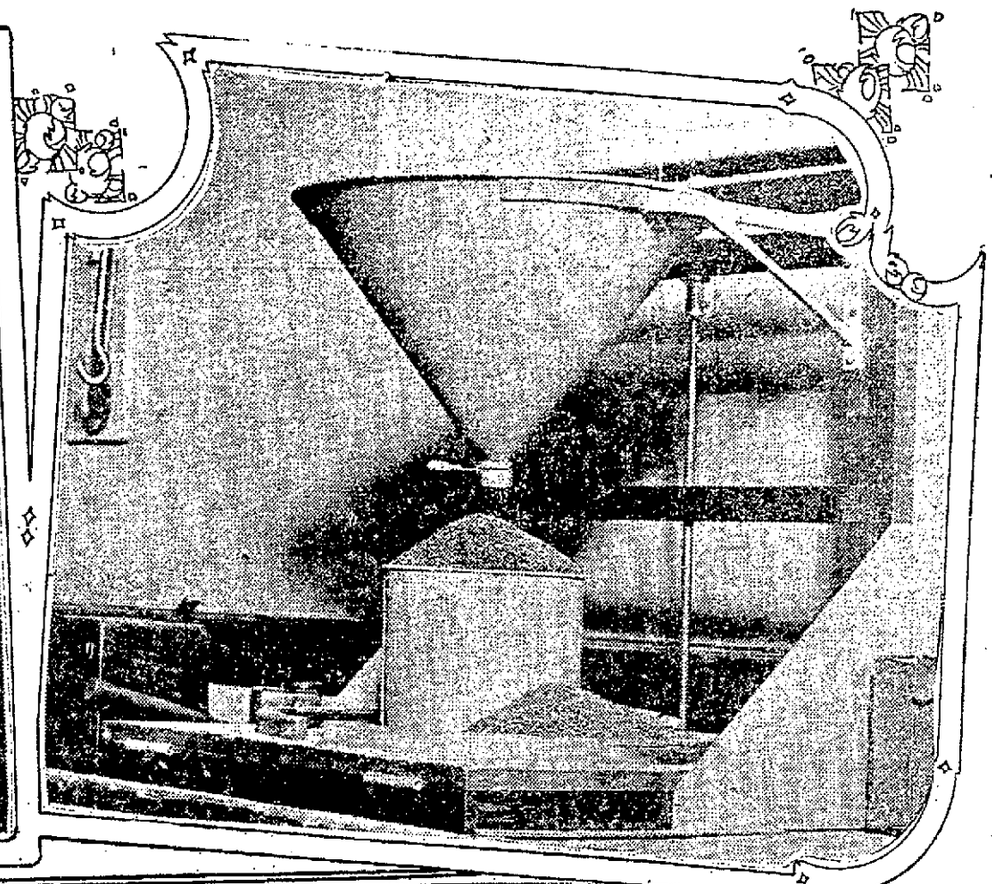

Frequently the pieces are cut in irregular shapes in this guessing contest. One piece may weigh a little more than 50 pounds and another must therefore weigh a little less.

A woman puts a sign in her window calling for 50 pounds of ice. The iceman reads it from the street and delivers a block that may weigh only 40 or 45 pounds. He carries no scales, as a rule, and had no means of knowing exactly how much the piece weighs. If this happens every day throughout the summer, the customer will lose several hundred pounds of ice in the season.

Weeke's law provides that every ice wagon must be equipped with a stamped scale, and every piece of ice that is delivered must be weighed and the customer notified of the weight delivered. Since the law became effective in September eighty-five concerns have purchased ice scales and paid the fee to Weeke for stamping them.

AN ELECTRICAL EXPERIMENT.

ELECTRICAL experiments are always of interest, not only to the learned who work in laboratories, but also to the average person. By means of the apparatus described below an electric spark can be obtained in the simplest way imaginable, by any one, with very little expense of time or trouble.

A strip of tinfoil is fastened around the center of a common lamp chimney, and then a straight strip of the same material is pasted on the chimney from one end of the same to within one-third of an inch of the ring.

Then a piece of silk is wrapped around a brush, to clean the chimney and the interior of the chimney is rubbed briskly; but the fingers must not touch the tinfoil. If this is done in the dark, each time that the brush is withdrawn from the chimney a bright electric spark will be seen to spring from one piece of the tinfoil to the other.

Many other experiments of this kind can be tried with this simple apparatus. For example, it may be shown that poor conductors can be electrified by rubbing; further, that good conductors can carry the electricity from an electrified body to one which has not been charged with electricity, and finally the power of bodies charged with the same kind of electricity to repel each other can be illustrated in the following manner:

Bind a woolen thread (or better still an iron or brass wire) over the tinfoil ring, and on the end of this hang little strips of thin paper.

If the interior of the chimney is now rubbed, the silk-covered brush being introduced at the opposite side to that into which it was formerly placed, the ring of tinfoil is charged with electricity, which is conducted by the thread or wire to the strips of paper, which fly apart.

As in all such experiments, the loss of electricity through dampness must be avoided. This can be done by thoroughly drying the brush, the silk and the chimney at the fire before trying the experiment.

CORK AFTER-DINNER DANCER.

The base for them is a small hemisphere that can be made in a few moments by pinching and rolling a piece of tinfoil into the required shape. All that is necessary is to see that it is perfectly smooth and perfectly true in shape.

Then crumble pits of cork roughly into the shape of men or women or animals, pinning the parts thoroughly with slivers from toothpicks. With a little ingenuity exceedingly ludicrous figures can be made. They may be colored with a black end of a burned match.

Pin them on the flat side of the tinfoil hemisphere and set it on the table. The little figures are so light that the tinfoil will keep them upright all the time. They may be laid flat or may be shaken in all directions; yet they will always bob right up again and the resulting motions often are very funny.

NEWS BY TELEPHONE.

The rural telephone in Canada has until recently largely served as a medium of exchange between farmers and for ordering supplies from dealers in town. But it has been demonstrated that the rural telephone can easily perform other services of equal importance.

There are now country districts in Canada where the telephone company has undertaken to supply a daily news service. At a certain hour the telephone bell rings five times. That is the news signal and every interested subscriber along the line takes down his receiver. Then the central operator gives the weather report, a condensed market summary and important news. It takes only a short time to give this information to every subscriber, and the line is engaged for only a few minutes.

As a man can't spend his money and have it, too, there are some who have adopted the expedient of spending somebody else's.

FIGHTING A HABIT WITH THE ROEBUCKS

The fighting Roebucks faced police court on the usual assault and battery charges Saturday morning. Both Charlie and Tony have been arrested four or five times on this same charge. The trouble arose Thursday when Charlie Roebuck walked into a saloon at the corner of Gay and Eliza streets and hit Albert Jansen over the head with a beer glass. Five witnesses were called and all testified Roebuck struck Jansen without provocation or cause. Jansen was so badly cut that it necessitated his being taken to the hospital for treatment. Roebuck had been out of jail but a few hours on another assault and battery charge before he struck Jansen. Judge Kerr assessed a fine of $10 and costs.

Toledo's Turn Next.

Charles McDonald, the young man arrested by Sergeant Immel at South Bend for beating his board bill at the Rich hotel, was assessed a fine of $25 and costs. As soon as the man serves his sentence here, he will be sent to Toledo to answer a charge of defaulting a board bill and passing a bad check.

Other Police Court Cases.

Burt Warden and Frank Thornton, drunks, were ordered to get out and get to work. John Connor failed to appear, but his bond of $15 sufficed to pay a fine of $5 and costs. Claud McCoolicher, arrested on a loitering charge and found carrying a number of razors, was discharged for lack of evidence. Clay Patterson, the negro suspected of stealing articles of merchandise from a men's furnishing store, was ordered released for lack of evidence.

Gary Kimmel, the General Electric elevator operator, arrested for carrying lewd pictures, was ordered out of town.

B. Brubaker Missing.

Mrs. B. Brubaker, 1201 St. Mary's avenue, has reported to the police that her husband has been missing from home since last Wednesday. She states that he started for the business district Wednesday and that she has not seen him since. He carried close to $200 at the time of his disappearance.

THOUSANDS OF MEN GOVERNMENT NEEDS

ended June 30, 1917, and since that date appointments have been made in increased proportion.

An appropriation of $7,500,000 is now being expended in the enlargement of the great naval gun factory at Washington, which, when completed, will furnish employment for 4,000 or more skilled mechanics, in addition to the 3,000 already at work in the plant. In this mammoth factory, one of the best equipped and most interesting in the world, are built the great guns for our war vessels, which carry to every country the message of America's ability to protect herself and to safeguard the rights of her citizens wherever they may be.

The new naval aircraft factory at Philadelphia, which will be completed this month, will also employ about 3,000 men.

The workers who man such plants are of a superior class, and they feel a personal pride in turning out products that will stand the test of conflict with the arms of other nations. A considerable part of the building of war vessels is also done in government yards.

The United States civil service commission which is charged with the task of recruiting the ranks of this great civilian army, through its widespread organization is furnishing the men as they are needed. In certain trades, particularly those connected with shipbuilding, there is usually a shortage. Sailmakers, coppersmiths, shipfitters, anglesmitchs, blacksmiths and machinists are especially needed. Women to operate power sewing machines are also in great demand. The representatives of the civil service commission at the postoffices in all cities are the official recruiting agents for this as well as other branches of the civil service. The commission urges competent mechanics to offer their services to the government at this time of great need.

to care for drafts from the district.

Will Then Wipe Out Appeals.

All pending appeals will then be wiped off the slate and the new system will apply in full.

Another change permits enlistment of registered men in the navy or marine corps where they are so far down on the call list as to make certain that their action will not delay the task for army building. Credit is given for such enlistment on army quotas however, and local boards are judges of each case.

Provision for voluntary enlistment in the army is made by means of a voluntary waiver classification and the automatic advancement of the registrant to class 1 and his induction at once into the military service; where the registrant has dependents his waivor must be accompanied, however, by waivors from those depent if not minors or by affidavits showing that minor dependents will be adequately provided for if there are minor dependents.

Louis Millar, a draftsman, who is now connected with the radio department of the government military service, is here on a visit and called at the General Electric works yesterday to see his former associates in office work. Last spring Mr. Millar resigned a position at the General Electric drafting room to take employment with the Wildwood Builders, resigning that position soon afterward to enter the government service. Yesterday he received a first lieutenant's commission.

SAMMY LEARNS HOW TO LET LOOSE HELL'S FIRE AGAINST THE HUN

Here are American troops in France practicing the use of liquid fire with new and improved apparatus that goes the Teutons one better. What chance would the Boches have if they were behind these flaming trees and bushes, where in this maneuver they are supposed to be?

PRESIDENT WILSON GREETS NORTHWEST

Washington, D. C., Nov. 17.—President Wilson sent this message last night to a loyalty gathering of citizens of six of the northwestern states at St. Paul, Minn.:

"Nothing could be more significant than your gathering to express the loyalty of the great northwest. If it were possible I should gladly be with you. You have come together as representatives of that western empire in which the sons of all sections of America and of the stocks of all the nations of Europe have made the prairie and the forest the home of a new race and the temple of a new faith.

"The time has come when that home must be protected and that faith affirmed in deeds. Sacrifice and service must come from every class, every profession, every party, every race, every creed, every section. This is not a bankers' war, or a farmers' war, or a manufacturers' war, or a laboring man's war—it is a war for every straightout American, whether our flag be his by birth or by adoption. We are today a nation in arms, and we must fight, farm, mine and manufacture, conserve food and fuel, save and spend to the one common purpose.

"It is to the great northwest that the nation looks as once before in critical days for that steadiness of purpose and firmness of determination which shall see this struggle through to a decision that shall make the masters of Germany rue the day they unmasked their purpose and challenged our republic."

authority and order. Railway men, the correspondent adds, said that Kerensky and Lenine and Trotzky, the Bolsheviki leaders, all ought to be thrown into the Neva.

People Long for Real Leader.

For the provisional government nowhere was there a spark of enthusiasm, he adds, as it was felt to have deserved its fate. Everywhere, however, the correspondent found a longing for real order and real authority and for somebody who would save Russia from trouble.

Throughout the ten Kuban territories order was undisturbed and on arriving at Rostove-on-the-Don on Nov. 9 the correspondent found the garrison and workers in a ferment. They had passed a resolution in favor of the Bolsheviki but in the neighboring town of Novo Tcherkask, the capital of the Don territory, the Cossack government under Gen. Kaledines had declared for the provisional government, assumed full power in its own territories and had established contact with Cossack governments in the neighboring territories.

Cossacks Form a League.

A few days before the Don Cossacks rose, backed by the Cossacks in the provinces of Kuban and Astrakhan, the Kalmuks of the Steppes and the mountain tribes of Daghestan and the Black sea coast had formed a league of autonomous uits with a common federal government over the whole territory north of the Caucasus between the Caspian and Black seas. The existence of this leag... the correspondent says, guarantees complete order in that territory which includes the richest granary in Russia.

Gen. Kaledines' government on Nov. 8 declared martial law in the disturbed mining area in the Donets basin and it was declared that the miners had resumed work.

The Cossack congress which happened to be sitting at Kiev, took command of the situation there and immediately arrested the Ukranian council and suppressed the Bolsheviki.

Finds Order the Rule.

From Rostov onward, the correspondent continues, there was a complete absence of definite news. Order prevailed at all stations and fewer soldiers than usual besieged the train. The more intelligent soldiers with whom the correspondent talked were indignant with the Bolsheviki while the socialists declared they were for General Korniloff. Others seemed to know little of politics and to care less. There was complete order when the train passed through Khrakova, Kurkosk and Orel.

Many contradictory reports were current as the train approached Moscow. The train was stopped on the outskirts of the city.

"We heard the sound of guns," the Telegraph's correspondent says, "and were told by officers that the training school was being bombarded. Women told terrible stories of fighting and bloodshed throughout Saturday and Sunday. They declared that entire lines of men were mown down by machine guns.

Truth Hard to Obtain.

"At the station there was not a single intelligent person and I could only gather vague rumors of continuous fighting, of houses destroyed by artillery and of thousands killed and wounded. The streets near the station were lined with people listening to the battle, but it was said that the streets beyond were empty. As the train left the station the sound of a volley came from somewhere near the central postoffice. The only passenger who boarded the train at Moscow was a soldier, whose information was confused and fragmentary. He said that the foreigners were helping the government troops."

Thereafter until the train reached Petrograd only contradictory rumors were heard. Arriving in the city the correspondent found the residents guarding the doors and gateways to the dwellings. He concluded: "I then plunged into a flood of rumors, party wranglings and furious recriminations. Outside Petrograd it is more easy to believe in Russia. Here the atmosphere of catastrophe is stifling."

SUMMARY OF THE DAY'S WAR NEWS

Russian people want a leader who will maintain authority and order.

From Lake Garda to the Adriatic sea, over the Asiago plateau and down the Piave valley, the Italians are holding the Austro-Germans in check. Nowhere has the Italian line been penetrated for important gains, although the enemy pressuer is very strong. Teutonic attacks have been repulsed with heavy losses everywhere in the mountainous region, except around Cismon in the Sugana valley northeast of Asiago. The intense artillery duel continues along the Piave. The invaders have been unable to make further crossings of the river. At the river's mouth the enemy advance has been held up if not stopped completely through the Italian action in opening the floodgates of the Piave and Sile rivers, resulting in the inundation of seventy square miles of terrain. Attempts to cross the river further north have been defeated by the Italians. The Teutonic force which crossed at Zenson is held oon the river's bank by the Italians.

In the other theaters there has been no intensive fighting. A French attempt to cross the Ailette river southwest of Laon, Berlin says, was repulsed. The French reached the northern bank of the stream, but a German counter-attack threw them back to their original, on the southern side.

In Flanders last evening in the Passchendaele area, the British carried out a successful operation, taking more of the valuable ground on the main ridge north of the village. They effected a slight advance as well in the difficult low-lying terrain sloping off to the west. There has been notable artillery activity in the French sector held by the American troops, the German fire causing additional casualties among the Americans from shrapnel and when an American gun was hit by a German shell. The American fire in response has been extremely spirited and it is believed that more than equal punishment was inflicted upon the Germans.

An interesting naval development is in progress in the North sea, where British light naval forces this morning engaged German light cruisers in Helgoland bight. The British admiralty reports the British forces pursuing the German warships, which retired at high speed.

MINIATURE FLEETS SOON TO DO BATTLE

Koritza, Albania, Oct. 10.—(Staff Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—A naval battle between French and German warships is imminent, which, when it occurs, will not be recorded in any official communique, though it will be in a way, one of the most unique naval engagements of the war.

Lake Ochrida is a large body of fresh water lying a few miles north of here, at the point where Albania, Serbia and Macedonia touch. It is forty miles long and twenty miles across, with towering mountains running around it. The north end of the lake is held by the Germans, and the south end by the entente allies. It has been the scene of the latest hard fighting, when the entente troops made a forward drive of thirty miles from Pagrodak, at the south end, to Padhoja far up toward the north sea.

With the Germans holding the north end of the lake, they did not confine their operations to the land. A miniature flotilla soon made its appearance with oil-burning launches, about fifteen feet long, each mounting one gun forward. This mosquito fleet soon became a real menace, for it darted to the south end of the lake, at night and bombed the small villages along the south shore, held by the French, Russians and Serbs. The headquarters of General Taranahoff, of the Russian division, operating with General Sarrail, was in one of these villages.

The French soon took steps to counteract this menace. A small steel craft, thirty feet long, was brought overland from the French fleet at Saloniki. This mounted two guns, one forward and one aft. With it came a commander and a crew of French sailors. This was soon followed by a second thirty-foot boat mounting two guns, with its equipment of officer and crew.

Thus two miniature fleets find themselves face to face on Lake Ochrida, with a battle not far off. The French have the advantage of larger ships, carrying more guns, but the Germans have the advantage in number of craft. Their flotilla consisting of six or seven 15-foot boats mounting one gun each.

It seemed strange as we went along a mountain road today, to see the uniforms of French officers and sailors at a point so remote from the sea. They were in a camion on the way to their naval base at the south end of the lake. The commander, Lieutenant Dutoit, stopped for a moment and spoke enthusiastically of his little fleet.

"In bringing the boats from Saloniki," he said, "we took out the engines, so that the hulls weighed only three tons. This made reasonably easy going on the camions. There was no mishap, the first boat is launched, with her engine in place and guns mounted, and the second will soon follow. And then," he added with a laugh, "we'll see who will do the bombarding."

When operations will begin is not certain, but plans are so far advanced that a fight is looked for almost any time now. With such mosquito craft it might be considered a toy battle if it were not for the reality of the warfare, with real naval boats manned by real sailors of the French and German navies, fighting with as much determination as on the deck of 20,000-ton dreadnaughts.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

A trough of low pressure reaches southward over the Missouri valley to Oklahoma, and rain has occurred from Nebraska southward to central Texas. The pressure is high over southeastern districts, and an area of high pressure of considerable magnitude occupies the country from the Rockies westward to the coast. The weather is slightly cooler than the normal in the Atlantic and east gulf states, and also in the plateau region, but between the eastern slope and the Mississippi river temperatures are above the seasonal average.

STOCK MARKET HAS A DAY OF UNCERTAINTY

Conditions Erratic That Rule Nominal Trading for Half Day.

New York, Nov. 17.—Uncertain conditions ruled during today's very nominal trading in stocks. Heaviness of rails and utilities offset better tendencies among industrials and specialties. The few noteworthy features of strength includer, shippings, motors and active equipments. United States Steel and allied shares were little more than steady. The closing was irregular. Sales approximated 175,000 shares.

Moderate buying advanced leading stocks from fractions to a point at the outset of today's dealings, a few issues scoring even larger gains. Rails were variable. Further readjustments of the Liberty Bonds was noted, the 4s making a new low at 98.60 and the 31-2s rising to 99.22.

Rufus Flory, of the time department of the General Electric works, is still quite ill at his home on South Wayne avenue, though there is a noticeable improvement today. He has been off duty over a week.

THE MARKETS

CITY MARKETS ARE CROWDED SATURDAY

Hay Continues Its Rapid Climb—Eleven Loads of New Corn Received.

The city street markets were lined with an unusually large crowd Saturday. Every small stall was filled and trade was brisk. Every variety of fall produce could be obtained and at fair prices, considering the late season. Butter and eggs were still held at the high price of the last few weeks.

Saturday was one of the biggest days of the season at the city scales. Seventeen loads of hay reached the market and the top price jumped to $24.50 a ton. Nine loads of hay were baled and were shipped to the army cantonments, who have contracted for large amounts of baled hay throughout the country. New corn enjoyed its biggest day. Eleven loads reached the market and prices ranging from $1 to $1.05 a bushel were paid. Old corn was again on the absent list. Five loads of oats brought 60c and 63c a bushel.
